

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

PAINTINGS, DRAWINGS, ENGRAVINGS, &c.

ON SALE AT VERY REDUCED PRICES.

CANALETTI.—A very fine ORIGINAL PAINTING of the Grand Canal, Venice, by this celebrated painter, in excellent preservation, size 3 ft. 8 in. by 20 in. in gold frame, £25.

CANALETTI.—ANOTHER PAINTING, of the same subject and size, by Canaletti, equally fine, in gold frame, being the companion, £25.

The above two beautiful paintings formerly belonged to the late ALDERMAN LUCAS, who purchased them on the recommendation of the late SIR DAVID WILKIE, R.A. To any persons desirous of fine specimens of so famous a painter as CANALETTI, the present is a most favourable opportunity, both as to quality and lowness of price, for acquiring them.

RUSSELL AND OPIE.—A FINE large original PAINTING, by these Eminent Artists; subject, Cupid, Flora, Ceres, and Esculapius, honouring the Bust of Linnaeus, size 5 ft. 3 in. by 3 feet 10 in. in gold frame, £12 12s

This fine painting is in excellent preservation, and is well suited for a Floricultural Society or Public Institution.

It was engraved for Dr. Thornton's grand Botanical Work, entitled, "Illustrations of Linnaeus;" the engraving will accompany the picture.

YARNOLD.—Folkestone, a Coast Scene with a View of the Town of Old Folkestone, &c. size 21 in. by 13, in gold frame, £7. 10s

A very beautiful original coloured Drawing, by this eminent artist.

MAAS.—A Dutch Interior, Domestic Felicity, a fine original painting by this famous Dutch painter, size 26 in. by 21, in an ornamental gold frame, £5. 10s

CAWSE.—Jack Cade and his Rabble, condemning the Clerk at Chatham, a fine original painting by this clever artist, size 35 in. by 27, in a richly ornamental gilt frame, £10. 10s

This clever painting illustrates the well-known scene in Shakespeare's Henry VI. pt. 2.

Turner's Dover and Hastings, two large and splendid engravings by Willmore and Wallis, from the celebrated pictures by J. M. W. Turner, R.A., size 26 in. by 20, BRILLIANT INDIA PROOFS BEFORE LETTERS, price £6. 10s (pub. at £12. 12s)

These are a pair of remarkably beautiful and effective engravings, in very choice state, after two of the finest paintings ever executed by the great artist, Turner.

Turner's Ancient and Modern Italy, two large and splendid engravings after the celebrated paintings by J. M. W. Turner, engraved by Miller and Willmore, 28 by 20 inches, OPEN LETTER PROOFS, £3. 10s (pub. at £12. 12s)

Two of the grandest and most interesting productions of the unrivalled Turner.

LANDSEER'S (Sir E.) A Distinguished Member of the Humane Society (a Newfoundland Dog), finely engraved by T. LANDSEER, size 27 by 22 inches, £1. 16s (pub. at £5. 5s)

LANDSEER'S (Sir E.) The Retriever, engraved by C. G. LEWIS, size 27 by 22 inches, £2. 2s (pub. at £5. 5s)

Greenwich Pensioners receiving intelligence of the BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR, painted and engraved by JOHN BURNET, size 31 by 21 inches, ARTIST'S PROOF ON INDIA PAPER, Signed by the painter, VERY SCARCE, £2. 12s

This beautiful engraving was intended as a companion to SIR D. WILKIE'S CHARLES PENSIONERS.

LANDSEER'S (Sir E.) Windsor Castle in the Present Time, with full-length Portraits of her Majesty, Prince Albert just returned from Shooting, and one of the Princesses, engraved by Atkinson, size 31 by 27 inches, £2. 2s

A very splendid and interesting national engraving.

DRAWING BY SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.—A very beautiful and spirited equestrian portrait of Jeffrey Lord Amherst, executed in water colours, size 11 by 9 inches, in massive gold frame, glazed, £7. 7s

This spirited drawing is presumed to be from the hand of Sir Joshua Reynolds. It is a facsimile of the original large oil painting, and is engraved in the "Graphic Works of Reynolds."

DRAWING BY CHISHOLM.—Scene from Scott's Antiquary; Oldbuck, Edie Ochiltree, and others, at Elspeth's Hut, a large and MOST BEAUTIFULLY EXECUTED WATER-COLOUR DRAWING, size 19 by 11½ inches, in gilt frame, £5. 5s

This is a remarkably fine and well executed drawing, and was afterwards engraved for Scott's "Antiquary."

LANDSEER'S (Sir E.) The Return from the Warren, engraved by T. Landseer, 22 by 17½ inches, India proof, framed in an imitation oak frame, £1. 18s

This very beautiful composition represents a youth (the Hon. Mr. Ponsonby) on a Pony, attended by his Dogs.

LANDSEER'S (Sir E.) The Chief's Return from Deer Stalking, Loch Laggan Scenery, engraved by I. J. Willmore, A.R.A. 38 by 11½ inches, India proof, a very choice impression, in gold frame, £5. 10s

Going with the Stream, and Going against the Stream, painted by J. J. Jenkins, engraved by Robinson, size 31 by 24 inches, India proofs before letters, the pair beautifully framed in ornamental imitation oak frames, £5. 5s.

Two charming engravings. The subject is a pair of Lovers in their Boat on a continental river; in Going with the Stream everything betokens smiles and sunshine, but Going against the Stream tells of frowns and clouds.

The Waterloo Banquet at Apsley House, painted by Salter, engraved in line by Greatbach, size 28 by 46 inches, original impression, framed in an emblematic imitation oak carved frame, £7. 10s

This very large and magnificent engraving introduces upwards of 70 of the Heroes of Waterloo, who sat for their Portraits expressly for this picture. With a Key to the Portraits.

The Lock, painted by Constable, R.A. engraved by Lucas, size 27 by 20 inches, original impression, in gold frame, £2. 5s

A large and splendid composition, full of the beauties peculiar to this gifted painter.

The Grand Canal, Venice, drawn by J. D. Harding, engraved by D. Lucas, size 26 by 20 inches, original impression, in gold frame, £2. 5s

A most beautiful and highly finished engraving.

MARTIN (John, the Historical Painter) Drawing in Colours, Portrait of a Lady, framed, with plate glass, a most beautiful sketchy subject, £1. 10s

MARTIN (John) Drawing in Colours, The Gleaner, a pleasing subject well treated, signed J. Martin, July, 1840, in gold frame, £2. 15s

MARTIN (John) Drawing in Bistre, a highly finished Design for a Waterloo and Wellington Triumphant Arch, signed J. Martin, 1820, in gold frame, £1. 15s

MARTIN (John) Belshazzar's Feast, the original outline from which Martin made his first grand and much admired Painting, beautifully mounted in gold frame, £2. 2s

The painting was unfortunately destroyed by a Railway Accident some months since.

MARTIN (John) Engraving, Destruction of Nineveh, the artist's own reserved proof, the first impression from the large plate, carefully mounted in a gold frame, £7. 10s

The above are relics from this celebrated artist's studio.

[JULY, 1855.]

SONG IN DISPRAISE OF WOMEN.

From a Manuscript, time of King Henry VII.

THESE wemen all,
Both great and* small,
They wander to and fro;
Nowe here, now there,
They wot not where,
But J will not say so!

They rune, they range,
Theyr myndes do change,
They mak theyr frends y^r foe;
At louers trewe,
Gidy days and newe,
But J will not say so!

Wythin their brest,
Theyr loue doth rest,
Who lyst to pue shall know;
For all ther boot,
All day almost,
But J will not say so!

Now whot, now colde
Ther ys no holde,
But as the wynd doth blowe;
When all is done,
Change like the moon,
But J will not say so!

They loue, they leyus,
They will deceiue,
As dyce that meyn do throwe;
Who wysht them myche,
Shall neuer be ryche,
But J will not say so!

Gyue thys, gyue that,
All thyngs they lacke,
And all you may bestowe;
Oncs ought of syghte,
Farewell, good nyght,
But J will not say so!

Thus one and other,
Takyth after the mother,
As cookes by kynd do crowe;
My song ys endyd,
The best maye be amended,
But J will not say so!

The Harl. MS. 7578, has a version of this ballad, which Ritson has printed, see Ancient Songs, 1790, p. 134.

* The word 'and' is indicated by an imperfectly formed "and per se," shewing the then use of that character.
VOL. V.

ROYAL THEATRICALS AT HAMPTON COURT.

INDUCED by the beauty and cheapness of the late Mr. John Kemble Chapman's History of Theatrical Entertainments at Court, more particularly those performed before Her Majesty at Windsor Castle, in 1848-9, I became a purchaser, and found in it much to approve and commend. Considerable research is embodied in its well printed pages, and the numerous engravings with which it is embellished are entitled to the highest praise: it is altogether a pleasingly interesting volume.

During the reigns of Elizabeth, James the First, and Charles the First, there were Court representations of Theatrical performances at Hampton Court; but at p. 31, it is stated "William the Third had no taste for the drama, nor have we any record of dramatic entertainments at Court until four plays were performed at St. James's before Queen Anne in 1704. That George the First, who spoke no English, and was past the learning of it, early in 1718, ordered the Great Hall at Hampton Court Palace to be fitted up as a theatre, where plays were to have been acted twice a week during the summer season, by way of propitiating public opinion in the encouragement of the drama; but the month of September was more than half passed before the arrangements were completed, and seven plays were all that were represented before the Court returned to London."

Colley Cibber, who in his Apology states many interesting particulars of these performances, notices that subsequently but one play was given at Hampton Court by King George the Second, for the entertainment of the Duke of Lorraine; and from that period till the present reign, it is certain no theatrical representations have graced the festivities of the Royal Court of England.

These observations are prelude to the purport of an unpublished letter by the late WILLIAM CAPON, formerly a scene painter of no mean notoriety at Drury Lane and Covent Garden Theatres. Written in 1821, it appears to have reference to some Dutch print of a theatrical performance in William the Third's reign, most probably in Holland, but supposed to have been a graphic illustration in his time of the Royal Theatre at Hampton Court. It commences:—

"In the summer of 1783, I was for the first time at Hampton Court Palace. In the great Hall built by Cardinal Wolsey, there was then remaining a Theatre, with some scenery, an orchestra, etc., which was called King William the Third's Theatre. The whole was very dirty and shabby in appearance, and to the best of my recollection, might have been about eighteen or twenty feet wide from the first wing on the one side, to the opposite wing on the other, and about the same in depth from the front of the stage to the last scene at the back. There were, I think, four pairs of wings, some scenes on rollers, and hanging borders, but much torn, and very dirty.

"The painted decorations which were exposed to the eye, were to the best of my recollection very like to those shewn in this print; they were at least of a similar style of architecture.

"The stage was raised about four or five feet above the floor of the hall. In this print, the Lion shewn on the breast of the guardsman on the left hand, are the arms of Holland; on the breast of the one, on the right, are the arms of Zealand; but whether these are intended to show some of King William's Dutch body-guard, I know not. We may suppose some dramatic representation is proceeding by the appearance of the persons on the stage, but there is a vastness of size of the whole when compared with the human figures, which does not correspond with the size of the theatre which I remember in the hall of Hampton Court Palace; and reckoning the human figures as shewn in the print, at six feet, the wings (if wings they are intended to represent,) are about eighteen feet high from the feet of the first men on each side, to the top of the cornice, from the crown moulding, of which the arched borders vault; again, the disposition of each side is so different to the usual arrangement of a theatre, that I am at a loss to conclude what the artist has really intended to shew. If each side is one continued plane standing parallel to the other, as far as to the distant range of figures, which evidently are purposely in shadow in order to throw a strong light on the next distant plane, which is at a right angle with the sides, this disposition is quite contrary to all usuality of practice in stage arrangement, and is not a picture so dissected as is convenient to the exits and entrances of the performers, and required by the business of the stage, for here could be no entrance but from behind, otherwise than at the doors in the front on each side; nor was the disposition of the stage at Hampton Court in the manner here shewn,—the wings there in the usual manner stood parallel to the ground line, and to each other, to facilitate the entrances and exits of the performers from behind the scenes.

"In this very extraordinary and scarce print, there have been three plates employed to produce its present appearance. That which shews the stage to the foot of the figures standing on it, is of superior merit to the other representing a Proscenium vaulting over with a semi-elliptical arch; an orchestra, and pit and side boxes. By the inscription at the bottom, it was published at Amsterdam. The publisher's name appears, but not those of the artists, or date.

"The verses in Low Dutch at the foot of the print, are evidently from the marks, worked from a third plate.

"Colley Cibber in his Apology particularly describes the effects produced by an alteration that was made in Vanbrugh's theatre in the Haymarket, subsequently the Italian Opera House, shortly after it had been built in 1706,—the throwing an arch from wall to wall, over the front of the stage.

"There seems in this view taken altogether some such similarity as might induce a belief this print may possibly represent that theatre with the alterations mentioned by Cibber; and the shape of the orchestra is really very like to the brick foundations discovered by me, after the destruction of that theatre in June, 1789, when and during the following winter I made most accurate measurements and plans of the whole ruins, and perspective views, particularly from the north end, of its appearance after the fire.* I then saw distinctly former foundations of walls, which had been by the pit flooring wholly concealed from observation.

STERNE'S LE FEVRE.

THE following Memorandum from a Manuscript by the late Mr. Halpin of Portarlington, Queen's County, Ireland; in the possession of Dr. Hanlon, of that town, may possibly interest the readers of Current Notes.

The first master of the French school, at Portarlington, was Mr. Le Fevre, who kept boarders, a most worthy character, a friend and correspondent of Dr. Henry Maude, bishop of Meath, the original founder and promoter of the Protestant Charter Schools. From Le Fevre's school others were established, particularly for infant children, so that the town of Portarlington, for more than half a century has been celebrated for its schools, there being at present [1811] six reputable seminaries for the instruction of the youth of both sexes; three for males, and three for females, which conjointly contain three hundred children.

Le Fevre the protomaster's son bore a commission in the army, and was the identical Le Fevre of whom Sterne in his Tristram Shandy has drawn so good a picture.

COUNTESS MELBOURNE'S LINES ON A BED.

MANY years since, in my mother's folio Common Place book, I remember some "Lines on a Bed," attributed at the time to the Countess Melbourne; what they were I have long since forgotten; they were very popular, and most of my acquaintances remember something, or pretend they do, yet their recollections are nothing. Can any reader of Current Notes kindly refresh my memory's dream of what I once thought very pleasing?

Bath, July 6.

EUPHEMIA.

The lines referred to are probably the once well known charade, written by the Countess so early as 1790, if not before.

Form'd long ago, yet made to day,
'Tis most employ'd while others sleep;
What few are known to give away,
Yet none can e'er desire to keep.

THE ASSUANLEE CUP.

COLLECTORS of rarities regard with particular attention the Cups or vessels which have been in the olden day owned by distinguished individuals, or have derived a special interest from their association with some memorable event. In this respect there are few can vie with the silver Cup now in the possession of Mrs. Alexander Gordon, only surviving child of the late Sir Ernest Gordon of Park and Cobairdy, and the history of its acquirement by Sir Ernest's father, is equally bordering on romance, with the manner in which it is said to have been originally obtained.

Mr. Jervise in his recently published History and Traditions of the Land of the Lindsays, has entered fully into the history of the transactions which in the reign of James the Second led to the rebellion of the adherents of Douglas and Crawford, caused by the ruthless act of that monarch stabbing Douglas to the heart, while under an invitation to supper in the Castle of Stirling, on the evening of Feb. 13, 1452; the particulars are thus related:—

Douglas went thither on the faith of a safe-conduct under the Great Seal. After supper, His Majesty led Douglas to a side apartment, and remonstrating with him on his lawless intrigue, urged him to break the covenant which he then held with Crawford and Ross, with this demand Douglas, though unarmed and in the midst of foes, determinedly refused to comply, and the King then exclaiming with an oath—If you will not break this league, I shall!—struck him to the heart with a dagger. Sir Patriek Gray and others, who were secreted near the fatal chamber, then rushed on the Earl and finished this cold blooded act of royalty by throwing the carcass out at the window into the palace garden, which aperture has since been called "the Douglas window." This murder was the signal for open rebellion on the part of Earl Douglas's adherents—his brothers instigated by indignation and horror, proclaimed the King a liar and traitor at the gates of his palace, dragged ignominiously through the streets of Stirling at the tail of a horse, the Earl's safe-conduct, and afterwards set the town on fire.

The battle of Brechin that followed, was fought at the Haercain, about two miles north-east of the city, on May 18, 1452, when the Earl's party, from circumstances detailed by the historian, were discomfited, and one of the royalists, a son of Donald, the Thane of Cawdor, becoming intermingled with the routed rebels, and unable to extricate himself, went onward with them to Finhaven Castle, where, while quaffing "the blood red wine," the Earl and his followers were aroused by an alarm of the advance of the king's forces under Huntley, and in the confusion consequent on preparing for defence, Calder had opportunity to carry off the silver drinking cup, which on his returning, he presented to his chief as evidence of his having bearded "the Tiger" in his den, and as a reward received an augmentation to his patrimony of Assuanlee, or favours of a like kind.

There are doubts as to Calder's braggart fame; personally he appears to have previously evinced so little courage, that he had been branded and stigmatised as a coward, and according to another account it is intimated, that he had stolen in disguise to the Earl's camp as a spy, yet all agree, that—

A silver cup he from the table bore.

However obtained, the cup remained in the Assuanlee family till about the middle of the last century, when, as related by Mr. Jervise, the following incident occurred.

Some years after the 'forty-five,' a party of gentlemen, Jacobites, and all more or less under the ban of Government, ventured to hold a meeting at a small hostelry in Morayshire, between Elgin and Forres. In the course of their sederunt, one of their number, Gordon of Cobairdy, rose up to mend the fire, and in doing so saw something at the bottom of the peat-bunker, or box for holding the peats, which seemed to glitter. He fished the object out, and found that it was a large and handsome old cup, but flattened. On enquiry it turned out, this was the celebrated Cup of Assuanlee, that had been pledged in security for a debt to the inn-keeper, by the

Laird, a drinking spendthrift. Cobairdy, a man of considerable taste, and a collector of rarities, never lost sight of the cup, till opportunity offered when he got it into his possession, though he and his family had to pay more than one sum of money which had been raised by Assuanlee on the security of his little-cared-for heirloom. Cobairdy had it perfectly restored to shape, and on the top or cover had the figure placed, the crest of his family, Gordon of Cobairdy. It has been erroneously stated the arms of the Earl of Crawford were upon it, but there are no arms.—On the lid, in characters apparently of the seventeenth century, is the following inscription

TITUBANTEM FIRMAVIT HUNTLEIUS,
BREICHEN, MAII 20 (or 28) 1453.

Exclusive of the figure, the Gordon crest, the Cup measures in height about fifteen inches, and holds a Scottish pint and two gills.

The woodcut is from a drawing kindly communicated by Lord Lindsay.

INGLEDÉW.—Can any reader of Current Notes give an account of the family or birth-place of Thomas Ingledew, a clerk of the diocese of York, who in 1461 founded two Fellowships in Magdalen College, Oxford? Newcastle-upon-Tyne. ANGELTHEON.

BOCCACCIO AND CHAUCER.

JOHN HORNE TOOKE's reprint copy of the Giunta edition of Il Decameron, printed at Florence in 1527, 4to., has many interesting manuscript philological notes, among which the following may not be uninteresting to the readers of Current Notes.

At the end of the Prohemio—piacevoli, sollazzevoli—vole, put at the end, answers to our ful, and has sometimes, probably been corrupted to ble.

Giornata III. Don Felice. The Miller's Tale in Chaucer seems in part taken from this story. Tyrwhitt observes—"I have not been able to discover whence the story of the Miller's Tale is taken; so that for the present I must give Chaucer credit for it as his own invention, though, in general, he appears to have built his Tales both serious and comic upon stories which he found ready made. The great difference is, that in his serious pieces, he often follows his author with the servility of a mere translator, and in consequence his narrative is jèjune and constrained; whereas, in the comic, he is generally satisfied with borrowing a slight hint of his subject, which he varies, enlarges, and embellishes at pleasure, and gives the whole, the air and colour of an original."

Giornata VII. Lidia moglie di Nicostrato ama Pirro. The latter part of this story has been adopted by Chaucer, as the latter portion of his Merchant's Tale.

Giornata X. Madonna Dianora, a Casa Messere Ansaldo (chez Mons. Ansaldo) a common phrase in Italian, thus leaving out the sign of relation between Ansaldo and his house, I have not observed this particular omission in any other language. J. H.

FRANKLIN'S NATIONALITY OF CHARACTER.

Eighty years since the Ministry of that day in deference to the King's wishes, declared America in rebellion, and the sanguinary battle of Bunker's Hill followed in pursuance of orders to which the people of England were directly opposed. Strahan, the King's Printer, was then in Parliament, and was previously on terms of close intimacy with Dr. Franklin, but the latter closed that connection by the following characteristic and manly avowal.

Philadelphia, July 5, 1775.

Mr. Strahan,—You are a member of Parliament, and of that Majority which has doomed my Country to Destruction. You have begun to burn our Towns, and murder our People.—Look upon your hands!—They are stained with the blood of your Relations!—You and I were long Friends:—You are now my Enemy, and

I am yours,

B. FRANKLIN.

The autograph original was sold at Messrs. Puttick and Simpson's on the 20th inst., for thirty-nine shillings.

No man in the crowd of life is remarked, till he has found some sort of pedestal on which he can stand and be seen.—Jules Junin.

SPES ET FORTUNA VALETE!

As some interest appears to attach to the Latin couplet which forms the subject of several communications in the last number of Current Notes, I transcribe some lines from Wolters' edition of Petronius, Amst., 1700, containing a somewhat similar couplet, the sentiment of which is perhaps more truthful in its application, than that which Le Sage and Lord Brougham have given to the former. A Farewell to Hope and Fortune is vainly said even by those who were

— want to sport

In troubled waters, but now sleep in port.

C. Petronii Hilari Pisaurensis Epigramma.

Diis manibus Petronii Antigenidis.

Tu, pede qui stricto vadis presenta, Viator,
Siste, rogo, titulumque meum ne spreveris oro.
Bis quinos annos, mensesque duos, duo soles
In superis feci, tenere nutritus, amatus:
Dogmata Pythagoræ sensi, studiumque sophorum
Et libros legi—legi pia carmina Homeri,
Sive quot Euclides abaco præscripta tulisset.
Delicias habui pariter lunæque procaces.
Hæc Hilarius mihi contulerat pater ipse patronus
Si non infelix contraria fata habuisset.
Nunc vero infernas sedes Acherontis ad undas,
Tetraque Tartarei per sidera tendo profundis.
Effugi tumidam vitam; spes, forma, valet;
Nil mihi vobiscum est; alios deludite quæso:
Hæc domus æterna est: hic sum situs, hic ero semper.

THE HAVEN OF ETERNITY.

THE Brechin correspondent, who, in Current Notes, p. 42, supplied the Greek epitaph, copied from a monument at Basle, to the memory of a clergyman, 1564, observes, "it reminds us as much of the Apostle Paul, as of the Greek epigrammatist;" it rather reminds me of the impostor Mahomet; for who, but one of his followers, would knowingly have written such a verse as this?

Ὁὐρανίους θεοὺς μόνους ἐνέστιν ἔρως.

The former line is not without fault. The blessed who rest in the Lord, cannot be correctly said to take a long farewell of faith, for with them faith is realized. The original verse should have remained unaltered; and the pentameter, instead of inspiring a sensual idea, should have conveyed a spiritual one.

Ἑλπίς καὶ σὲ Τύχῃ μίγα χείρετε τὸν λυμέν' εὖρον.
Ἐν μακάρων νήσοις νῦν ἀνάπασιν ἔχω.

Thus both lines are consistent and connected, and free from the objectionable idea—

By Hope beguiled, by wavering Fortune too,
At last I bid a long farewell to you.
I've gained the Port. Securely now I rest
In everlasting regions with the blessed.

OVER DOOR INSCRIPTIONS.

THE inscription imperfectly quoted, Current Notes, p. 43, was not over the entrance of Stirling Castle, and consequently will be sought for there in vain, but it is on 'Mar's Work,' a building at the head of the Broad Street in Stirling, begun by the Regent Earl of Mar, but now a ruin. The inscription is understood as a defiance to the generally expressed popular discontent, on his pulling down Cambuskenneth abbey, for the stone and building materials for his palace. The inscription in full is thus :—

ESSPY SPEIK FVRTH AND SPAIR NOCHT.
CONSIDDER VEIL I CAIR NOCHT.

THE MOIR I STAND ON OPEN HICHT
MY FAVLTS MOIR SVBIECT AR TO SICHT.

I PRAY AL LUKARIS ON THIS LVGING
VITH GENTLE E TO GIF THAIR IVGING.

Petergate, York, July 5.

YOUR Correspondent, Current Notes, p. 43, could not possibly have seen the inscription said to be over one of the doors of Stirling Castle, but must have copied them from some old book, as there are no such mottoes on the Castle of Stirling, at least so far as I am aware. These inscriptions are in truth from an old ruinous building in the town of Stirling, called Mar's Work, a kittle to the right of the old kirk. The stones of which the house was built are said to have been brought from the neighbouring priory of Cambuskenneth; and the front wall is decorated with several pieces of well executed sculpture, particularly the royal arms of Scotland. There are also the arms of the founder, the Regent Mar, tutor or guardian of king James the Sixth; and of his Lady, who was of the Tullybardine family.

The three couplets which form the inscription, are on three distinct parts of the building, and as far as I could decypher them in 1849, are as I now send, but the originals are so much obliterated by the weather, that every orthographical particular cannot be vouched for, nor have they, I believe, been in a much better state for the last half century or more. Pennant, in his Second Tour in Scotland, p. 225, has also printed the last couplet incorrectly.

THE MOIR I STANDE ON OPPIN HITHT
MY FAVLTS MOIR SVBIECT ARE TO SITHT.

I PRAIT AL LVKARIS ON THIS BIGN
WI GENTRIL EIE TO MARK THAIR LIGIN.

ESSPY SPEIK FVRTH I SAIR NOTHT
CONSIDIR WEIL I SPEIR NOTHT.

Over door inscriptions are frequent on the old castles in Scotland. The castle of Vayne, or the old manor house of Ferne, situated on the north bank of the Noran, a stream remarkable for its clearness and the excellence of its trout; was built by one of the Lindseys, and afterwards repaired by Robert Carnegie, third

Earl of Southesk, who married the Lady Anne, eldest daughter of William, the second Duke of Hamilton. Many of Earl Robert's repairs, notwithstanding the castle is now a ruin, are visible about the place, and the doors and windows were formerly ornamented with Horatian and other maxims. Three have been moved from the castle, and placed in various parts of the walls of the adjoining farm-steading. One more elegant than the rest, bears an Earl's coronet, and other sculpture in high-relief, and the Earl's initials in monogram, as here represented—

Along the base line below the monogram, is the following inscription, supposed to have some reference to the 'merry' disposition of his Countess, whose history appears at some length in Grammont's Memoirs.

DISCE MEO EXEMPLE FORMOSIS POSSE CARERE.

On another is this quaint observation—

NON SI MALE NVNC ET SIC ERAT* ANNO DOM. 1678.

The Castle of Vayne is the property of the Hon. William M. Maule of Ferne and Maulesden, brother to the Lord Panmure, and heir presumptive to that title and great estate. Mr. Maule has done much of late to stay Time's devastating hand in despoiling this picturesque ruin, by removing such portions as were likely to fall and injure the rest, and by partial restorations, adding to its general effect and preservation.

OVER a door in the court-yard of the Castle of Mains near Dundee, built by Sir William Graham, great-grandfather of the celebrated Viscount Dundee, who fell at Killcrankie; is this inscription.

PATRIÆ ET POSTERIS. GRATIS ET AMICIS. 1582.

Over the inside of the doorway of Queen Margaret's bower in Linlithgow Palace, these lines of Sir Walter Scott's have been recently insculped—

I. R.

His own Queen Margaret,
Who in Lithgow bower,
All lonely sat,
And wept the weary hour.

* The line in Horace—Non si malè nunc et olim sit erit, has been thus translated—

The wretch of to-day may be happy to-morrow.

UPON a wall in the old town of Linlithgow, under an effigy of St. Michael, to whom the chapel was inscribed in old times.

SAINT MICHAEL IS KINDE TO STRANGERS.

ON demolishing in or about 1808, an old waulk or fulling-mill near the abbey of Cupar Angus, in Forfarshire, the following quaint inscription was discovered on a stone over the door; the last line being expressed by carved representations of the articles named.

ANDREW CHAPMAN AND MARG'ET TOD,
[The waulkmill shears, and the pressin' brod.]

SCHOLA SALERNITANA.

J. A. P., of Downpatrick, who enquires who was the author of the hexameter—will find it in the Schola Salernitana, a book of medical aphorisms, in Leonine verses, compiled, if not by Constantine the founder, at least by one of the Doctors of the once famous medical school at Salerno, about the middle of the eleventh century, and dedicated to King Edward the Confessor. See Muratori Antiquitates, tom. iii., dissert. xl., pp. 686, et seqq. It is not confined to hexameters; for instance,

Cur morietur homo cui Salvia crescit in horto?

Ut sis nocte levis, sit tibi cœna brevis.

The Schola Salernitana was first printed in 1480, with a commentary written by Arnoldus Villenovanus, who was living early in the fourteenth century.

Hawkshead, July 4.

D. B. H.

THE Leonine hexameter respecting which your correspondent J. A. P. enquires, is the first line of the Thirty-eighth chapter of the Schola Salernitana, "De Salvia;" the following passage being wholly in its praise.

*Cur morietur homo cui Salvia crescit in horto?
Contra vim mortis non est medicamen in hortis.
Salvia confortat nervos, manumque tremorem
Tollit, et ejus ope febris acuta fugit.
Salvia, castoreum, lavendula, primula veris,
Nasturt., Athanas., hæc sanant paralytica membra.
Salvia salvatrix naturæ conciliatrix.*

Salerno in the south of Italy, was in 794, made by Pope Boniface VII., the metropolis of the whole district, and its medical school in the eleventh and twelfth centuries obtained great celebrity, so much so, that it was afterwards constituted a university for granting degrees and licences in medicine. The Schola Salernitana, a Latin poem, consists of hygienic and medical regulations for preserving and restoring health, written in hexameter verses, many of which are leonine, as in the above extract, the middle and terminal words in the first two, and the last lines, rhyme with each other.

The poem, under the authority of the College of Salerno is inscribed to the King of England, as the first line expresses:—

but there are reasons for believing the real author to have been Johannes de Mediolano, a celebrated poet and physician; and this dedication to "the King of England," suggests some points of interesting notice.

Prior to the Norman conquest of England, a body of Norman knights, having been to perform worship at the Holy Sepulchre, were on their return from Jerusalem, driven into Salerno at a time when Guimarus, Prince of Salerno, required aid against a Saracenic invasion. The Normans assisted the Prince, and the invaders were repelled into Sicily; Guimarus duly appreciating their valour, proffered them great inducements to remain in his dominions, but these were of no avail to warriors then on their way homeward. The Prince then sent ambassadors to Normandy, to propose large bounties, high dignities, and every inducement that a rich and fertile country could offer to as many as would settle in his realm. About three hundred of the flower of the Norman nobility were thus induced to settle in his kingdom, when they colonised a part of Apulia and Calabria, and successfully defended the country against the invasions of the Moors. These events occurred about the time of the Norman invasion of England, and sufficiently explain the existence of an intercourse between the Salernians and the English at this period.

William the Norman, by his will left the kingdom of England to his second son Rufus, and to his eldest son Robert, the Dukedom of Normandy. The latter accompanied Godfrey of Bulloine as a crusader to the Holy Land, and was present at the capture of Jerusalem. While there he received tidings of the death of his brother Rufus, slain by the arrow of Sir Walter Tyrrell, August 2, 1100; and leaving Palestine to succeed him, hastened to visit his countrymen at Salerno, and to obtain advice on the treatment of a wound received from a poisoned arrow, during the siege of Jerusalem, which no adopted means had sufficed to heal. Even at Salerno, the proposed cure was, that the lurking poison, should be sucked out of the wound, but as this course was supposed to expose another to a fatal risk, he generously refused to prolong his life by these means. However, during his stay in Italy, he became enamoured with Sibylla, the daughter of the Count of Conversana, and whom he married. She is said, to have opportunely while he slept, and unknown to him, sucked the poison from the wound, and happily, without injury to herself effected his recovery; so that with restored health, he was enabled to proceed to England. It was therefore, while in Italy, and the Duke apparently about to assume the English Crown, that the poem was written, and at his request, addressed to himself, as King of England. His younger brother Henry, had however in the mean time, been elected on August 4, and crowned at Westminster on the day following, Sunday August 5, 1100.

The effigy in wood of Robert, Duke of Normandy, with crossed legs, as a leader in the first crusade, is yet extant in Gloucester Cathedral.

The incident of the extracting of the poison from the wound is related with sufficient minuteness of detail, in the Latin preface to the Schola Salernitana, printed at Paris, in 1627, but is, I fear, of a somewhat apocryphal character. A modern physician might question the efficacy of the treatment by mere exhaustion of a poisoned wound so long after the injury had been received; yet later, Queen Eleanor has long been acknowledged the rightful claimant of the honour due to a similar act of generosity, to her own husband, King Edward the First.

Leeds, June 27.

J. D. HEATON, M.D.

The line—

Cur moriatur homo cui Salvia crescit in horto?

or hortis, is quoted from the Schola Salernitana, in Elliot's Castle or Regimen of Health. The reason why a man may die notwithstanding all the virtues of Sage, is assigned in the line which follows, somewhat to this effect, for I do not remember the exact words.

Non sunt in hortis tristis medicamina mortis.

T. R.

Cur moriatur homo cui salvia crescit in horto?

is from the Regimen Sanitatis Salernitanum, Oxford edition, 1830, line, 178. The next line answers the question.

GARRICK CLUB INAUGURATION DINNER.

The following addressed to Robert Clarke, Esq., Theatre Royal Manchester, will doubtless afford some amusement to the readers of Current Notes, as being highly characteristic of that distinguished Comedian, Charles Mathews. The 'delightful day' at the Garrick Club was noticed at the time by an unaccountable omission of the stewards, all reference to the plays or memory of the immortal bard Shakspeare being in their libations wholly forgotten—the players and their patrons seem to have thought but little at the moment of "the sinking drama."

J. F.

London, Feb. 16, 1832.

MY DEAR CLARKE—You and I, thank God! have lived with each other in such a jocose way, that matter of fact people do not always comprehend, and if I were not aware that you are concerned for another, and, therefore a grave man of business when negotiating for him, I really should have thought you only wanted an excuse for saying that you were alive and truly mine. In your hurry you did not think I should speak about my season. Had I received a letter from Mr. Watson for instance, my reply might have been copied from your letter verbatim:—

"Adelphi—We commence our (At Home) season here at Easter, and shall continue open until the 18th of June, or later, if Arnold builds. An alibi, proved, I cannot come!"

The Baronet received the bust safe, and is delighted—"Lay out, Bardolph! and I will thee repay!"

I rejoice at Paganini's success on Mr. Lewis's account. I was not aware by "the Papers," that he had been at Brum. A paragraph has 'gone the round,' as it is termed, that I gave an entertainment to a large party, on Tuesday 7th, but that our festivities were damped by the arrival of the news of Munden's death. I have not, since June last, been at home more than ten days at a time, never had a party since—and dined tete-a-tete with my wife on the 7th, ha! ha!

The joint-stock Cholera Company are trying to spread the Coleraphobia, but I do not think success will follow. Shares are at a discount. If you have not read them, and Dr. Unwin, in the Times of yesterday, and to-day do—it is doubtless filed where you read, yet there are flats who are paniced! It is worthy of the same nation that allowed Johanna Southcott's name to be pronounced with gravity, or Mr. Kean to act Romeo and Hamlet. I do not believe in the existence of real Asiatic cholera in England. We are going to fast, oh! oh! oh! What shall we come to next? Lord Grey proposed it, because Percival asked for it, to clear his conscience of the sin of living on a pension—and the king said, "D— his eyes if he cared whether they fasted or not,"—and so actors lose a night's salary.

The actors alone are deprived of repeat—

The ministers all are paid while they fast.

Mr. Freeman, I think is the gentleman's name who travels with Pag.; he promised me an autograph. Can't you and him between you furnish a letter? Try. Have the goodness to read the following bit to my friend Mr. Lewis, "was there any other article besides a mourning ring, a hammer, and a gridiron in the box he was kind enough to present to me? To whom did they belong? I fear I have been robbed. I put the two latter articles, certainly (and as I thought, the former) into a Mulberry-tree box. On my return I found only the hammer and gridiron, yet nothing else in the house is missed. I made a memorandum too of the name of the donor, knowing how treacherous my memory is, excepting in my profession. I have almost betted it was Powell. I am sidgitted to death about it, and am sick with searching. A suspicion of servants—one of ten years growth, etc., is horrible. If the words of the ring were in Mr. Tummas's memory, the pawnbrokers may elucidate. Great regards to Mrs. Clarke, in which we all join to thee also,

Ever sincerely yours, CHARLES MATHEWS.

P.S. The Duke of Sussex presided yesterday at the Inauguration of the Garrick Club: there are 300 members, who are devoted to an attempt to revive the sinking drama—a delightful day!

SHAKESPEARE.—In Johnson's Academie of Love, describing the Folly of Young Men, and the Fallacie of Women, 1641, 4to. p. 99, it is said—

If it were not for some of the old out-of-date grandames, the young sparkish girls would read in Shakespeare day and night.

CUTLER'S POETRY. In the bye-play between Nerissa and Gratiano, in Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice; the latter in extenuation of the charge of having parted with the betrothal ring, calls it—a paltry ring

That she did give me, whose poesy was
For all the world, like cutler's poetry
Upon a knife.

What was this cutler's poetry here mentioned? Did it allude to a motto used by the cutlers in lieu of their names? Are there any remains of this custom extant?

Needham Market, July 19. LINCOLN GREEN.

To present a knife between lovers is said to be an omen of parting, to counteract which some trifle must be given in exchange; Shakespeare, in reference to this belief, makes Gratiano repeat the motto—Love me and leave me not. Daggers, knives, and swords in Shakespeare's time presented frequent instances of inscriptions and mottoes, in single lines and couplets. A knife of the early part of the sixteenth century, purchased at Bernal's sale, for the Museum at Marlborough House, has, on the back edge, in raised letters—DE LA FIDELITÉ DERIVE MA FORTVNE.

Knives were formerly presented in pairs, in richly embossed or enriched sheaths, either of leather, or metal richly studded, chased or engraved. A pair of such knives, presented by a lady to her lover occurs in the Bernal sale, no. 3394. The blades steel, but with twisted red horn and silver ornamented handles. On the blade of one is engraved.

With wealth and beauty all doe well,
But constant love doth far excoell.

ELIZABETH WALLIS.

And on the blade of the other,—

My love is fix't, I will not range;
I like my choice, I will not change.

ELIZABETH WALLIS.

SPECTATOR.—Joseph Addison of St. James's, and Richard Steele of St. Giles's, gentlemen, assigned on Nov. 10, 1712, to Samuel Buckley, printer and bookseller, a half-share of the copyright of The Spectator, then printing in 6 vol., and engaging to continue the work during that month, so as to form a seventh volume, for the sum of 575*l*. The assignment took place at the Fountain Tavern in the Strand, which then stood on the site of the houses now numbered 105 and 106.

Buckley transferred this assignment to Jacob Tonson, junior, on Oct. 13, 1714, for 500*l*.

The autograph original was purchased on the 20th inst. by Messrs. Boone, of Bond Street, for 7*l*. 15*s*.

DIALECTS.—Professor Adelung asserts there are 3664 known dialects and languages in the world; in America, 1624; in Asia, 937; in Europe, 587; and in Africa, 276; the aggregate of these numbers, however, make but 3424.

INVOCATION OF THE VIRGIN.

EXAMPLES of the Invocation of the Virgin in inscriptions on monumental brasses, are now I believe rarely found, caused doubtless by their being defaced and destroyed as idolatrous by the authorities at the commencement of the Civil War, between Charles the First and the Parliament. The only instance that has fallen under my observation in this county, is at Loughborough, where on the south side of the chancel is a large slab commemorative of a former vicar, whose effigy has long since been erept, but on the margin, on a brass label, so much of the inscription remains—

+ Hic iacet . . . Rector istius Ecclesie qui o . . .
. . . senionem gloriose Virginis Marie. ppiciet. Deus. Amen.

What other instances are known?

UNICORN.—What was the original use of the Unicorn in Heraldry? Was it derived from the East?

BILL NOR BAN! In Dumfries-shire, it is a usual expression with the creditor, when no security has been taken of the debtor, to say "he has neither bill nor ban of him." Formerly, or till within the last sixty or seventy years, it was the practice when a loan was made, for the borrower, to take the lender into his bire, loose a cow's binding (ban), and present it to the latter as a pledge or surety the money would be returned. Has this been a custom in any other district? or can any other instances be adduced of the modes or practices of similar securities in the unlettered conditions of society?

HONOUR AND FAME.—Where are the following lines to be found? I had an impression, they were by Sir Walter Scott, but I cannot find them in his works.

The warrior reposes to combat no more;

On his heart and his blade were engraven the same—

Ne'er draw without honour, ne'er sheathe without fame.

Leicester, July 14.

WILLIAM KELLY.

G.'s notice of the incident of the Swallow being taken by an artificial fly, Current Notes, p. 48; is not a solitary instance; Hofland, in his Angler's Manual, first edition, pp. 355-6, records another from his own experience.

T. R.

ERRATA.—P. 42, col. 2, line 4 from foot, read, Portam is a meagre substitute for Portum, a haven of rest after the storms of life. P. 43, col. 1, line 14 from foot, for transition, read transposition.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT VERY REDUCED PRICES.

Allen's (Commander) Narrative of the Niger Expedition of 1841, with plates and maps, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 10s 6d (pub. at £1. 12s) 1848

The narrative of the Albert's solitary voyage is, to our thinking, one of the most remarkable instances of quiet courage and undiminished constancy of purpose to be found in any book of travels ever written.—Examiner. "Full of instructive and amusing details of African life."—Britannia.

Andrewes (Lancelotti, Episc. Wint.) Preces Privates Quotidianæ, Gr. et Lat., a New Edition very carefully corrected, fcp. 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d (pub. at 9s) 1848

Ancient Tournaments and Armour, 62 FINELY COLOURED ENGRAVINGS of Ancient Arms and Armour, Engines of War, Tournaments, &c. with a History of Chivalry (in German), oblong 4to. bds. £1. 4s Stuttgart, 1842

A well executed work; the plates are finished in silver and colours. Some of the combats are very curious.

Autograph Letters.—SAMMUNG historisch-berühmter Autographen, a collection of nearly 300 Autograph Letters and Papers of celebrated Individuals of all Nations, engraved in facsimile on stone, 8 parts 4to. complete, 15s, or half morocco, 18s Stuttgart, 1846

This is a very interesting collection, including numerous British Worthies, Q. Elizabeth, Mary Stuart, Cromwell, and many literary characters; also individuals of all countries, from the Sixteenth Century to the present day. Each autograph has the merit of being a complete document in itself.

Bancroft's (Hon. G.) History of the United States, from the Discovery of the American Continent, last complete authorised edition; with numerous engraved portraits, views, &c. 6 large vols. 8vo. new cloth, £3. 3s Boston, 1854

This is the last and most complete copyright edition of this valuable work by the American Minister, containing in addition engravings not in other editions.

Barnard's Sketches in Switzerland, Scenes and Incidents of Travel in the Bernese Oberland, &c. 26 large and beautiful tinted lithographic drawings, folio, new hf. morocco, £1. 11s 6d (pub. at £4. 4s) 1843

"The very best delineations of Swiss Scenery, Glaciers, Passes, Travelling Incidents, &c. are given in the large views of Mr. Barnard. They combine in a high degree picturesqueness with truth."—Murray's Handbook to Switzerland.

Barrow's (Jeha) Chivalrous Achievements, AND CORRESPONDENCE OF ADMIRAL SIR SIDNEY SMITH, fine plate of Sir Sidney at the Breach of Acre, and plans, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 8s 6d (pub. at £1. 8s) 1848

"We recommend these volumes to our readers. Sir Sidney Smith's naval exploits, his glorious repulse of Bonaparte at Acre, his services in the subsequent Egyptian campaigns, and, in short, all his public and brilliant career, may be followed out in these pages, with their official data and private correspondence, now for the first time given to the world."—Literary Gazette.

Belts's (G. F. INGLEDEW FELLOWSHIPS AT OXFORD.

Wood's History of Oxford cited by D. B. H. in Current Notes, p. 64, seems to be inaccurate. The Statutes of Magdalen College, Oxford, given by the founder William of Waynflete Bishop of Winchester in 1479, and lately printed by desire of Her Majesty's Commissioners for inquiring into the state of the University of Oxford, from a manuscript in the Bodleian Library, contain the tenor of an ordinance intitled—Compositio Magistri Thomæ Ingeldew—whereby it appears that THOMAS INGLEDEW, not John Ingledew, a Clerk of the Diocese of York gave to Magdalen College, Oxford, a sum of money, not land, to be laid out in the purchase of land for founding two Fellowships, so that the suggestion kindly made by D. B. H., as to obtaining information of Thomas Ingledew's family or birth place fails to be applicable.

The two Fellows were to celebrate for the souls of Thomas Ingledew, and of John Bowye and Eleanor Aske; and it was provided that Thomas Ingledew's cousin, Richard Marshall of University College, should hold one of the Fellowships.

Besides the persons of the name of Ingledew referred to by D. B. H., there are others of the same name resident in some of the northern parishes of the North Riding of Yorkshire.

It is highly probable that Ingledew, Engledue, and Engledow are corruptions of Angeltheow mentioned in the Saxon Chronicle under the years 826 and 755, keeping in view the Saxon character ð, for th.

ARCTIC ARMORIAL DISTINCTION.

To eternise the memory of Captain James Cook, a coat of arms was granted to his family, by patent dated September 3, 1785. Azure, two polar stars or; a sphere on the plane of meridian, North pole elevated, circles of latitude for every ten degrees, and of longitude for every fifteen; showing the Pacific Ocean bearing 60° and 240° west, bounded on one side, by America; and on the other by Asia and New Holland, in honour of the discoveries made by him in that ocean. His track thereon marked by red lines. For his crest, on a wreath of the colours, an arm embowed, vested in the uniform of a Captain of the Royal Navy. In the hand, a Union Jack, on a staff proper; the arm encircled by a wreath of palm and laurel.

Some such distinction appears to be deservedly due to Commander now Captain McClure for his discovery of the North West Passage.

SCHOLA SALERNITANA.

Those who may wish to come to a well founded conclusion concerning the Royal Personage to whom this kind of dedication—was addressed, must consult Tiraboschi, and they will find that he is fully of the opinion expressed by Dr. Heaton. The well known erudite author of Italian literature devoted an entire chapter of his great work,* as the Penny Cyclopædia styles it, on the Schola Salernitana; and has therein discussed at length the point in question. Nor did he forget to weigh the opinion given by Muratori on this subject, but, he did not hesitate to assert, with all the respect due to this last named very learned historian, that he gave his opinion of his own accord without any support of historical ground, observing that as the work was addressed to the King of England, this ought to be a real king, and could not be any other than King Edward the Confessor. Upon this, Tiraboschi, besides not seeing any reasonable basis in this opinion expressed by Muratori, observes that, however great might be the name of that School, a King of England would not have written to it, in order to receive from it sanitary counsels and instructions. He then declares himself for Robert Duke of Normandy, his statement entirely coinciding with that of Dr. Heaton; and finally, to corroborate his opinion, refers to the fact that, in a Manuscript Code, the work is found addressed to King Robert—Salernitanæ Scholæ, versus ad Regem Robertum.† Tiraboschi was of opinion that the Prince being at Salerno on his return from Palestine, the desire of the School to acquire a distinction with the accredited future King of England, was possibly the chief motive that induced the Professors of it to render him honour in this work, and probably he himself made the request. He at the same time declares that almost all the authors, and the most credited men amongst the modern, as Giannone, in his History of the Kingdom of Naples, and Friend, Hist. Med., edit. Venet., p. 147, give the same statement, adding another circumstance, that mentioned by Dr. Heaton, concerning the wounds, which, according to these two historians had degenerated into a perilous fistula, and for the cure of which the Duke of Normandy had applied to the Doctors of the said School: nor is the circumstance of his wife sucking the poison from the wound pretermitted, a circumstance which Gian-

Anglorum Regi scribit Schola tota Salerni;

* Edit. Venez. 1795, Vol. III., Lib. IV., Cap. vi. Medicina.
† MS. Bibl. Reg. Paris., 6911. Catal., Tom. IV. p. 295.

none adduces as an historical fact, with the only observation in a parenthesis (alcuni stimano favoloso questo racconto del succhiamento del veleno). Tiraboschi refuted this with solid reasons, but those who would refer to what Giannone has himself said upon this subject, will find a lengthened discussion in his history. Lib. X., cap. xi., Edit. Haia, 1753, 4to. Tom. II., pp. 119, et seq.

After all, it must not be forgotten, that Dr. Heaton's statement is found identical with that in the Preface to the work in question, not only in the Paris edition as quoted by him, but also, since it must be the same, in that printed at Rotterdam by Arnold Leers, in 1648, with the following title—Zachariæ Sylvii Præfatio in Scholam Salernitanam. In this edition, the title of the work is thus—Schola Salernitana: sive de Conservanda Valetudine Præcepta Metrica. Autore Joanne de Mediolano hactenus ignoto; cum luculenta et succincta Arnoldi Villanovani in singula Capita Exegesi. The chapter 'De Salvia,' in this edition, is the Sixtieth, not the Thirty-eighth, as in that quoted by Dr. Heaton.

The reasons advanced by Tiraboschi in refutation of the circumstance of the sucking of the poison, are two. The first is, that Oderico Vitale, a contemporary writer, Hist. Eccl. ad an. 1100; who while he makes great eulogiums of Duke Robert's wife, is wholly silent in respect of this celebrated action of conjugal love; nor was Tiraboschi able to find it mentioned by any ancient writer. The second reason is, that the School of Salerno, in the prescription for the cure of the fistula, which it is conjectured was added on this occasion, did not in any way allude to the sucking, not even in case of poison; which case they did not mention at all. The prescription, De curatione Fistulæ, Cap. lxxxiii. is as follows—

Auripigmentum, sulphur misceere memento :
His decet apponi calcem : conjunge saponi :
Quatuor hæc misce ; commixtis quatuor istis
Fistula curatur, quater ex his si repleatur.

NUMISMATA.—Some Remarks induced by the reverse of a Medal recently designed and engraved by LEONARD CHARLES WYON, of Her Majesty's Mint.

The Groupe is composed of three figures. In the centre and looking to her right stands NUMISMATA, a dignified commanding Matron, extending her right hand in welcome to an animated lovely Damsel, who is pressing towards the Goddess, and represents TIME PRESENT, Youth in her Spring. With her left hand, Numismata withdraws a Curtain, and discloses an Old Man seated contemplatively on a Cube, (on which is engraved a Coin of Egina, from whence Coinage is considered to have originated.) The Sage is thus the Type of TIME PAST: of that World which has passed away, and to whose anxieties, exultations, fears, and hopes, we are the living acting representatives.

In this graceful and effective Groupe, Mr. WYON, has idealized and personified the powers and purposes of Coinage, in its fullest extent of development, a Record of Past existence: a Diffusion of the Present.

Singular, as it may seem to us, the imaginative Greeks never approached the subject. The Romans have merely given us the justice of their Coinage, and the Moderns the machinery only of Coinage: the Spirit has been left with Hades. Whether our Saxon Wizard has really raised the Goddess from her sleep of ages, it is for the Priests of her Temple to declare, but at all events the Apparition is a very lovely one.

To enter more fully into the spirit of Mr. WYON's personification, let us consider in reference to TIME PRESENT, how few of Queen Victoria's subjects have seen Her Majesty, yet thanks to the Coinage of Money and Medals, Her Majesty's Portrait, is as a Household Deity from London to Lahore! while through the same Power, the multitudinous Past, involving Empires, Sovereigns, and Events, remain an existing World to us; and will remain so, equally to interest and instruct unknown generations whose futurity is beyond the ken of our Divination.

These varied conceptions we think have been very happily embodied. The noble figure and graceful attitude of NUMISMATA, her benign and intellectual countenance, and the magnificent flow of her drapery, uniting itself with the massive fall, and superb folds of the curtain, all contribute to indicate the presiding Deity; and then the loveliness of early Girlhood, with the elasticity of the youthful form of TIME PRESENT; constitute an imposing contrast, to the Antient of other days gravely quiescent, seated in the background, and in the now, light cheerful Damsel, there is the prospective promise, of good enduring stamina. All three attitudes are indeed characteristically significant and appropriate: the stationary unchanging Genius—NUMISMATA, the immoveable tranquillity of Age, the progressive ardour of Youth, and the Present, with all its rose tintured animating Future in prospect. The Past, with all its mingled sunshine and shadows in review, now—alike—neither enlivening nor depressing; and yet—alike—subjects of thought, comparison, and consideration. Combine all, and they are fully expressive of the Inscription—

NUMISMATA IRRADIATING THE PRESENT: RESTORING THE PAST.

CUTLER'S POETRY. In the privately printed Catalogue of the Museum of Thomas Bateman, Esq., at Lomerdale House, Derbyshire, now distributing to particular friends; at p. 191, is described "a clasp knife, of the time of Charles the Second," with a brass handle, in the shape of a leg with high heeled boot, inscribed:—

Here is a leg and foot,
With a good blade too.

EARLY ENGLISH SONGS.

Thomas Ravenscroft, a celebrated composer, between the years 1609 and 1614, edited and published the following four musical works—

Pammelia: Musicks Miscellanie, or Mixed Varietie of Pleasant Roundelays, etc., Printed for William Barley, 1609, 4to.

Deuteromelia: or the Second Part of Musicks Melodie, or Melodious Music of Pleasant Roundelays; K. H. Mirth, or Freeman's Songs, etc. Printed for Thomas Adams, 1609, 4to.

Melismata: Musicall Phansies fitting the Court, City, and Country Humours, etc., 1611, 4to.

A Briefe Discourse of the True but neglected use of Charactering the Degrees [in Music]. Printed for Edward Allde, 1614, 4to.

These four brochures being amongst the most curious and rarest of their class, the readers of Current Notes will doubtless therefore not object to a few extracts from them of quaint old poetry—"choicely good," as Isaac Walton designates them; preceded by some few notices of Thomas Ravenscroft, of whom, in the Biographical Dictionaries of Musicians little is recorded.

From the few data observable in his works, it appears that Thomas Ravenscroft was born in 1592; that in due time he became a chorister in St. Paul's cathedral, and speaks of his tutor, Mr. Edmund Pearce, the Master of the Choristers, as 'a man of singular eminence in his profession.'

University degrees were formerly taken at an earlier age than at present, but Ravenscroft graduated at an unusually early age, and took the degree of Bachelor of Music, when not more than fourteen years old. The following laudatory lines, prefixed to his Briefe Discourse, allude more particularly to this precocity of talent. The third line has a punning allusion to his name—

Rara Avis arte senex juvenis; sed rarior est, si
Ætate est juvenis, moribus ille senex.
Rara avis est Author (pœne est pars nominis una) Namque annis juvenis, moribus, arte senex.
Non vidit tria lustra puer, quia arte probatus,
Vitâ laudatus, sumpsit in arte gradum.

Arte Senex, virtute senex, ætate adolescens
I bone, rara avis es, scribe, bonis avibus.

Ravenscroft dedicated his Briefe Discourse—"To the Right Worshipfull, most worthy Grave Senators, Guardians of Gresham College in London;" the reason being, as he says—I must and do acknowledge it as a singular help and benefit, that I have received divers Instructions, Resolutions, and Confirmations of sundry Points and Precepts in our Art, from the Musicke Readers of that most famous Colledge. Prefixed are panegyricall addresses by some of his most eminent musical contemporaries—John Dowland, Nathaniel Giles, Martin Peerson, and others, sufficiently confirmatory it was favourably countenanced by them.

In 1621, Ravenscroft published his Whole Booke of Psalmes, but from this period nothing is known respecting him, and it is supposed he was dead, when in 1633, the second edition of that book appeared.

From the dedication of his Melismata—"To the Right Worshipful, the true favourers of Musicke and all Virtue, Mr. Thomas Ravenscroft, and Mr. William Ravenscroft, Esquires, and the subscribing himself 'Your Worships affectionate Kinsman, T. R.:' it has been concluded this distinguished musician was of good family, and is supposed to have been possessed of independent property. The arms of the Ravenscroft family are Argent, a chevron between three ravens' heads erased, sable.

The late George Spencer, fourth Duke of Marlborough, presented in 1822, to the Members of the Roxburgh Club, a thin volume, entitled—Selections from the Works of Thomas Ravenscroft; but the distinguished editor, if so he may be called, seems not to have been aware the poetry of which his volume is mainly composed, was long anterior to the reign of King James the First, the period of Ravenscroft's various publications. Mr. Oliphant is justly severe upon the Duke's contribution. He observes—

I feel bound, as a faithful chronicler, to add, that in spite of exterior show, wide margins, pompous title pages, and expensive printing, his Grace's Presentation betrays on the part of its editor, or his assistants, the grossest ignorance of that which constitutes the chief value of the works in question, viz., the Music. The blunders made by them are truly ludicrous, and in fact, the whole is perfectly unintelligible, and worse than useless, inasmuch as it might lead people to suppose that the music of that period was a species of unknown tongue, an incomprehensible jargon. I am only sorry to think that the name of Bartleman, which I revere, should be handed down in the Preface as one of the assistants, for I do not believe that he could have been in any way accessory to such wilful murder upon a species of music that he admired so much, and with which, I speak from the authority of those who knew him well, few people were better acquainted.*

I differ in opinion from this writer, that the Music constitutes the chief value of the works in question; the poetry, I believe to be equally valuable, as I shall proceed to shew.

Pammelia, 1609, the first in date, consists of one hundred songs and ballads of various kinds, accompanied with the Music, a truly minstrel-like batch.

Hey hoe!

To the greenewood now let us goe:
Sing heave and hoe!
And there shall we finde
Both Buck and Doe;
The Hart and the Hinde,
And the little prettie Roe,
Sing heave and hoe!

The old dog, the jolly old dog,
As he lay in his den-a;
Huffa, buffa,
Trolilo, trolilo,
As he lay in his den-a.

* Musa Madrigalesca, 1837, 8vo. p. 257.

Now God be with old Simeon,
 For he made Cans for many a one,
 And a good old man was he.
 And Jenkin was his journeyman,
 He could tittle off every Can,
 And thus hee said to mee:
 To whom drink you?
 Sir Knave, to you!
 Then, hey hoe, jolly Jenkin,
 I spye a knave in drinking—
 Come trole the bole to mee.

Banbury Ale! where? where? where?
 At the blacke-smith's house—
 I would I were there!

Jacke boy, ho boy, Newes:*
 The cat is in the well,
 Let us sing now for her knell
 Ding dong, ding dong, bell!

Come drink to me and I will drink to thee,
 And then shall we full well agree:
 I have loved the jolly tankerd,
 Full seven Winters and more;
 I loved it so long
 Till that I went upon the score.

He that loves not the tankerd
 Is no honest man;
 And he is no right souldier
 That loves not the Can.

Tappe the Canikin, Toss the Canikin,
 Trole the Canikin, Turne the Canikin—
 Hold good sonne, and fill us a fresh can,
 That we may quaffe it round about from man to man.†

Deuteromelia: or the Second Part of Musick's
 Melodie, is even more interesting than its predecessor.
 The terms K. H. Mirth, and Freeman's Songs, have occasioned some discussion. Mr. Oliphant observes—

It is supposed, the former stands for King Henry's Mirth, that is, Songs or Catches of a merry nature which were favourites with that jovial prince. I think it likely to be so, but am not aware of any thing either for or against the matter, except conjecture.

All doubt on the subject is however decided by the following extract from the Life of Sir Peter Carew, by

* In Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew, ascribed to 1606, is the following allusion to this catch or song—
 Curtis. ——— good Grumio, the news?
 Grumio. Why, Jack boy, ho boy, and as much news as thou wilt. Act IV. sc. 1.

† To these ballads Shakespeare alludes in his Othello, ascribed to the year 1611; Act II. sc. 3, when Iago calls,
 Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink;
 And let me the canakin clink:
 A soldier's a man,
 A life's but a span;
 Why then, let a soldier drink!

John Vowell alias Hoker, of Exeter, printed in the twenty-eighth volume of the Archæologia.

From this time he [Sir Peter] continued for the most part in the Court, spending his time in all Courtly exercises to his great praise and commendation, and especially to the good liking of the King [Henry VIII.], who had a great pleasure in him, as well for his sundry noble qualities, as also for his singing, for the King himself being much delighted to sing, and Sir Peter Carew having a pleasant voice, would often use him to sing with him certain songs they call Freeman's Songs, as namely, By the bancke as I lay, and, As I walked the wode so wyld, etc.

Ritson had an inconceivably strange notion of Freemen being an error for Three-men, because Shakespeare speaks of Three-men Song-men, that is, men who would sing Songs of three parts; but if he had taken the trouble to examine the book in question, he would have also found there Freeman's Songs to four voices, which sets the matter at rest. Drayton, in his Legend of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, makes that nobleman say—

Of Freeman's Catches to the Pope I sing,
 Which wauk much license to my countrymen;
 Thither the which I was the first to bring,
 That were unknown in Italy till then.

The work entitled Deuteromelia, contains thirty-two Songs and Catches, from which I have extracted the following.

Of all the birds that ever I see,
 The Owle is the fayrest in her degree;
 For all the day long she sits in a tree,
 And when the night comes away flies she!
 Te whit, te whoo!
 Sir knave to thou.

This Song is well sung, I make you a vow,
 And he is a knave, that drinketh now.
 Nose, nose, nose, nose!
 And who gave thee that jolly red nose?
 Sinamont and ginger, nutmegs and cloves,
 And that gave me my jolly red nose!*

To-morrow the Fox will come to towne,
 Keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe;
 To-morrow the Fox will come to towne,
 O keepe you all well there.
 I must desire you neighbours all,
 To hollo the Fox out of the hall,
 And cry as loud as you can call,
 O keepe you all well there.

He'll steale the Cock out from his flock,
 Keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe;
 He'll steale the Cock e'en from his flock,
 O keepe you all well there.
 I must desire, etc.

* That this was highly popular is evidenced by the fact, that in Beaumont and Fletcher's Knight of the Burning Pestle, a Comely first printed in 1613, the last four lines of this song are quoted. Paul Bedford has of late rendered the words and air familiar to thousands.

He'll steal the Hen out of the pen,
 Keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe !
 He'll steal the Hen out of the pen,
 O keepe you all well there.
 I must desire, etc.

He'll steal the Duck out of the brook,
 Keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe ;
 He'll steal the Duck out of the brook,
 O keepe you all well there.
 I must desire, etc.

He'll steal the Lamb e'en from his dam,
 Keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe, keepe ;
 He'll steal the Lamb e'en from his dam,
 O keepe you all well there.
 I must desire you neighbours all,
 To hollo the Fox out of the hall,
 And cry as loud as you can call,
 O keep you all well there.

In 1557-8, the first year of the Registers of the Stationers' Company, it is recorded John Wallye and Mrs. Toye had licence to print a ballad, called—

Who lyve so merry and make such sporte,
 As thay that be of the poorest sort ?

The following appears to have been the ballad there noticed.

Who liveth so merry in all this land
 As doth the poor widow that selleth the sand ?
Chorus. And ever she singeth as I can guess,
 Will you buy any sand, any sand, Mistrie !

The broome-man maketh his living most sweet,
 With carrying of broomes from street to street ;
Chorus. Who would desire a pleasanter thing,
 Than all the day long to do nothing but sing ?

The chimney-sweeper all the long day
 He singeth and sweepeth the soote away ;
Chorus. And when he comes home although he be weary,
 With his sweet wife he maketh full merry.

The cobbler he sits cobbling till noone,
 And cobbleth the shoes till they be done ;
Chorus. Yet doth he not feare and so doth say :
 For he knows his work will soon decay.

The marchant-man doth saile on the seas,
 And lye on the ship-board with little ease ;
Chorus. Alwayes in doubt the rocke is neare,
 How can he be merry and make good cheare ?

The husband-man all day goeth to plow,
 And when he comes home he serveth his sow ;
Chorus. He moyleth and toyleth all the long yeare,
 How can he be merry and make good cheare ?

The serving-man waiteth frō street to street,
 With blowing his nailes and beating his feet ;
Chorus. And serveth for forty shillings a yeare,
 That 'tis impossible to make good cheare.

Who liveth so merry and maketh such sport
 As thoes that be of the poorer sort ?
Chorus. The poorest sort, wheresoever they be,
 They gather together by one, two and three ;
 And every man will spend his penny :
 What makes such a shot among a great many ?

EDWARD F. RIMBAULT.

INSCRIBED WALL RHYMES.

On the wall of what has long been termed "Queen Mary's Room," in Edinburgh Castle, were the following lines:—

Lord Jesus Christ, that ounit was with thorne,
 Preserve the birth quheus Badgie heir is borne,
 And send hir sonne sucessione to reigne still,
 Lang in this realme, if that it be thy will !
 Als grant O Lord, quhae euer of hir proseed,
 Be to thy glorie, honor, and prais, so beid.

19 Junii, 1566.

James the Sixth of Scotland was born in that room, on the day noted at the foot of these rhymes. They were extant there in 1772, are they so now ?

On a wall in the Abbey Church at Edinburgh were the following lines:—

*Ah me ! I grauel am, and dust,
 And to the grave, return I must :
 O painted piece of living clay,
 Man, be not proud of thy short day.*

1646.

The words in italic are anagrammatical of William Grahame. J. F.

BROOMES, NEW BROOMES !

In the old drama entitled the Three Ladies of London, printed in 1584, 4to., is the following poetical cry of a vender of heath brooms in the happy days of Good Queen Bess.

Enter Conscience* with broomes at her back, singing as followeth.

New broomes, green broomes, will ye buy any ?
 Come Maidens, come quickly, let me take a peny.

My broomes are not steeped
 But very well bound :
 My broomes be not crooked,
 But smooth cut and round.
 I wish it would please ye,
 To buy of my broome ;
 Then would it well ease me,
 If market were done.

Have you any olde bootes,
 Or any old shoone :
 Powch-ringes or buskins,
 To cope for new broome ?
 If so ye haue Maydens
 I pray you bring bether,
 That you and I frendly
 May bargin together.

New broomes, greene broomes, will ye buy any ?
 Come Maidens, come quickly, let me take a peny.

The broom-seller of the reigns of Charles the Second and James the Second, is one of the illustrations of Marcellus Lauron's London's Cries, engraved and published by Pierce Tempest in 1688.

UNICORN AS BORNE IN HERALDRY.

In Robson's Glossary of Heraldry, the Unicorn as used in armorial bearings is described as an imaginary animal, represented as having the head, neck and body of a horse, the legs of a buck, the tail of a lion, and a long horn growing out of the middle of the forehead.

The Rev. Sloane Evans in his excellent Grammar of Heraldry, speaking of the Unicorn, says it is the symbol of strength of body and virtue of mind. It also denotes extreme courage and well befits the Warrior who had rather die than fall into the hand of the enemy.

The Rhinoceros, it may be remarked, has been frequently supposed to be an equally proper translation for the Hebrew word translated 'Unicorn' in the Scriptures, F. R. N. H.

INVOCATION OF THE VIRGIN ON TOMBS.

The reason why so few monumental inscriptions in which the prayers of the Virgin were asked, are now extant is easily understood. The first Protestants evinced a more violent antipathy to the reverence paid by the Catholic Church to the Saints, than to any other article of the faith. Before the Reformation they were without doubt very common: no one can have read any of the literature of England of a date anterior to the change of religion, without having observed the great reverence Englishmen then showed to the Mother of God, and how ecclesiastic and layman, bishop and priest, noble and peasant, vied with each other in giving her honour. The popular devotions, the dedication of churches, the formularies of wills, and the songs of the poets are all evidence of this love for Oure blessed Lady Christes Mother dere.

Those who are curious in this matter, will find much to interest them in Dr. Rock's Church of our Fathers vol. iii. pp. 241-346; from which work the following are extracted.

Sancta Trinitas unus Deus miserere nobis
Et ancillis tuis sperantibus in te.
O mater Dei memento mei.
Jesu mercy, Lady help.

Mary moder, mayden clere,
Prey for me William Goldwyre:
And for me Isabel his wyf,
Lady, for thy joyes fyf.
Hav mercy on Christian his second wyf,
Swete Jesu, for thy wondrys fyf.

On the grave-brass of William Berdewell, in West Harling Church, he is figured with a scroll proceeding from his mouth, bearing this invocation to Christ:—

Jesu fili Dei miserere mei!

while a similar scroll from his wife implores—

Sancta Dei genetrix ora pro me!

Bottesford, August 30. EDWARD PEACOCK.

INVOCATION TO THE VIRGIN.

Over the outer arch of the porch of Farleigh-Hungerford Church, co. Somerset, built by Walter Lord Hungerford, and consecrated on St. Leonard's day, Nov. 6, 1443; is a semi-circular stone, on which is cut a small cross, and under it, two Latin hexameter verses—

MVNIAT HOC TEMPLV CRUCE GLO-
RIFICANS MICROCOSMV: Q GENVIT
XPM MISERI⁹ POR FIAT ASILVM.

which without the abbreviations, may be read thus—

Muniat hoc templum cruce glorificans microcosmum: *
Quæ genuit Christum miseris prece fiat asylum.

* Critics in prosody will not fail to observe that the i, in microcosmum, is improperly shortened. The word Microcosm, compounded of two Greek words, signifying 'little' and 'world,' is found frequently among the old writers in the sense of Man. Thomas Thorne, in some verses addressed to the author, Gerard's Herbal 1597, folio; so uses it:—

Oft have I heard and oft have read
In bookes of learned lore,
That man the name of 'Little World,'
Or 'Microcosmos,' bore.

So Bastard in his Chrestoleros, 1598, 4to. has the following epigram:—

De Microcosmo.

Man is a little world, and beares the face
And picture of the universitie:
All but resemblth God, all but his glasse,
All but the picture of his Majestie.
Man is the little world (so we him call)
The world the little god—God, the great all!

Falstaff, in Shakespeare's King Henry IV. part II. act iv, sc. 3. says of good sherris sack—It illumineth the face, which as a beacon gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm.

John Davies of Hereford, in his poem entitled, Microcosmos; or Discovery of the Little World, 1603, 4to., observes:—

So in our little world, this soul of our's,
In whom we do this world's abridgement see.

John Earle, successively bishop of Winchester and Salisbury, wrote a moral work that has passed through many editions entitled, Microcosmography; a piece of the World discovered, in Essays and Characters, first printed in 1628.

Sir Thomas Browne, in his well known Religio Medici, says—'For the world, I count it not an Inn, but an Hospital; a place not to live, but to die in. The world that I regard is myself; it is the 'microcosm' of my own frame that I cast my eye on. I study to find out how I am a 'microcosm,' a little world.

Later, Nathaniel Wanley compiled a volume, of which the title as 'Wanley's Wonders' is a household word to thousands; entitled, Wonders of the Little World, or a General History of Man, it was first printed in 1678, folio.

In the Gentleman's Magazine, 1794, p. 599, is the following poetical version of this inscription.

May He whose Cross for man has glory won,
Far from this Church all harm remove;
And may Her prayers who calls that Saviour son,
A refuge to the wretched prove!

The Rev. John Edward Jackson, now rector of Leigh Delamere, co. Wilts, in his Guide to Farleigh-Hungerford, has this prose translation—

May He who by the Cross glorifies man, protect this Church, and may the mother of Christ become an asylum to the wretched, by her prayer for them.

The first line of the Latin verses alludes to the Saviour, the second to the Virgin Mary. The prayer contained in the former of the verses seems to be a reference to the words of St. Paul.

But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that He, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man. For it became Him from whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons into glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings.—Hebr. ch. ii., v. 9, 10.

The allusion to the Intercession of the Virgin Mary, expressed in the latter hexameter will be accounted for by bearing in mind, that at the time when this stone was placed here, the national religion was that of Rome.

UNIVERSALITY OF THE NEWSPAPER.

Compare the Orator with the Newspaper, and a faint glimpse of the pre-eminently ubiquitous power of the latter may be obtained. The Orator addresses himself to and may be heard by a few hundreds, possibly thousands, but the newspaper may be and is perused by millions. Evanescence the words of the Orator pass into the air and are no more heard—the language of the Newspaper stamped on the widely spread tablet remains almost imperishable. The arguments of the Orator may follow in such rapid succession, that by the majority of the audients they are not comprehended, and their convincing or persuasive tendencies are lost; the reasoning of the Newspaper, without fear of perplexity may be scanned at leisure, each point tells, and the reader's determinative faculties are arrested in full force. The passion of the Orator may excite an assembly, but the feeling imparted by the newspaper electrifies a continent, nay the globe itself. The Orator is for an edifice, the Newspaper is for the world—the one has existence for an hour, the other lives for all time. The Orator may be compared to the lightning, the vividness of which flashes for a moment, but again on the instant leaves all in darkness; while the Newspaper is like the sun, diffusing its light over the whole earth, brightening the wide expanse, and fixing on the basis of its own eternity. Printing has been happily defined 'the art which preserves all arts;' printing makes the Orator himself more than an Orator! it seizes and embodies his dying words, breathes into them the breath of vitality, and they live when even the corporeal reality of the speaker has ceased to be. The Newspaper is the speaking gallery through which the Orator peals diffusely his thunder in the ear of ages, and thus though silent in the tomb, becomes the Mentor over the cradle of rising generations.

CHARLES THE FIRST AND HENRIETTA MARIA.

Carolus Henriettæ nuper sociata Mariæ
Quæ mare disjungit littora junxit Amor.

Where is this confused distich to be found? It seems to be an inscription under the portraits of the King and Queen.

SCOTTISH IRON 'YETS' OR GATES.

The licence to Ogilvy of Inverquhar, to strengthen his house 'with ane' Irne yet,' noticed at p. 62, of Current Notes, has a priority of date than there stated. Alexander Ogilvy named in the document, was living from 1434 to 1482, the licence has therefore reference to the seventh year of either king James the II. or III. if of the former, the year would be 1444, or of the latter, with greater probability 1467.

These iron gates, which superseded the portecoulisse of an earlier period were evidently from the tone of the licence, the usual security attached to the castles and mansions in Scotland in the fifteenth century.

ABERDEENSHIRE BENEFACTIONS.

Affixed to the kirk-yard wall of Foot Dee or Futtee, in Aberdeen, is the following record of the liberality of a descendant of the heroic Sir Robert Davidson, "provost of braif Aberdeen," who fell at the battle of Harlaw in 1411.

GEORGE DAVIDSONE ELDER BVRGES OF ABD.
BIGIT THIS DYK ON HIS OVIN EXPENSES, 1650.

Below are the arms of Davidson, a fess, three peons in chief, a stag lodged in base, and the initials G. D.

In Monteith's Theater of Mortality, and in all subsequent works in which this inscription has been noticed, the reading is erroneously rendered thus :

George Davidsons elder civis aberdonensis, biggit thir church-yard dyke upon his own expenses.

George Davidson, proprietor of the lands of Pettens and Bogfairlie in Belhelvy, distinguished himself by other acts of munificence for the public good. Besides building the kirk-yard wall of Futtee, he erected and endowed the church of Newhills, built the bridge of Bruxburn, and endowed several schools, these benefactions being wholly in Aberdeenshire. He died a bachelor in 1663.

CROFT'S MUSICA SACRA.

Lowndes in his Bibliographer's Manual, p. 511, to the notice of Dr. Croft's Musica Sacra, or Select Anthems in score, 1724, folio, appends this remark :—

A splendid edition published by subscription. The first work that was stamped on pewter plates, and in score. This work published anonymously, contains the words of Select Anthems used in the Chapel Royal, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's, etc., with a Preface containing a short Account of our Church Music, and an Encomium on Tallis and Bird.

The bibliographer is here wholly in error. The work is engraved not stamped on pewter plates, the claim is only that of its being the first collection of Church music so produced—types having been previously used for that purpose. The Musica Sacra consists of Anthems, with the music in score, wholly composed by Dr. Croft; the reference therefore to the anonymously published words of Select Anthems, without the Music, attributed as editor to Dr. Croft, is wholly to a different work, thus entitled :—

Divine Harmony ; or a New Collection of Select Anthems used at Her Majesty's Chappels Royal, Westminster Abbey, St. Pauls, Windsor, both Universities, Eaton, and most Cathedrales in Her Majesty's Dominions. Designed for the use of such as attend Choir Service, etc. Printed and sold by S. Keble, at the Turk's Head in Fleet Street, 1712, 8vo.

The Preface noticed by Lowndes, and the Encomium on Tallis and Bird, are prefixed to this volume, not to the Musica Sacra, 1724.

EDWARD F. RIMBAULT.

SPES ET FORTUNA VALETE.

The following monumental inscriptions are based upon the sentiments embodied in the old Greek epigram, recently noticed in Current Notes. The first is in the chancel of Mickleham church, Surrey.

Here lyeth buried under this stone the Body of John Stydolf, Esq. which deceased the 8th day of May, in the Yere of our Lord, a thousand five hundred seventy-six.

Inveni portum, spes et fortuna valete,
Nil mihi vobiscum, ludite nunc alios.
Quocumque ingrederitur, sequitur mors
Corporis umbram.

The other, is at Kingston-upon-Thames.

Lata locus mihi porta necis sic porta valet :
Lata per angustam non placet ire viam.
Intravi angustam (ai fas sit dicere) portam,
Porta vale, (fas sit dicere), lata vale.
Inveni portum letum, dum lata per orbem
Non via nec firmum porta decere locum.

The foregoing are copied literatim.

VALUABLE BOOKS AT VERY REDUCED PRICES.

Allen's (Commander) Narrative of the Niger Expedition of 1841, with plates and maps, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 10s 6d (pub. at £1. 12s) 1848

The narrative of the Albert's solitary voyage is, to our thinking, one of the most remarkable instances of quiet courage and unflinching constancy of purpose to be found in any book of travels ever written.—Examiner. "Full of instructive and amusing details of African life."—Britannia.

Andrewes (Lancelotti, Episc. Wint.) Preces Privates Quotidianæ, Gr. et Lat., a New Edition very carefully corrected, fcp. 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d (pub. at 9s) 1848

Ancient Tournaments and Armour, 62 FINELY COLOURED ENGRAVINGS of Ancient Arms and Armour, Engines of War, Tournaments, &c. with a History of Chivalry (in German), oblong 4to. bds. £1. 4s Stuttgart. 1842

A well executed work; the plates are finished in silver and colours. Some of the combats are very curious.

Autograph Letters, a collection of nearly 300 Autograph Letters and Papers of celebrated Individuals of all Nations, engraved in facsimile on stone, 8 parts 4to. complete, 15s, or half morocco, 18s Stuttgart, 1846

This is a very interesting collection, including numerous British Worthies, Q. Elizabeth, Mary Stuart, Cromwell, and many literary characters; also Individuals of all countries, from the Sixteenth Century to the present day. Each autograph has the merit of being a complete document in itself.

Bancroft's (Hon. G.) History of the United States, from the Discovery of the American Continent, last complete authorised edition; with numerous engraved portraits, views, &c. 6 large vols. 8vo. new cloth, £3. 3s Boston, 1854

This is the last and most complete copyright edition of this valuable work by the American Minister, containing in addition engravings not in other editions.

Barnard's Sketches in Switzerland, Scenes and Incidents of Travel in the Bernese Oberland, &c. 26 large and beautiful tinted lithographic drawings, folio, new hf. morocco, £1. 11s 6d (pub. at £4. 4s) 1843

"The very best delineations of Swiss Scenery, Glaciers, Passes, Travelling Incidents, &c. are given in the large views of Mr. Barnard. They combine in a high degree picturesqueness with truth."—Murray's Handbook to Switzerland.

Barrow's (John) Life and Correspondence of Admiral Sir Sidney Smith, fine plate of Sir Sidney at Acre, the Breach of Acre, and plans, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 8s 6d (pub. at £1. 8s) 1848

"We recommend these volumes to our readers. Sir Sidney Smith's naval exploits, his glorious repulses of Bonaparte at Acre, his services in the subsequent Egyptian campaigns, and, in short, all his public and brilliant course, may be followed out in these pages, with their official data and private correspondence, now for the first time given to the world."—Literary Gazette.

Beltz's (G. F. Lancaster Herald) Order of the Garter; Memorials of that Most Noble Order, from its Foundation to the Present Time; including the History of the Order, Biographical Notices of the Knights in the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II.; the correct Chronological Succession of the Members, and many curious particulars relating to English and French History from hitherto unpublished Documents, with woodcuts of Arms, a large thick vol. royal 8vo. new half morocco, uncut, Roxburghe style, 9s (pub. at £1. 10s) Pickering, 1841

"In our opinion (and it is no slight praise,) MR. BELTZ'S MEMORIALS deserve for research and ability to be ranked with the works of his predecessors (Camden, Anstis, Dugdale, &c.), and no historical library can be complete without them."—Athenæum.

Bingham's (Commander) Narrative of the Expedition to CHINA, from the commencement of the War to its termination in 1842, coloured portrait and engravings, 2 vols. post 8vo. new cloth, 5s (pub. at £1. 1s) 1843

Bojardo ed Ariosto, ORLANDO INNAMORATO E FURIOSO, with an Introductory Essay, Original Memoir, and Notes, in English, by ANTONIO PANIZZI, Anely printed, 9 vols. post 8vo. new cloth £1. 10s (pub. at £5. 8s) Pickering, 1830-4

This edition is highly praised by Hallam in his "Introduction to the Literature of Europe." The poem as written by Bojardo has never been reprinted since 1544.

Botta's (M.) Letters on the Discoveries at Nineveh, translated from the French by C. Tobin, illustrated by 50 LARGE FOLDING PLATES, consisting of Plan, Plates of Sculpture, and Inscriptions, 8vo. cloth, 5s (pub. at 10s 6d) Longmans, 1850

"This translation of M. Botta's Letters, with the accompanying valuable plates, is very acceptable. They are a valuable supplement to Dr. Layard's work."—Athenæum.

Bourne's (Vincent) Poetical Works, both in Latin and English, the Latin Poems having an English translation on the opposite pages, printed by C. Whittingham, fcp. 8vo. new cloth, 3s Pickering, 1840

"I love the memory of Vincent Bourne."—Cowper.

Boutell's Christian Monuments in England, an Historical and Descriptive Sketch of the various Classes of Monumental Memorials which have been in use in this Country from the time of the Norman Conquest, numerous wood engravings, royal 8vo. new cloth, 5s (pub. at 15s) 1854

Boutell's (Rev. C.) Monumental Brasses of England; a Series of 149 Engravings upon Wood, from valuable Memorials, with descriptive Notices, royal 8vo. new cloth, 8s (pub. at £1. 8s)—A copy on LARGE PAPER, printed in folio (a very handsome book, printed to range with Dugdale, &c.), new cloth, £1. 10s (pub. at £3. 3s) 1849

"The amount of information conveyed in moderate compass, in the above attractive work, renders this collection of examples of Costume, of Decorative Design, and of Heraldry, highly acceptable. They are marked by minute and faithful exactness, and their variety is striking."—Archæological Journal.

Brenton's (Capt.) Naval History of Great Britain, brought down to the present time, from Official Documents and other authentic sources, numerous portraits and plans. 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, 14s (pub. at £1. 11s 6d) 1836

This important work has long been an esteemed Chronicle of the triumphant exploits of the British Navy.

Bridgewater Treatise.—Rogot (Dr.) on ANIMAL AND VEGETABLE PHYSIOLOGY, second edition, with nearly 500 woodcuts, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 16s (pub. at £1. 10s) 1841

Brougham's (Lord) Sketches of Statesmen who flourished in the Time of George III. with Remarks or Party, and on the French Revolution, three series complete 6 vols. 18mo. in 3, cloth, 6s 6d 1851

This well known and interesting work comprises upwards of sixty biographies.

Brougham's (Lord) Lives of Men of Letters and Science, who flourished in the Time of George III., with beautiful engravings on steel, 8vo. new half morocco, 7s 6d (pub. at £1. 1s) C. Knight, 1841

Burke's (Rt. Hon. E.) Correspondence with many eminent Persons between the year 1744 and the period of his Decease in 1797, edited by Earl Fitzwilliam and Sir R. Bourke, fine portrait, 4 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 14s (pub. at £2. 2s) 184

This valuable work contains numerous Historical and Biographical Notes, and Original Letters from the leading Statesmen of the period and forms an Autobiography of this celebrated Statesman and Writer.

Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, rendered more intelligible with the help of Modern Prose, by J. Saunders; also, CABINET PICTURES OF ENGLISH LIFE, from Chaucer, numerous engravings, 3 vols. 18mo. in 1, cloth, 1s 6d C. Knight, 184

A very useful and instructive companion to the readers of Chaucer's Poems, throwing much light upon the mysteries of antique spelling, Gosh construction, &c.

Chaucer's Romaunt of the Rose, Troilus and Criseide, &c. with Life by Sir Harris Nicolas, 3 vols. post 8vo. new cloth, 18s (pub. at £1. 11s 6d) 184

This forms a Supplement to Tyrwhitt's Edition, and completes the Poetical Works of Chaucer.

NUREMBERG MASK FOR PUNISHMENT.

HAVING in previous numbers of Current Notes given several illustrations of the former uses of implements of punishment and torture, as applied to females under the appellation of Branks or Scold's-bridles; the following may possibly afford some interest, from its having been in the olden time chiefly employed for the correction of minor offences committed by men, by exciting ridicule against the wearer; and for such purpose was frequently placed on the heads of soldiers for breaches of discipline.

It is formed of bands of iron, which fold over the head and are fastened behind by a padlock. A pair of asses ears are placed on the sides, and spectacles attached to the face; a double plate closes over the mouth, and a whistle passes up the nostril, which, should the wearer attempt to speak, produces a loud sound. The mask is painted in flesh colour, the eyebrows and ears are shaded with dark grey, and a mouth is delineated upon the plate covering the lower part of the face.

During the last year it was obtained from the old castle at Nuremberg by Mr. Fairholt, and from him has passed to Lord Londesborough. It is engraved in the recently published sixth part of the Miscellanea Graphica, an admirably conducted work, devoted to the illustration of Lord Londesborough's Collection of Antiquities, and which the Editor would unequivocally yet respectfully commend to the reader's notice.

VOL. V.

SCHOLA SALERNITANA.

Much interested with the various contributions to Current Notes on the question to whom the Schola Salernitana was really dedicated, I have been greatly pleased to find the subject, though medical, has been one of general interest. Some years since, I purchased for a mere trifle an old edition of the Aphorisms of Hippocrates, with comments on Galen, Heurnius, and Fuchsius, having bound in the same volume, an early manuscript translation of the Schola Salernitana, in which, on examination are some verses, which do not appear in any printed copy to which I have had access. I have the translation by the famous Dr. Philemon Holland, 1617, and a similar one dated 1609. I have also referred to Sir Alexander Croke's and to other editions. At this moment, the most interesting portion are the introductory lines, which in my opinion settles the question as to the "England's King," noticed immediately after, in the leading verse of the poem:

This worke yclept the flowre of Medicine,
Compilde at first in verses Leonine,
By Iohn of Millaine, Doctor of Salerne;
But by th' whole colledge as y^r great concerne
Was dedicate to Robert heire o' the crowne
Of England, (thogh Henry helde it as his own);
On his return from conquerde Palestine,
Th' eleven hundredth yeare of Xt divine.

Dr. Friend, in his History of Medicine, states this work was compiled about the year 1100, and made so great a noise in that and succeeding ages as to be thought worthy the comments of Arnoldus de Villa Nova. After all, the ancients like the moderns worshipped the rising characters of the age, and it is therefore not at all improbable, that it was at first dedicated to EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, as he had the repute of admiring foreign in preference to native talent, and on every opportunity proved that partiality; but that after his death, when Robert the son of William the Conqueror, on his way from Palestine sought refuge in Salerno, it is natural to suppose that the eldest son of a powerful monarch, and one who had honoured their college by consulting the professors on the subject of his own ailments, would afford occasion for the dedicatory lines to him. This conjecture is further confirmed by the additional verses on Fistula, to which complaint it is said Duke Robert was then subject.

An imitation of this poem was written by Ægidius, archiater to Philip Augustus, at the close of the Twelfth century. This Ægidius was a Benedictine monk, and his subject, the Virtues of Medicines, and on Urines and Pulse, in hexameter verses without regard to syllables; he calls Galen and Constantine too prolix, and Philaretus too short.

In conclusion, I may state, the Translation of the Schola Salernitana contains ninety-seven verses, and is worthy a closer examination. The differences of this Manuscript when compared with the printed editions are numerous, and I am inclined to think, that it is a fuller copy of the original than any printed one; and if not too long I should like to see it printed in Current Notes, with all its peculiarities of style.

Manchester, Sept. 27. CHARLES CLAY, M.D.

EDWARD THE FIRST, THE "REX ANGLORUM."

After the lapse of so many ages, it is extremely difficult, or rather impossible to determine who was the Rex Anglorum noticed in John of Milan's curious medical work entitled Schola Salernitana. History is totally silent on the subject; to name therefore any particular king, as the patron of that once celebrated school, can only be a matter of conjecture.

In a former number of Current Notes, p. 60, I mentioned Edward the Confessor solely on the authority of two eminent and indefatigable antiquaries and historians, Muratori and Gibbon; but having now carefully considered the subject, I do not find any historical fact to favour either Muratori's conjecture, or Tiraboschi's assertion. The latter cites a manuscript which he appears never to have seen, stating actually, as he says, that the work in question was addressed to Robert the Second, Duke of Normandy—di fatto al Re Roberto indiritta. He does not quote directly from the manuscript, but from the Catal. Cod. MSS., Bibl. Regiæ Paris., Vol. IV. page 294, where he found the title—8941. Salernitanæ Scholæ Versus ad Regem Robertum.

The compiler of the Catalogue was doubtless led into error by the romancing preface of Zacharie Dubois, or, Zacharias Sylvius, as he designates himself in the Paris edition of 1627. The statement also, that Guaimar, prince of Salerno, invited the Normans into Italy, is a pure fiction, as this prince's eyes were put out in 896. 'I Normanni,' i.e. the Danes and Norwegians had invaded Italy so early as the time of Charlemagne, about 812; but the descendants of Rollo and his followers, the Normans, properly so called, who with their swords made their way into Apulia and afterwards into Sicily, did not obtain any footing in Italy prior to 1008. Their history, and that of Tancred and his twelve sons, and especially of his third son, Robert Guiscard, is too long to be inserted here. Rollo himself was not settled in Normandy before the year 912.

Bossi, who in his elaborate and learned work, the Historia d'Italia Antica e Moderna, printed in 19 volumes, 1819-23, 8vo., continually cites Muratori, Giannone, and Tiraboschi, and frequently notices the School of Salerno, makes no mention whatever of the words 'Versus ad Regem Robertum,' said to be seen ipso facto in the Paris Manuscript, but in Vol. XIV. lib. 4, cap. 28, §6., says the School of Salerno was already celebrated in the Tenth Century, and frequented by patients from France and Spain, although Tiraboschi doubts the fact; Bossi however in support of his assertion, refers to Vitalis, a writer of the Twelfth Century, who affirms that that school was established two centuries before his time. What follows will best appear in his own words, and will correct a former erroneous conjecture of mine.

Gratuita è pure l'asserzione del Tiraboschi, che quella scuola molto dovesse alle opere di Costantino Africano; come è assai dubbio il fatto, ammesso anche dal Giannone, che risvegliato fosse in quella città ed in que' popoli lo studio della medicina a cagione dei molti libri di quell' arte in quelle provincie recati dal Saraceni, etc. Della scuola Salernitana sono tuttora celebri i precetti per conservare la sanità, indirizzati al Re d' Inghilterra, o forse a Roberto di Normandia, pretendente a quella corona; e come già da me si accennò nel § 4. compilati furono que' precetti in versi da Maestro Giovanni da Milano, detto dottore egregio di medicina, come da un antico codice si raccoglie.

The circumstances mentioned in favour of Duke Robert's claim as the patron of the medical school of Salerno, are not supported by any recorded fact in History; on the contrary, they seem to point to King EDWARD THE FIRST, as the 'Rex Anglorum,' the intended Royal personage. Prince Edward embarked at Portsmouth, in May, 1270, and thence passed through France, Italy and Sicily, on his way to Palestine. On June 17, in the following year, he was wounded by an assassin, with a poisoned dagger, the venom of which was extracted by his wife, the Princess Eleanor, who, by sucking the wound effected a cure, which medicine could not effect. His father, King Henry the Third, died Nov. 16, 1272, and Edward though absent was soon after proclaimed King. In the spring of 1273, Edward, on his way homeward, landed in Sicily, where he was honourably received at the court of Charles the First, Earl of Anjou and Provence, and King of Naples and Sicily, and there first heard of his father, King Henry's death. After a short stay here, he was conducted by Charles to the Roman court, where, with his familiar friend, Pope Gregory the Tenth, King Edward the First spent some time, and thence passed into Burgundy. We next find him at the French Court, where he was received with distinguished honours by his cousin King Philip the Third, to whom Edward did homage for his hereditary lands, and received formal possession of them. Having visited other parts of France, he embarked for England, and landed at Dover, on August 2, 1274, and was crowned at Westminster, on the Sunday after the feast of the Assumption, being the 19th of that month in the same year.

In 1282, Pedro of Arragon, in right of his wife, having claimed the crown of Sicily, the dispute, it was agreed, Charles and he should determine by single combat, at Bordeaux, in the presence of King Edward the First, as Umpire; but on the day appointed,* and while

* Easter-day, 1282, the first bell at Vespers being the signal for the massacre. The Papists in this, and in that of St. Bartholomew, 1572, appear to have had no hesitation in appropriating the hour of the observance of their religious Charles awaited his arrival, Pedro seized upon the kingdom of Sicily, and perpetrated that horrible massacre of the French, men, women, and children, eternised in history as 'the Sicilian Vespers.' Shortly after, Charles Prince of Salerno, son of the King of Naples, was taken prisoner by Pedro, and closely confined till 1285, when he was ransomed by King Edward for the sum of thirty thousand silver marks; and became Charles the Second, King of Naples.

The library of the recently deceased Duke of Genoa, consisting chiefly of works on Military Science, and among them more than four hundred volumes of Manuscripts, in the Italian and other languages, is by order of the Duchess, being made available for the use of the public, to whom the library is to be opened on January 1, 1856.

JACOBITE MEMENTOS.

David Lord Ogilby, afterwards fourth Earl of Airly, joined the Stuart cause at Edinburgh, in October, 1745, at the head of a regiment of six hundred men, principally his own friends and retainers from the County of Forfar. Lord Ogilby's regiment took an active part at the battle of Culloden, which proved so disastrous to the interest of the Chevalier, and Lady Ogilby equally as loyal as her husband accompanied him to the battle field, where she was taken prisoner and conducted to Edinburgh Castle, from which in the course of a few months she escaped. The silver drinking cup, and the sword worn by Lord Ogilby at Culloden, commemorative spoils of that bloody conflict, are now in the possession of Mr. James Dickson, Distributor of Stamps, at Kiriemuir. The cup bears the arms of Ogilby of Airly, and the sword has the following inscriptions in French and German:—

Si la Fortune me tourmente,
L'Espérance me contente.

Wer nicht lust hat zu Schönen pferds,
Ein blankes Schwerdt,
Ein Schines Weib,
Hat kein Soldaten herts in Lieb.

The latter may be thus rendered—

Who has not pleasure in fine horses,
In a bright Sword,
And beautiful Woman,
Has no Soldier's heart in his body.

HORNBOK OF THE OLDER DAY.

— Most venerable Code!

Learning's first cradle and its last abode.

Hornbooks are now so completely superseded by the Battledore, and the various forms of Reading made Easy, that they are rarely met with, and few persons believe that such was formerly the means adopted to teach the infantine ideas how to shoot. In manuscripts of the fourteenth and fifteenth Centuries, a nearly similar mode of disposition of the contents of the Horn-book may occasionally but rarely be met with; the alphabet being in all instances seen by the writer preceded by the +, hence the alphabet thus disposed was called "the Cris Cros," or Christ Cross Row.* Some writers state it was so designated because a cross was prefixed to the alphabet in the old primers; but as probably from a superstitious custom of writing the alphabet in the form of a +, by way of charm; a custom which has been solemnly practised by bishops in the consecration of churches.†

The Primer (Primarius, Lat.) was a small book of prayers in which children were taught to read, so named from the Romish book of Devotions, which King Henry VII., in 1545, ordered to be printed in English, and "set furth by the Kinges Majestie and his Clergie, to be taught, lerned and red." This gave the name of

* On the introduction of printing, other and imposing forms of inducing children to learn were adopted by monkish instructors, as in the instance of the block printed sheet, entitled Propugnacula, seu Turris Sapientie; the Bulwark, or Tower of Knowledge. Such broadsides were doubtless in the fifteenth century in common use in monasteries and schools. The so named Propugnacula, has its appellation on the left upper corner, printed in the form of a Tower; the alphabet in capitals, ascends by way of moral sentences, thus the following is the last line but one on the foundation of the Tower—

A. Fundamentum Turris Sapientie et Humilitas que est Mater Virtutum.

On the turrets are the words, Innocencia, Puritas, Timor Dei, Caritas, Continentia and Virginitas. These sheets subsequently obtained the name of a. b. c.'s, and more recently under that title, various admonitory publications addressed to children of a larger growth emanated from the press. Among them—

An A. B. C. to the Christian congregation,
Or a pathway to the heavenly habitation;
a broadside to which the name of Thomas Knell is subscribed, with—Imprynted at London by Rycharde Kele. No date is attached, but Kele's last known dated production is of the year 1552.

Quite in accordance with the dictum of Dr. Watts,—

A verse may catch him who a sermon flies; admonitory rhymes, called ballads or ballates, were also similarly so named, and in 1557, John Wallye or Waley in Foster-lane, and Mistress Toye, had licence from the Stationers' Company to print a ballad of "the a. b. c. of a preste called Hugh Sturmeij;" and another entitled "the Aged Man's a. b. c."

† Picart's Religious Ceremonies, vol. I. p. 181.

the Primer to elementary guides of a similar purport with the Hornbook.

From Christ Cross Row, probably for shorter pronunciation, it became popularly the Cross Row.* Robert Wyer was the printer of a poetical production, in seven line stanzas, entitled—The Mayden's Crosse Rowe, ending with Finis qd. Robert Wyer; a termination which probably implied Wyer was not only the printer but also the author. In 1569, Thomas Colwell had lycense for the pryntinge of a Newe Yeres Gyfte, or a New Christe-crosse Roo, called Purge the old Lavynt that yt may be Newe doo.†

Heywood in his Six Hundred of Epigrammes, 1562, 4to., has one "of the letter H," in which he asserts—

H is worst among letters in the Crosse-row.‡

Shakespeare in his Richard the Third, 1597, Act 1, sc. 1, makes Clarence complain to Gloucester, because his name is George; the King

— Harkens after prophecies and dreams,
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G;
And says, a wizard told him that by G
His issue disinherited should be.

Florio defines the word "Centurubla, a childes horne-booke; hanging at his girdle." This should be good authority, for Shakespeare in his Love's Labour Lost, 1598, has in Holofernes characterised Florio, and in Act V. sc. 1, makes Moth assert to Armado—"he teaches boys the horn-book." The French La Croix par Dieu, Cotgrave defines as "the Christs-crosse-rowe, or horne-booke wherein a child learns it."

Ben Jonson in allusion to the horn-book, makes Corvino, in his Volpone, 1605, while referring to the alleged infidelities of Celia towards her husband, point to his head, and exclaim—

Here
The letters may be read, through the horn,
That make the story perfect.

Act IV. sc. 2.

* Johnson in explanation says, the first line is the cross-row, so named because a cross is placed at the beginning, to show that the end of learning is piety. Grose, who fattened on the jocoseries of antiquarianism, has recorded a somewhat similar definition. An Irishman explaining the reason why the alphabet is called the Crisse-crosse Row, said it was because Christ's cross was prefixed at the beginning and end of it. Olio, 1798, p. 195.

† Kemble might have adduced this among his authorities for the pronouncing ache, a pain, as the letter H.

‡ The Horn-book is depicted in paintings by continental artists in the sixteenth Century. In one, painted by Bartolommeo Schidoni born in 1560, and who died in 1616; known as the Horn-book, and formerly in the Ashburnham Gallery, the girl holds the horn-book with the handle upwards, possibly her task was ended. In another painted by Crespi, and known as the School-mistress, the matron has the horn-book placed before the child, resting on her knee, and with her finger points to the letter she requires to be named.

The wire, stick or straw, that served to point to the letters which the child learning the alphabet was required to name, was called "a fescue;" and on early marked dials the figure XII or noon, was supplied by a cross; to this there is a humorous allusion in the Puritan, 1607—

Fall to your business roundly; the fescue of the dial is upon the Christ-cross of noon.

Decker's Gull's Horn-book, 1609, was a satirical guide or rather censure of the fashionable follies of the Town.

Peacham, in his Worth of a Penny, states—

For a penny you may buy the hardest book in the World, and which at some time or other hath posed the greatest Clerks in the World; viz., a Horn-book—the making up of which book employeth above thirty Trades.

A Mr. T. Playtes issued a prospectus of a Horn-book for the Remembrance of the Signs of Salvation, in Twelve volumes, 8vo., with Three hundred and Sixty-Five thousand references, or one thousand for every day in the year!

Locke in his Thoughts upon Education, printed in 1693, speaks of the ordinary road of the hornbook and primer; and in most of the shop-lists of the chap-book publishers at this period, they are enumerated for the hawkers, or flying-stationers, with Bibles, Testaments, Concordances, spelling books, primers, horn-books; writing-paper, paper books, and marriage certificates on parchment stamped.

Shenstone, born in 1714, in his delightfully quaint poem entitled 'The Schoolmistress,' commemorates the venerable preceptress of the dame school, near Hales Owen in Shropshire, in which as a child he was taught the rudiments of the horn-book—

Lo! now with state, she utters her command,
Eftsoons the urchins to their tasks repair;
Their books of stature small they take in hand
Which with pellucid horn secured are,
To save from finger wet the letters fair.

The alphabet on a square piece of gingerbread, formerly among the articles sold at Fun's Saturnalia, Bartholomew Fair, appears to have been commonly in use more than a century and a half since. Prior, in his Alma, notices

To Master John the English maid,
A horn-book gives, of gingerbread;
And that the child may learn the better,
As he can name, he eats the letter.*

The Catalogue of the British Museum Library describes a "Horn-book the Alphabet; Syllabarium, Lord's Prayer, etc., written in black letter of the type and orthography employed in the first half of the sixteenth century. Press mark 828 a 55." This description is very questionable. In Halliwell's Notices of Fugitive Tracts, printed for the Percy Society, he describes a horn-book of the assumed date of 1570?, with a woodcut representation, pp. 30-31.

* Canto II. Works, Edit. 1721, vol. ii. p. 64.

In the Museum of Thomas Bateman, Esq., of Youlgrove, Derbyshire, is a horn-book, discovered in the wall of an old house at Middleton, in March 1828. On the front, printed on paper, is the alphabet, etc., as shown in the woodcut—affixed to a thin piece of oak with a short handle, and protected "to save from finger wet the letters fair," by a piece of transparent horn, secured by small tacks. An equestrian figure of King Charles the First, with the crown of martyrdom, embossed on leather constitutes the back, and when first found, a narrow strip of thin brass was attached to the edge of the horn.

It was probably a Royalist Memorial disseminated soon after the decapitation of that Monarch, January 30, 1649. The initials T. H. were possibly placed there in compliment to Sir Thomas Herbert, a devoted servant of King Charles the First.

The woodcut illustrations are of the same size with the original horn-book.

Mr. Westwood at a meeting of the Archaeological Institute, June 1, 1849, exhibited three horn-books. One of the time of Charles the First; another with a figure of Charles the Second, and the third, an "abece" of later date, not covered with horn but varnished.* Two of these horn-books were again exhibited at a meeting of the Archaeological Institute, in the Museum of the Taylor Gallery, at Oxford, in the following year. They were there understood to belong to the collection of Sir Thomas Phillips, of Middle Hill, Broadway, Worcester-shire.

* Archaeological Institute Journal, Vol. VI., p. 414.

In the Illustrated London News, Nov. 16, 1850, is also a representation of a horn-book of the last century, stated to have been then "lately found in the old stock of a bookseller at Peterborough."

The horn-book was not always printed on paper, and attached to a thin piece of oak; they were at times printed on the horn, or the face of the printed paper glued or pasted to the back of the horn to be read through it.

Why the horn-book, a single leaf, should bear the appellation of a book has at times been questioned, but it once decided a cause when the late Lord Erskine was at the bar. The Court doubted the propriety of calling a printed sheet a book, when it could not be established by fact. "Yes, my Lord," replied Erskine as counsel, "by the common horn-book."

THE BIOGRAPHER OF CAMOENS.

John Adamson, the third son of Cuthbert Adamson,* Lieut. R.N., by his second wife Mary, daughter of John Huthwaite, Esq., of Seaton Delwal, was born in High Street, Gateshead, in the house now occupied as the Fulwell Lime Office, on Thursday, Sept. 13, 1787. In early life he was sent to Lisbon on a mercantile course, which he subsequently abandoned, and on returning was articulated to an attorney at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. His literary turn of mind appears while in Portugal to have diverted him from the pursuit of trade to that admiration and appreciation of Portuguese literature, which in later years was in his labours successfully developed. His first publication in 1808, duod., was a translation of the Tragedy of Nicola Luiz, entitled Dona Ignez de Castro; with some Remarks on her History. It was printed at Newcastle, and was favourably received.

In 1811, his legal attainments obtained for him the permanent appointment of Under Sheriff of Newcastle, this he retained till the passing of the Municipal Reform Bill in 1836, rendered that office no longer tenable. In 1811, he became a Member of the Literary and Philosophical Society in that town, and in 1825, accepted the office of Honorary Secretary, which he held till his decease. How well his endeavours and purposes were disposed towards the progress of that institution is evidenced by the extent and excellency of its library in its several departments.

The Society of Antiquaries of Newcastle-upon-Tyne was established Feb. 11, 1813, and Mr. Adamson, who had laboured successfully in its constitution, became their Treasurer and Secretary, and to their

* The Adamson Family were in the sixteenth century considerable landowners in the County of Durham. The wills of many of them are deposited in the registry of Durham, and prove them to have been substantial yeomen. The earliest will, dated in 1582, is that of Margaret Adamson, widow, of Eldon, in which neighbourhood they would seem chiefly to have been settled. Surtees states that a great portion of the Redworth estate, as well as a part of the Whitworth property was acquired by purchase from the Adamsons.

published Transactions entitled Archæologia Eliana, he was a frequent contributor. He was also a Member of the London Society of Antiquaries, and among other papers in their Archæologia, was the author of a paper illustrative of the Stycas and their varieties, discovered in a bronze vessel at Hexham, in Northumberland. Unable to appropriate sufficient time from the hours his other avocations demanded, he was assisted by the late Trotter Brockett, junior; the result of their co-operation was a lucid paper on a very difficult subject, greatly redounding to their credit. Mr. Adamson was also a Fellow of the Linnæan Society; a corresponding member of the Royal Academy of Science, Lisbon; a member of the Royal Society of Literature, and of various other distinguished societies at home and abroad.

That portion of his literary labours which will perpetuate his name, is his Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Luis de Camoens, printed in 1820, in 2 vols. In his acknowledgments to friends, he notices in particular those specially due to "Mrs. Cockle who obligingly versified his prose translations of those pieces which bear her initial." To this lady he seems to have paid the utmost deference, and to have spoken with great diffidence of his labours on that work. Mrs. Cockle's copy of the book, on large paper, is before the writer, and has prefixed a long and interesting letter to her, from Mr. Adamson, in reference to her co-operation, and the topics of the day.

DEAR MADAM,—I send you herewith the second and third chapters of my Life of Camoens, to which I can add nothing having consulted every authority. I have detained the first and second on account of some new matter. It is very kind of you to take the trouble to look over the MS., there are many errors I am afraid in it, not being much accustomed to composition above what is usual in an attorney's office. I feel extremely diffident on the occasion, and therefore beg you will alter any sentence or enlarge on any passage you think you can amend, for all which I shall feel grateful. The other chapters you shall have, and between us I hope we shall be able to make the work acceptable. I am sure it will be correct, and that very much research has been made and pains taken to render it so. I will consult some of my literary friends in London about it, for I am almost sick of the idea of publishing it here, there are so many trifling publications coming out and have appeared, this is entre nous. I shall go to London about the 8th of next month, and hope this time to get to Paris. You must come for a few days before I go, that we may consult, and I must work hard this month.

The work was published in London by Messrs. Longmans, and has long been, in the language of Paternoster Row,—out of print. It was ably and most favourably reviewed by Southey, in the Quarterly Review, for May 1822.

Disposed towards collections of Natural History, he formed an extensive one of shells and fossils; of the former, in elucidation of its objects, and for conveying information to others, he published in 1823, the result of his inquiries and observations in a work, entitled Conchological Tables; this too has long since been disseminated, and copies are now not obtainable. The collection was a few years subsequently disposed of in London, as from the frequency of importations from almost unknown portions of the globe by scientific and well-informed naval commanders, what specimens in that department of science were once rarities, were rapidly becoming common and greatly reduced in value, a shell that at one time was not procurable for less than ten guineas, was from these causes in many instances estimated as dear at ten shillings; hence, to arrest further loss, he availed himself of an offer made to him for its purchase; he sold it, and presented his fossils to the Museum of the Natural History Society of Newcastle.

In 1836, Mr. Adamson printed privately Bibliotheca Lusitania, a Catalogue of his collections in Portuguese literature, this he presented to friends, and for years latterly, being without a copy, has often complained of his inability to obtain one. Subsequently, in the years 1842 and 1846, he printed privately Lusitania Illustrata: Illustrations of the Traditions and Minstrelsy of Portugal. The translations were by Mr. Adamson, but the versified form in which they appear was by his valued friend the Rev. R. C. Coxe, Vicar of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

On the morning of Monday, April 16, 1849, an oak beam within the chimney of Mr. Adamson's library, at his residence in Westgate Street, ignited and caused the entire destruction of his books, manuscripts, and choice collections on local and other antiquities. The whole was insured, but he was not disposed to press matters with the Insurance Office, and he arranged with them to accept twelve hundred pounds, a sum less than half of the cost, to say nothing of his rarities in Portuguese literature which had been presented to him by the Portuguese and Prussian governments, and various distinguished individuals: all were consumed.

The late Mr. Quillinan having at his death left in MS. a translation of the first Five Books of Camoens' Lusiad, which his daughters were desirous of publishing to add to their father's previous literary distinction, Mr. Adamson induced Mr. Moxon to publish it, but on finding that a loss of fifty pounds on the printing charges was unliquidated by a deficiency in the sale, he at once paid that sum, to preclude any anxiety in their minds.

Independently of his business as a solicitor, Mr. Adamson was Secretary of the Newcastle and Carlisle Railway Company, and also held other important situations, to all of which he rendered satisfactory attention; but the year 1855 appears to have been one of great personal infirmity and pain. In a letter to the writer, dated June 12, expressive of his desire to obtain certain desiderata in Portuguese literature to replace the loss occasioned by the fire, he expresses a fore-telling of what too soon happened—

Having been sadly afflicted with the severest fit of gout I ever experienced, which has annoyed me for upwards of four months, and under which I am still suffering, and almost crippled, I have been setting my things in order; and making a Catalogue of several curious and rare books which escaped the fire that consumed my Library.

He recovered sufficiently to effect his long-desired visit to the metropolis, and on Sept. 12th he called on the writer, and observed,—“I have long wished to have a day with you, to-morrow is my birth-day, when I shall complete my sixty-eighth year, and I am determined you, my friend here, the Manager of the Newcastle Railway, and myself shall have an agreeable day to-morrow at the Crystal Palace.” He would hear of no excuse, no avoidance of the pleasure that he had promised for himself, but insisted on the writer's being with him, early in the morning to breakfast, and start in good purpose to Sydenham. While there he seemed to experience considerable pain in the chest, which he appeared vainly to suppress. He admitted he felt great pain, but wished no one to observe it. At dinner, on wishing him many happier returns of the day, he thanked the writer for these kindly expressed wishes, but observed, he “had no desire to see another, and perhaps,” said he, “you will also think as I do, that I have lived long enough, when I can see around me three-and-twenty grand-children.” We parted, not without silent forebodings that his pains were more acute than he allowed them to appear; and he returned home on the morrow. On the evening of the 24th he became seriously ill, and he expired on Thursday, the 27th ult., at his house, No. 9, Victoria Terrace, Jesmond Road, Newcastle.

Long, very long, may his Memory be revered!

FOUNDATION STONE OF BLENHEIM PALACE.

In a common-place book of the late William Upcott, in my possession, is the following extract from some contemporary Diary, of the year 1705.

Woodstock, June 19. Yesterday being Monday, about six o'clock in the evening, was laid the first stone of the Duke of Marlborough's house, by Mr. Vanbrugges, and then seven Gentlemen gave it a stroke with a hammer, and each of them threw down a guinea. Sir Thomas Wheate was the first, Dr. Bouchel the second, Mr. Vanbrugges the third, I know not the rest. There were several sorts of musicke, three morris-dances, one of young fellows, one of maidens, and one of old beldames. There were about a hundred buckets, bowls and pans filled with wine, punch, cakes and ales. From my Lord's house, all went to the Town-hall, where plenty of sack, claret, cakes, etc., were prepared for the gentry and better sort; and under the Cross, eight barrels of ale, with abundance of cakes, were placed for the common people.

The stone laid by Mr. Vanbrugges was eight square, finely polished, about eighteen inches over, and upon it inlaid in pewter were these words:—

IN MEMORY OF

BATTLE OF BLENHEIM;

JUNE 18, 1705.

ANNA REGINA.

The battle of Blenheim was fought August 3, 1704.

EDWARD F. RIMBAULT.

GRANT OF TOWN ARMS TO IPSWICH.

The accession of Queen Elizabeth as a Protestant monarch was a source of much gladness to the people of England, and in that particular no town displayed more loyalty than that of Ipswich. The Queen, conscious of their good feeling, visited them on more than one occasion, and the charters which had been confirmed to them by King Edward the Sixth, July 8, 1548, she again confirmed by an inspeximus dated at Westminster, Sept. 23, 1560. In 1561, some notice of the Queen's purpose to again visit the town having been announced, assessors were named on June 10, in that year, to assess all the inhabitants to the charges of the Queen's entertainment on her next coming, and all who did not pay their assessments were to be disfranchised. At the close of July, the Queen was at Colchester, and went thence to Ipswich, and was entertained there from Wednesday, August 6, till the following Sunday. The amount of each day's charges are thus recorded—

Wednesday	108	9	8½
Thursday	104	14	3
Friday	100	3	9½
Saturday	108	10	6½
Sunday	134	9	4
	556	7	6½

This sum may be said to have been solely expended on the festivities of that occasion. The poor were scarcely remembered, and the entry of Elemosina, or dole, is only four shillings!

The governing authorities of the town, having obtained a confirmation of their charters and privileges, appear to have thought of their armorial honours, and required from William Harvey,* then Clarenceux, a patent, which was granted in the following terms:—

To all and singular as well Kings Heralds and Officers of Armes as Nobles, Gentlemen, and others which these presents shall see or hear, WILLIAM HERVEY Esquire otherwise named Clarenceux principal Heralde and Kinge of Armes of the Southe East and West parties of this Realme of Englande sendeth our comendacions and greeting; Forasmuch as auntyentlye from the beginninge the renowne of aunciente Cytes and Towns corporat hath ben comended to the Worlde by sundrye Signs and Tokens in shelds called Armes which are none other things than demonstracions of the good desert and lawdable art and costomes of the inhabitants of the same, Among the which I the sayde Clarenceux, Kinge of Armes have at this present specially noted the right worshipful and well disposed persons the Bayliffe and Burgesses of the Town of Ippswiche who hath well and worshipfully guided and behaved themselves in all humble obedience towards theyr prince and cuntrye from the beginning, so that they by theyr severe orders and couragious proceedings have rather augmented the estate and comen wealth of theyr sayd towne than otherways decayed the same, whereby they have well merited and deserved to be in all places of Honour and Worship accepted and receyved, and to have, use and beare suche signes and tokens in shelds called Armes, as shall be mete and convenyent for a further declaration of their commendable proceedings herein. And whereas at this present John Gardynner and Jeffrey Gylbert bayliffs of the sayde Towne of Ippswiche beinge uncertaine of the auncient armes belonging to theyr said Towne and Corporacion and not willing to do any thing preiudiciall to anye manner of person or persons hath instantly requyred me the saide Clarenceux Kinge of Armes to make a searche in the register and recordes of myne offyce and to assigne unto them theyr right auncient armes, Whereupon considering theyr request so iuste and reasonable I have accordlye made searche in my sayde registers and records, and have founde the antiquitye thereof so that I could not without theyr greate preiudyce alter or change the same, but accordinge to my callynge in office ratifye and confirme theyr sayde aunciente armes as followeth (that is to say) Partye par pale gules and azure, in the first a lyon rampant regardant gold armys and langues azure; in the second, thre demy botes of the third. And for a testimony and further encrease of theyr wourthyness I have granted and assigned unto them for an augmentacion of theyr sayde armes, healmes and creaste two supporters, that is to say, upon the healmes, a demy lyon golde supportinge a shyppes sable, on a wreath argent and sable manteled gules dobled argent; and for theyr supporters, two horses of the sea argent, commonly called Neptune's Horses maynde and fynned golde, supportinge the owle and auncyent armes belonging to theyr Towne and Corporacion as more playnelye aperith depicted in this, which armes healmes and creaste with the two supporters I the sayde Clarenceux Kinge of Armes by power and authoritye to myne office annexed and granted under the Great Seale of England have ratefyed and confirmed given and granted and by these presents do ratefy and confyrm give and graunte unto the said John Gardener and Jeffrey Gylbert at this present bayliffs of the sayde Towne of Ippswiche and to theyr successors for evermore by the name bayliffs burgesses and comonaltye, and the same armes healmes and crest to use and beare and show in sheld and banners or bannar rowles standerd or standers pennon or pennons pencell or pencells to theyr honour and wourshippe at theyr lybertye and pleasure without impediment lett or interrupcion of any person or persons. In Witness whereof I the sayde Clarenceux Kinge of Armes have hereunto subscribed my name and sealed the same with the seale of myne offyce, and the seale of myne armes the xxij^d daye of August in the yeare of our Lorde God 1561, and in the third yeare of the Reigne of our most dread Sovereigne Ladye Elizabeth by the Grace of God Queene of England Fraunce and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, etc.

* William Harvey, created Norroy by patent, dated Feb. 2, 1561, succeeded Thomas Hawley, Clarenceux, who died August 21, 1557. His being raised to that office is thus noticed:—"Nov. 21, 1557. The Queen (Mary) set a crown upon the head of Mr. Norroy, king-at-arms, and created him Clarenceux, with a cup of wine, at St. James's, her Grace's place." He died at Thame, in Oxfordshire, Feb. 27, 1567.

W. HERVEY als. Clarencieux,
King of Armes.

The original of this grant is now wholly unknown to the Corporation of Ipswich. For many years the Corporation papers were heedlessly thrown about the Council-chamber, no care was taken of them; and as all the townspeople had access to them, any person could take what he pleased. The original grant is believed to have been lost to the town many years since.

FLY-LEAF RHYMES.

On the fly-leaves of mathematical and other works, which passed from Nicholson's circulating library at Cambridge to the students in the several colleges, were frequently inscribed, in their leisure moments, many occasional witty allusions. The following have been noticed by the writer—

Robin o' Bobbin o' Bilbury Staines,
Than three score men has got more brains;
For three score men have been hang'd for theft,
While Robin o' Bobbin o' Bilbury's left.

Another, appears to have been written, possibly by some waggish pupil, on the botanical propensity of his tutor—

A little garden little Jowett made,
And fenced it with a little palisade;
Would you know the taste of little Jowett,
This little garden won't a little show it.

Joseph Jowett, LL.D., was Professor of Civil Law at Cambridge, where he died in November, 1813, in his sixty-third year.

PORTRAIT OF TOM D'URFEY.

Prefixed to the Pills to purge Melancholy, is a finely engraved portrait of D'Urfev, by Vertue, but it is a front face, the object being to divert the attention from the prominence of the Nasal organ. At Knowle House in Kent, is a painting of the Steward's room, with three persons, portraits of the Earl of Dorset's steward, his chaplain and D'Urfev, from this a Mezzotinto, a private plate was done, and in the Strawberry Hill Catalogue, p. 225, no. 81, is described as 'a humorous print—a Topping Meeting of a Parson, a Burgher Master's Steward, and a Poet.' Walpole so misrepresented the facts, though Cole, Add. MSS. Brit. Mus. 6391; has there recorded D'Urfev "never forgave the Earl of Dorset for having his picture done, as he was so ugly he never would sit for it." The writer of the Notes to the Effigies Poeticæ, observes in reference to this portrait—we never saw a human countenance which so entirely resembled a mask as this, and yet it is a strong resemblance of the author.

RUNDAL TENURE IN LANDS.

Can any Correspondent of Current Notes say what was the origin of the Rundale system of tenure in lands? The practice prevailed formerly in Yorkshire, and may do so still; the word balk, however, is well known in that county as implying a ridge of green-sward left by the plough in ploughing, or by design by different occupancies in a common field.

SHAKESPEARE'S CHAIR.

The chairs of distinguished men have long been pictorially transmitted to after ages as objects of curiosity and interest. In reference to England's dramatic bard, every relic has been venerated with intense feeling, and since the asserted house of his birth at Stratford-upon-Avon has been visited as a shrine by those who have admired his transcendent genius, there has constantly been pointed out a particular chair as that which Shakespeare used. These chairs have, however, been fabricated from time to time to suit the exigency of demand, and the public have been grossly deceived. The Empress Catharine heard that 'Shakespeare's Chair' remained at Stratford-upon-Avon, she was determined to possess it, and accordingly directed Count Woronzow to secure it, even at the price of Five Hundred pounds.* It is almost nugatory to observe, the

* The Empress was a zealous collector, and cherished the memory of her predecessor the Czar Peter, with almost a frenzied veneration. She had read or had been informed, that while in London, when he landed from Deptford, at the Tower Stairs, there was a public-house in Great Tower Street, at which he used to stop and refresh himself, and that, in compliment to his visits there, the Czar's Head was object of her adoration passed to St. Petersburg, and another chair was found to occupy its place. Whether it was the subject of the present illustration, is not a question—the drawing from which it is made is dated June 29, 1807, and it was purchased by some duped English nobleman, for a large amount, it is said two hundred pounds!

RIGHT OF WAY.—In many rural districts it is a popular opinion the passage of a corpse along a private road constitutes a right of way? I am unable to find any law bearing on the subject, and am anxious for some information on the subject, my own opinion being that the law would never sanction so serious a wrong as the above might prove in some cases, and which malice might so easily cause, since few men would commit the public indecency of staying a funeral procession and insist upon toll.

Llangollen, Oct. 1.

G.

The opinion here expressed is a popular error, and I am not aware that any person has ever attempted to moot the question in a court of law. The owner of an estate, a few miles hence, has to my own knowledge refused to allow a corpse to be borne along a private way or road upon his land supposing that it would create a public right of way, although by the owner's consent, I once saw a corpse carried along the same road, being the nearest way to the church; possibly from some such reasons has arisen the error that it becomes thereby a public way.

Ipswich, Oct. 3.

W. P. H.

The popular opinion is a delusion. Blackstone, vol. ii. p. 36, observes, "Right of way may be grounded on a special permission, as when the owner of the land grants to another a liberty of passing over his grounds to go to church, to market, or the like, in which case, the gift or grant is particular, and confined to the grantee alone." No right of way could arise, supposing permission to have been granted from necessity of the case, as that permission would cease with the necessity.

ANCIENT EPITAPHIAL RHYMES.

Our old poets formerly penned quaint acrostics for the most part in praise of the charms of some inexorably hard-hearted Chloe, or in place of sonnets on some scornful mistress's eyebrows, but as epitaphial encomiums they are rarely found. On the tomb of one Richard Swift, in the small parish church of Blakenham Magna, near Ipswich, is the following eulogium on one who lived in the early part of the seventeenth century, set up as a sign. Learning it was still there, she directed her ambassador Count Woronzow, to obtain the sign-board for her; but the Count, on application found that Boniface was simply a tenant, and in the disposition or removal of the sign-board he had not the slightest control; on applying to the owner of the house, there was no desire to part with the Czar's Head, till the Empress's representative proposed such terms as entirely quieted all argument, he proposed in lieu of the old sign, to replace it by a new one, paying all the charges, and a further sum of Five Hundred pounds. The old Czar's Head was soon shipped to St. Petersburg.

and was buried there. It is certainly very curious, and may serve to draw similar communications from others of your correspondents.

The lines are not particularly commendable for their conciseness or their correctness; and the word 'Epitaph' in the last line must, I apprehend, be a clerical error for 'Initials,' which, although it does not improve the sense of the sentence, helps us directly to its meaning.

Reader know that this narrow earthe,
Incloseth one whose name and worth
Can live when marble falls to dust:
Honor'd abroad for wise and just,
Alike the Russe and Sweden These
Report his prudence with their peace.
Deare when at Home, to his faith giv'n
Stedfast as earth, devout to Heav'n.
Wise merchant he some storms endured,
In the best porte his soul secured.
For feare thou should'st forget his name,
Tis the first Epitaph of Fame.

On a stone inserted in the chancel wall of St. Nicholas' Church, Ipswich, is another quaint inscription, a strange specimen of "an epitaph professional," seemingly composed by the bold mariner himself, by whom possibly directions were given in his will to ensure its due appearance in public. The rhyme is evidently spun out with considerable difficulty, and there is a taint of the familiarly blasphemous in its composition which I find generally among the monumental records of the sailors on this coast.

Though Boreas' blasts and Neptune's waves,
Have tost me to and fro;
Yet at last by God's desire
I harbour here below.
While here I at an anchor ride,
With many of our fleet;
Yet once again I shall set sail
Our Admiral Christ to meet.

Needham Market, Oct. 11.

LINCOLN GREEN.

The epitaph in Current Notes, p. 64, from Llangollen Churchyard, is repeated with slight verbal alterations in Highgate Cemetery, with the subscription—The private sleeping apartment of Richard Hislop of Islington. In Kensal Green Cemetery is the following—

Pain was my portion,
Phyaio was my faith,
Groans were my devotion,
Drugs did me no good.
Christ was my Physician,
Knew which way was best;
To ease me of my pain
He took my soul to rest.

In the crypt of Glasgow Cathedral, is this inscription—

Our life's a flying shadow—God's the pole,
The index pointing at him is our soul.
Death's the horizon, when our sun is set
Which will through Christ a resurrection get.

J. L. R.

MR ROBERT ADAIR, ROLLIAD, AND ANTI-JACOBIN.

On the 3rd instant, at the advanced age of 92, died the Right Hon. Sir Robert Adair, K.C.B., leaving behind him the reputation of having by his ability in various Embassies done the State some service. He likewise contributed to the History of his own Time by the Accounts of his Embassies to Vienna and Constantinople.

Endued with no small amount of ability and vivacity, he lost no time on his introduction into public life, which took place at an early age under the patronage of his powerful relatives the noble houses of Bedford and Albemarle, and Mr. Fox, in bringing his talents to their service. In addition to some spirited political pamphlets he contributed to the "Political Eclogues" appended to the "Rolliad," the poetical piece entitled "Margaret Nicholson," in which "Mr. Wilkes and Lord Hawkesbury alternately congratulate each other on his Majesty's late happy escape." Its object was to insinuate that Pitt and his ministerial colleagues had, for their own purposes, elevated the attempt to assassinate the King into undue importance. It thus commences :

The Session up; the India-Bench appeased,
The Lanadownes satisfied, the Lowthers pleased,
Each job despatched; the Treasury boys depart,
As various fancy prompts each youthful heart.
PITT, in chaste kisses seeking virtuous joy,
Begs Lady Chatham's blessing on her boy; etc.

His other contribution to this collection was entitled "The Song of Scrutina," written in the style of Ossian, and had reference to the famous "Scrutiny" after the Westminster Election in 1784, when Fox achieved a triumph over the Government candidates Lord Hood and Sir Cecil Wray. The following is the commencement.

Hark! 'tis the dismal sound that echoes on thy roofs,
Oh, Cornwall; Hail! double-face sage! Thou worthy son Of the chair-borne Fletcher! The Great Council is met to fix the seats of the chosen chief; their voices resound in the gloomy Hall of Rufus like the roaring winds of the cavern. Loud were the cries for Rays, but thy voice, oh!
Foxan rendered the walls like the torrent that gusheth from the mountain side. Cornwall leaped from his throne and screamed—the friends of Gwelfo hug their heads.
How were the mighty fallen! Lift up thy face, Dundasso, like the brazen shield of thy chieftain! Thou art bold to confront disgrace, and shame is unknown to thy brow—but tender is the youth of thy Leader, who droopeth his head like a faded lily. Leave not Pitto in the day of defeat, when the Chiefs of the counties fly from him like the herd from the galled deer. The friends of Pitto are fled, &c.

Some years after, considerable attention was attracted to Mr. Adair by the accusation brought against him in Burke's famous pamphlet, entitled "Observations on the Conduct of the Minority," of having been sent by Fox in 1790, to St. Petersburg to counteract the measures of Pitt, who, in conjunction with Prussia and Holland, had prepared a powerful armament to compel the Empress Catherine to give up Oekzakow,* which she had unjustifiably seized. Though repeatedly contradicted, yet so late as the month of April 1853, it was alluded to as a fact by Lord Malmesbury in the House of Lords, when it was authoritatively denied, with many encomiums on the character and abilities of Sir Robert Adair, by Lord Campbell. The "Mission" was believed at the time, and Pitt, in consequence, was urged, in vain, by the Duke of Richmond and others of the Government, to arrest Fox for High Treason. The Empress testified her gratitude to Fox on this occasion, (for Pitt was compelled to abandon his warlike measures,) by placing in her palace his Bust between those of Demosthenes and Cicero. This is alluded to in the "Anti-Jacobin," in the following lines, which have been attributed to the pens of Hookham Frere and George Ellis, but which James Boswell, the younger, on the authority of the nephew of the great statesman, states were written by Mr. Pitt.

Lines written by a Traveller at Czarco-selo under the Bust of a certain Orator, once placed between those of Demosthenes and Cicero.

The GRECIAN Orator of old,
With scorn rejected PHILIP's laws,
Indignant spurn'd at foreign gold,
And triumph'd in his country's cause.

A foe to every wild extreme,
'Mid civil storms, the Roman Sage Repress'd Ambition's frantic scheme,
And check'd the madding people's rage.

Their country's peace, and wealth and fame,
With patriot zeal their labours sought,
And Rome's or Athens' honoured name
Inspired and govern'd every thought.

Who now, in this presumptuous hour,
Aspires to share the Athenian's praise?
The advocate of foreign power,
The Echoes of latter days.

What chosen name to Tully's join'd,
Is thus announced to distant climes?
Behold to lasting shame consign'd,
The Catiline of modern times.

The following observations of Mr. Prior in his "Life of Burke" are not without interest at the present time.

"It seems to have escaped general notice that the misfortunes of Poland in her final partition may be, in some degree, attributed, however undesignedly on their part, to Mr. Fox and the Opposition, in the strong and unusual means made use of to thwart Mr. Pitt in the business of Oekzakow. They lay claim, it is true, to the merit of

* Oekzakow has now fallen into the possession of the Allies.

† The Court party delighted in stigmatising Fox as the modern Catiline. "But the part which he took in parliament subsequent to 1793," says Sir N. Wrexall, in his Posthumous Memoirs, "and the eulogiums lavished by him on the French Revolution, soon changed the Empress's tone. She caused the bust to be removed; and when reproached with such a change in her conduct, she replied, C'étoit Monsieur Fox de quatre-vingt-onze que j'ai placé, dans mon cabinet." having prevented war on that occasion. But if war had then taken place with England for one act of violence comparatively trivial, Russia, in all probability, would not have ventured upon a second and still greater aggression, involving the existence of a nation, with the certainty of a second war. Nothing, after all, might have saved Poland from the combination then on foot against her; but it is certain that Mr. Pitt, from recent experience, had little encouragement to make the attempt."

In 1796, appeared "Part of a Letter from Robert Adair, Esq., to the Rt. Hon. C. J. Fox; occasioned by Mr. Burke's mention of Lord Keppel in a recent publication," which is by no means a contemptible composition. It is a vindication of the writer's uncle, Admiral Lord Keppel and Fox; with characteristic delineations of Sir G. Saville, the Marquis of Rockingham, Lord North, and Byng; on all of whom he passes great compliments. The "ANTI-JACOBIN," ever ready to attack Fox and his party, thus satirizes the author:

Or is it he,—the youth, whose daring soul
With half a mission sought the Frozen Pole;—
And then, returning from the unfinished work,
Wrote half a letter,—to demolish BURKE?
Studied Burke's manner,—aped his forms of speech;
Though when he strives his metaphors to reach,
One luckless slip his meaning overtrains,
And loads the blunderbuss with BEDFORD's brains.

And again in the following "free translation, or rather perhaps imitation, of the twentieth Ode of the second Book of Horace," which, according to a memorandum of Canning's, was written by George Ellis.

A BIT OF AN ODE TO MR. FOX.

On^o grey goose quills sublime I'll soar
To metaphors unreach'd before,
That scare the vulgar reader:
With style well form'd from BURKE's best books—
From rules of grammar (e'en HORNE TOOKE's)
A bold and free Seceder.
It^t whom, dear Fox, you condescend
To call your "Honourable Friend,"
Shall live for everlasting:
That Stygian Gallery I'll quit,
Where printers crowd me, as I sit
Half dead with rage and fasting.
It^s feel! the growing down descends,
Like goose-skin, to my finger's ends—
Each nail becomes a feather:
My^{ll} cropp'd head waves with sudden plumes,
Which erst (like BEDFORD's, or his groom's)
Unpowder'd braved the weather.

I mount, I mount into the sky,
"Sweet[¶] bird," to^o Petersburg I'll fly;
Or, if you bid, to Paris;
Fresh missions of the Fox and Goose
Successful Treaties may produce;
Though PITT in all miscarries.

Scotch,†† English, Irish Whigs shall read
The Pamphlets, Letters, Odes I breed,
Charm'd with each bright endeavour:
Alarmists‡‡ tremble at my strain,
E'en §§PITT, made candid by champaign,
Shall hail ADAIR "the clever."

Though criticism assail my name,
And luckless blunders blot my||| fame,
O! ¶¶ make no needless bustle;
As vain and idle it would be
To waste one pitying thought on me,
As to "unPLUMB a RUSSELL."

He is again alluded to by the "ANTI-JACOBIN" in Rogero's song in the inimitable burlesque play, (written by Canning, Frere, Gifford, and Ellis) entitled "The Rovers."

There first for thee my passion grew,
Sweet! sweet Matilda Pottingen!
Thou wast the daughter of my tu——tor, law professor at the U——niversity of Gottingen—
—niversity of Gottingen.

These and similar attacks were, however, regarded by Mr. Adair as but fair retaliation for his own upon Pitt and his colleagues, and as he good-naturedly mentioned to the writer of the present sketch, who, when preparing a new edition of the "POETRY OF THE ANTI-JACOBIN," was kindly furnished by him with clues to many allusions in that witty work, "only gave him an importance to which his merits did not entitle him." They were however sufficiently great to induce his old antagonist, Canning, and successive ministers, to select him as Ambassador to various continental Courts, at all of which he acquitted himself so satisfactorily as to earn for him the dignity of knighthood, the title of K.C.B., and the highest diplomatic pension of £2000. per annum. VALUABLE BOOKS AT VERY REDUCED PRICES.

Allen's (Commander) Narrative of the Niger Expedition of 1841, with plates and maps, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 10s 6d (pub. at £1. 12s) 1848

The narrative of the Albert's solitary voyage is, to our thinking, one of the most remarkable instances of quiet courage and unflinching constancy of purpose to be found in any book of travels ever written.—Examiner. "Full of instructive and amusing details of African life."—Britannia.

Andrewes (Lancelotti, Episc. Wint.) Preces Privatae Quotidianae, Gr. et Lat., a New Edition very carefully corrected, fcp. 8vo. cloth, 3s 6d (pub. at 9s) 1848

Ancient Tournaments and Armour, 62 FINELY COLOURED ENGRAVINGS of Ancient Arms and Armour, Engines of War, Tournaments, &c. with a History of Chivalry (in German), oblong 4to. bds. £1. 4s Stuttgart, 1842

A well executed work; the plates are finished in silver and colours. Some of the combats are very curious.

Autograph Letters, a collection of nearly 300 Autograph Letters and Papers of celebrated Individuals of all Nations, engraved in facsimile on stone, 8 parts 4to. complete, 15s, or half morocco, 18s Stuttgart, 1846

This is a very interesting collection, including numerous British Worthies, Q. Elizabeth, Mary Stuart, Cromwell, and many literary characters; also individuals of all countries, from the Sixteenth Century to the present day. Each autograph has the merit of being a complete document in itself.

Bancroft's (Hon. G.) History of the United States, from the Discovery of the American Continent, last complete authorised edition; with numerous engraved portraits, views, &c. 6 large vols. 8vo. new cloth, £3. 3s Boston, 1854

This is the last and most complete copyright edition of this valuable work by the American Minister, containing in addition engravings not in other editions.

Barnard's Sketches in Switzerland, Scenes and Incidents of Travel in the Bernese Oberland, &c. 26 large and beautiful tinted lithographic drawings, folio, new hf. morocco, £1. 11s 6d (pub. at £4. 4s) 1843

"The very best delineations of Swiss Scenery, Glaciers, Passes, Travelling Incidents, &c. are given in the large views of Mr. Barnard. They combine in a high degree picturesqueness with truth."—Murray's Handbook to Switzerland.

Barrow's (John) Life and Correspondence of Admiral Sir Sidney Smith, fine plate of Sir Sidney at the Breach of Acire, and plans, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 8s 6d (pub. at £1. 8s) 1848

"We recommend these volumes to our readers. Sir Sidney Smith's naval exploits, his glorious repulses of Bonaparte at Acire, his services in the subsequent Egyptian campaigns, and, in short, all his public and brilliant course, may be followed out in these pages, with their official data and private correspondence, now for the first time given to the world."—Literary Gazette.

Beltz's (G. F. Lancaster Herald) Order of the Garter; Memorials of that Most Noble Order, from its Foundation to the Present Time; including the History of the Order, Biographical Notices of the Knights in the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II.; the correct Chronological Succession of the Members, and many curious particulars relating to English and French History from hitherto unpublished Documents, with woodcuts of Arms, a large thick vol. royal 8vo. new half morocco, uncut, Roxburghe style, 9s (pub. at £1. 10s) Pickering, 1841

"In our opinion (and it is no slight praise,) MS. BELTZ'S MEMORIALS deserve for research and ability to be ranked with the works of his predecessors (Camden, Anstie, Dugdale, &c.), and no historical library can be complete without them."—Athenaeum.

Bingham's (Commander) Narrative of the Expedition to China, from the commencement of the War to its termination in 1842, coloured portrait and engravings, 2 vols. post 8vo. new cloth, 5s (pub. at £1. 1s) 1843

Bojardo ed Ariosto, Orlando INNAMORATO E FURIOSO, with an Introductory Essay, Original Memoir, and Notes, in English, by ANTONIO PANIZZI, finely printed, 9 vols. post 8vo. new cloth £1. 10s (pub. at £5. 8s) Pickering, 1830-4

This edition is highly praised by Hallam in his "Introduction to the Literature of Europe." The poem as written by Bojardo has never been reprinted since 1344.

Botta's (M.) Letters on the Discoveries at Nine translated from the French by C. Tobin, illustrated by 50 LARGE FOLDING PLATES, consisting of Plan, Plates of Sculpture, Inscriptions, 8vo. cloth, 5s (pub. at 10s 6d) Longmans, 1

"This translation of M. Botta's Letters, with the accompanying valuable plates, is very acceptable. They are a valuable supplement to Layard's work."—Athenaeum.

Bourne's (Vincent) Poetical Works, both in Latin English, the Latin Poems having an English translation the opposite pages, printed by C. Whittingham, fcp. 8vo. cloth, 3s Pickering, 1

"I love the memory of Vincent Bourne."—Cowper.

Boutell's Christian Monuments in England Historical and Descriptive Sketch of the various Classes Monumental Memorials which have been in use in Country from the time of the Norman Conquest, numerous wood engravings, royal 8vo. new cloth, 5s (pub. at 15s) 1

Boutell's (Rev. C.) Monumental Brasses of England a Series of 149 Engravings upon Wood, from valuable Memorials with descriptive Notices, royal 8vo. new cloth, 8s (pub. at £1. 8s)—A copy on LARGE PAPER, printed in folio (a handsome book, printed to range with Dugdale, &c.), new cloth, £1. 10s (pub. at £3. 3s) 1

"The amount of information conveyed in moderate compass, in above attractive work, renders this collection of examples of Costume, Decorative Design, and of Heraldry, highly acceptable. They are made by minute and faithful exactness, and their variety is striking."—Arch Journal.

Brenton's (Capt.) Naval History of Great Britain brought down to the present time, from Official Documents and other authentic sources, numerous portraits and plates, 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, 14s (pub. at £1. 11s 6d) 1

This important work has long been an esteemed Chronicle of triumph exploits of the British Navy.

Bridgewater Treatise.—Boget (Dr.) on ANIMAL VEGETABLE PHYSIOLOGY, second edition, with nearly 500 woodcuts, 2 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 16s (pub. at £1. 10s) 1

Brougham's (Lord) Sketches of Statesmen flourished in the Time of George III. with Remarks Party, and on the French Revolution, three series complete, 6 vols. 18mo. in 3, cloth, 6s 6d 1

This well known and interesting work comprises upwards of 100 biographies.

Brougham's (Lord) Lives of Men of Letters and SCIENCE, who flourished in the Time of George III., with beautiful engravings on steel, 8vo. new half morocco, 7s (pub. at £1. 1s) C. Knight, 1

Burke's (Rt. Hon. E.) Correspondence with eminent Persons between the year 1744 and the period of his Death in 1797, edited by Earl Fitzwilliam and Sir Bourke, fine portrait, 4 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 14s (pub. at £2. 2s) 1

This valuable work contains numerous Historical and Biographical Notes, and Original Letters from the leading Statesmen of the age and forms an Autobiography of this celebrated Statesman and Writer.

Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, rendered more intelligibly with the help of Modern Prose, by J. Saunders; also CABINET PICTURES OF ENGLISH LIFE, from Chaucer, numerous engravings, 3 vols. 18mo. in 1, cloth, 1s 6d C. Knight, 1

A very useful and instructive companion to the readers of Chaucer's Poems, throwing much light upon the mysteries of antique spellings, &c.

Chaucer's Romaunt of the Rose, Troilus and CRESIDA, &c. with Life by Sir Harris Nicolas, 3 vols. 8vo. new cloth, 18s (pub. at £1. 11s 6d) 1

This forms a Supplement to Tyrwhitt's Edition, and completes Poetical Works of Chaucer.

MADRON WELL CHAPEL.

Deep buried in entangled brushwood and heath, about a mile and a half from Penzance in Cornwall, are the ruins of Madron Well chapel, which though a good example of the well chapel, and in repute at the time of the Civil War, it is but little known, or, in fact noticed.

Doubtless it cannot claim so high an antiquity as most of its fellow ruins, yet there are one or two points for which it should not be wholly passed by.

The well, not very long since superstitiously used for healing some disease, but now dry, is in the south-west corner, and contrary to the usual custom, the only entrance is on the north side, usually assigned to Satanic influence. Opposite to the door, are the remains of a window; a low seat, with a slight moulding runs nearly round the building. The altar, a fine smooth slab of granite, supported on three or four huge masses of the same stone; has on its face a square sink nine inches on each side, and about an inch deep. The altar is one foot, three inches high, five feet, seven inches long, and two feet, nine inches in width.

This is not, I believe, the largest of our Cornish Well chapels; the highest part of the ruined walls is not more than five feet; the thickness around the well is three feet, in other parts, two feet.

Qn. Are there any other instances of the entrance to these chapels being on the north side? And again, was the square cut in the altar-slab, intended for the socket of a cross?

Under the south side of the Chancel in the church at St. Michael's Mount, Cornwall, is a small dungeon, it opens down from a seat, and seems tolerably secure from discovery. There are legends of bones and a huge skull being found there, which perhaps we should receive cautiously; it struck me as having been most likely a priest's hiding-place. Was it so?

Torrington Square, Nov. 7. T. H. PATTISON.

Wigs. Why is it that Wigs once so generally worn, are now fallen into disuse?

Chippenham, Nov. 2. S. G.

Fashion effects much in these matters, added to which, these lines may afford some solution of the question—

In days of yore, wisdom and lore,

Were center'd in the Wig;

But now, since skull, of both is full,

The peruke's found too big!

BELL AND MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS.

Mottoes on Bells are occasionally in Current Notes, but I do not recollect that you have given one that pleasantly expresses a quaint, but pious sentiment which I read some years since on one of the bells in the beautiful tower of Repton Church, Derbyshire,—

I sweetly toling men do call,
To taste on meats that feeds the soule.

JANE THACKER. 1622. GODFREY THACKER.

The following verse, on a mural tablet in the church of Leigh Delamere, Wiltshire, may be considered curious from the perpetuation of provincialisms so richly crowded into the third line.

Death in a very good old age,
Ended our weary pilgrim stage.
It 'twas to We a end of pain,
In hopes to enter life again.

The monument commemorates Alice, wife of John Browning, who died May 22, 1763, aged 72 years; and John Browning, her husband, who died April 7, 1764, aged 80 years.

J. BARNARD DAVIS.

Shelton, Staffordshire, Nov. 16.

The Epitaph noticed in Current Notes, p. 82, as being in Kensal Green Cemetery, is also in the abbey churchyard of Great Malvern, with some words different, and the grammar betokening an older date.

For Epitaph Collectors, there is one in St. Philip's churchyard, Birmingham, which might be classed among the ludicrous. It is written, I should think, by an Irishman. I forget the first two lines, they are however a lament for his wife, and he concludes by thus apostrophising Death.

O Cruel Death! thou should'st have taken both, if either; which would have been much more pleasant to the survivor.

M. J.

DR. JOHNSON justly observes: The business of life is to go forward, he who sees evil in prospect, meets it in his way: but he who catches it by retrospection, turns back to find it. That which is feared, may sometimes be avoided; but that which is regretted to-day, may be regretted to-morrow. We should, to be useful, decidedly condemn the indulgence of brooding over circumstances and events that thought cannot mend, because it unstrings the mind; and that once done, it is surprising with what rapidity all its peace unravels itself; and how much it loses of the power of judging rightly on the mixed condition of human affairs.

N

VESPERO SICILIANO.

The massacre of the French, called Vespero Siciliano, did not take place on Easter-day, as stated in a note in Current Notes, p. 74, but, according to Giannone, on the Tuesday after—nel terzo giorno di Pasqua, March 31, 1282;* or, according to Muratori, on the Monday after—nel lunedì di Pasqua di Resurrezione, the 30th day of the said month and year; he, however, adds—scrivono altri, nel Martedì, the 31st of the said month.† Bossi assigns to it the last date, saying—nel giorno 31 di Marzo dell' anno 1282.‡

F. S. DONATO.

A CHRIST CROSS RHYME.

Christ his Cross shall be my speed!
Teach me, Father John, to read;
That in Church, on Holy-day,
I may chant the psalm and pray.

Let me learn, that I may know,
What the shining windows show;
Where the lovely Lady stands,
With that bright Child in her hands.

Teach me letters, A, B, C;
Till that I shall able be,
Signs to know, and words to frame,
And to spell sweet Jesu's name.

Then dear Master will I look,
Day and night in that fair book,
Where the tales of Saints are told,
With their pictures all in gold.

Teach me, Father John, to say
Vesper-verse and matin-lay;
So when I to God shall plead,
Christ his Cross shall be my speed!

Morwenstow.

R. S. HAWKER.

HORN BOOK.—The two horn books, erroneously noticed at p. 77., as belonging to Sir Thomas Philipps, are the property of Mr J. O. Westwood, who also possesses a third, more modern, like the old ones in general form and appearance, but with simply a marbled paper back. In reference to the earlier specimens, Mr. Westwood further intimates—

I have compared mine with the one in the possession of Thomas Longman, Esq., Paternoster-row, with which they are in size, and almost in type; but his specimen has on the back only St. George and the Dragon, whereas mine have respectively the figure of the reigning monarch with his initials printed in gold on the back from a rude wood-block, thus enabling us to determine the precise date of the two specimens, as well as to afford an approximate date to that belonging to Mr. Longman, to which an incorrect period had been assigned.

FASTRADANA, WIFE OF CHARLEMAGNE.

In the Illustrated London News, Nov. 10, p. 565, is a facsimile of a curious inscription to the memory of Fastradana, the third wife of Charlemagne, which I read thus—

Fastradana pia Caroli conjunx vocitata,
Cristo dilecta, jacet hoc sub marmore, anno Septingentesimo nonagesimo quarto.
Quem numerum metro claudere musa vetat.

Some critics pronounce the last two lines to be nonsense; to me, the meaning is sufficiently clear—

O king of heaven, with respect to her deeds, although she turn to ashes here, may her soul be heir to that country, which knows no sorrow.

MONUMENTAL SCULPTURE AT FINHAVEN.

About a quarter of a mile eastward of the ruins of the Castle of Finhaven, on a rising ground at the junction of the rivers Lemno and Southesk, and at the foot of the famous vitrified fort, stood formerly the original parish church of Finhaven or Aikenhatt, in Forfarshire. It is supposed to have been dedicated to the Nine Maidens, whose festival is held on June 19, and the foundation appears to have been of a very early date, as it was rebuilt in 1380, and granted in free gift to the Cathedral of Brechin, by Sir Alexander Lindsay of Glenesk, father of the first Earl of Crawford. Tradition with its busy tongue, has hinted that Lindsay was induced to this bestowal on the church, in the hope of obtaining her propitiatory prayers for some rash acts committed by him, and that he imposed a further penance on himself by undertaking a pilgrimage to the Holy Land; certain it is, that while on his onward course thither he died 'apud insulam de Candey.'

The old church is mentioned in 1576, but being situated in a corner of the parish, a new church in a few years after appears to have been erected for greater convenience, at the village of Oathlaw, being near to the centre of the parochial bounds; and the old church demolished. It would seem to have been but a small building, having an aisle on the south side, and the floor paved with square glazed tiles of the three primary colours, red, blue, and yellow, similar to those used in the principal Cathedrals of the middle ages. The land on which the church stood is now within the farm of Bogardo, and the immediate site of the church is staked out by a rustic railing. The holder of this farm in 1849, had the graveyard or old burying ground trenched, with a view of growing corn upon it, and during operations, the old tiled pavement of the church was discovered, and, also, two coffin slabs, one of which had entombed a man of arms; the other, one of the vicars of the parish. These monumental remains now lie within the railing, but no other vestige of the church is extant.

The first of these coffin covers, as here represented, has the cross and sword incised, while the circular cross had decorated with the very unusual number of eight pointed points is executed in low relief. No example of this kind is described or figured in Boutell's Christian Monuments in England and Wales.^{*} Of whom this mark of Christian remembrance was intended to commemorate, there is much perplexity of doubt—certainly it was not Sir Alexander Lindsay, or any of his descendants; he was buried where he died in the Isle of Candia, and none of his successors were interred at Finhaven till a comparatively late date. Lindsay's predecessors in the lordship of Finhaven are satisfactorily traced from the year 1250, when Cumyn, Earl of Buchan, then proprietor of the lands, and forester of the Royal Hunting Forest of Plater, within the boundary of which the lands and church of Finhaven were comprised, granted annually a certain surcharge out of them, to the monastery of Aberbrothoc. Philip, through whose boldness Robert the Bruce was enabled to capture the castle of Forfar from the English, was forester in 1308. Bruce's natural son, who fell at Dupplin, in 1332, held the same lands and office at the time of his death, and he was succeeded in them by Hew de Polayne, William Earl of Ross, and Sir David de Annand. This last was the immediate predecessor of Sir Alexander Lindsay, the rebuilder of the church.

To which, or, if to any of these earlier barons, the coffin lid pertains is alike matter of great uncertainty; the Annand family held possessions in the district for a longer period than any other, since they also possessed the lands of North Melgund in the adjoining parish of Aberlemno till 1542, when a female descendant sold them to Cardinal Beaton; but as this particular class of coffin slabs is ascribed to the fourteenth Century, it is possible, it may refer to either Philip the Forester, or to Sir David de Annand, as being the most likely of Sir Alexander Lindsay's predecessors who were buried at Finhaven.

The other slab found in the old burying ground at Finhaven, clearly indicates the status and character of the person it commemorates.

It is very rudely incised, and in much the same style of sculpture as the one at Cupar Angus, placed there in the year 1400, in memory of an old monk of that place. On the margin left blank in the woodcut, in old English characters commencing above the head of the figure, the following inscription remains—

HIC IACET HONORABILIS VIR D^{NS} RECHERD' BR...
VICARIUS DE FINHEVN QVI OBIT 20^o DIE

^{*} To the labours of this able reverend antiquary, the Editor gladly refers; his Monumental Brasses of England, 1849; and his Christian Monuments, embodying descriptions of Slabs devoid of Effigies, and Semi-effigial Monuments, 1854, should be found in every gentleman's library: they may now be secured, but the day is near at hand, when they will be no longer procurable.

The stone has been much broken, and unfortunately that part containing the last letters of the surname is defaced and partly wanting, and what may be deemed singular, neither the month or year appear to have been chiselled to record his decease. The arms on the shield at the feet of the effigy appear to be a rude representation of those of the Bruce family, a conjecture based on an old monument to William Bruce of Earls-hill at Leuchars, in Fifeshire, which has much the same arms, with a fleur de lis in chief for a difference. Possibly the vicar of Finhaven was a cadet of that ancient family, although, as from the following remarks it will be seen, I have failed to discover any one of that name as a prebendary of Finhaven.

The earliest recorded name of the parish priests of Finhaven, is that of John de Monte Alto, a cadet of a Norman family, who held the neighbouring lordship of Ferne, etc. He in 1379, was an attesting witness in the transfer of some contiguous lands, between his brother of Ferne and Sir Alexander Lindsay. John Knycht held the cure in 1435; and in 1474, John Lok was prebendary. In 1510, the office was held by Henry Quhyt (or White), who on the establishment of the College of Justice, in Scotland, in 1532, was one of its original members. According to Henry White's obituary, he died in June 1541, devising by his last will and testament, the revenues of certain properties towards the maintenance of a priest for saying masses for his soul, which were to be annually celebrated with lighted tapers, etc., on the Sabbath following the feast of All Saints, at the altar of St. Catherine, in the cathedral of Brechin. The names of subsequent prebendaries present nothing in elucidation of those of their predecessors, and in the absence of other confirmative evidence I am disposed to consider the slab with its effigy, as belonging to some vicar who officiated at Finhaven, in the intervening period between the time of Monte Alto and Knycht.

EARLY EDUCATION.—Choose letimes the courses and vocations you mean your children should take, for then, they are most flexible; not regarding altogether the disposition of the children, as thinking they will take but to that to which they have a mind. It is true, that if the affection, or the aptness of the child be extraordinary, it would be wrong to cross it; but, generally, the precept will be found optimum elige; suave et facile illud faciet consuetudo—choose what is best, and custom will make it pleasant and easy.—Bacon.

COPERNICUS OPPOSED TO THE BIBLE.

LUTHER, in his Table Talk, notices—

I am now advertised that a new astrologer is risen who presumeth to prove that the earth moveth and goeth about—not the firmament; the sun and moon, not the stars—like as when one sitteth in a coach, or in a ship that is moved, thinketh he sitteth still and resteth; but the earth and trees do move and run themselves. Thus it goeth when we give up ourselves to our own foolish fancies and conceits. This fool (Copernicus) will turn the whole art of astronomy upside down; but, the Scripture sheweth and teacheth another lesson, when Joshua commanded the sun to stand still, and not the earth.

HISTORY OF REYNARD THE FOX.

Goëthe's German version of the long celebrated and widely known fable or story of Reynard the Fox having been rendered popularly familiar by Mr. Arnold's translation, the general acceptance with which it has been welcomed, has induced the following remarks as illustrative of its history.

Enquiries of no common difficulty have occupied the attention of many erudite and learned men, and the origin of the story of Reynard the Fox, seems to be unearthed amid the fragranciness of Oriental literature; in the Anvár-i Suhaili, or the Lights of Canopus, the Persian version of the Fables of Pilpay; the original compilation of which was in Sanskrit, by Vishnu Sharman, whom, Sir William Jones asserts, we ridiculously call Pilpay. The author, or the work, appears however to have been named Bidpai, and possibly explains the cause of the misnomer. In the Sanskrit, or Persian, instead of the Fox, the Jackall is the hero of the tale, and the humour of the story is nearly evaporated by making the said hero a good and virtuous beast, instead of a bad and hypocritical one.

Whence or whatever may be the source of this fable or story, it certainly in its outline contains the germ of the extant History of Reynard the Fox; the second part of that history being in fact simply a skillfully diversified repetition of the first; both parts containing particulars of Reynard's disgrace, and subsequent pardon and favour.

Many opinions have been entertained and expressed as to the intention and purport of the story of Reynard the Fox; it is clearly a general satire upon all persons and things, and upon the clergy in particular, hence possibly its adoption and commendation by Luther. Grimm considers that in the earlier versions no genuine satire was intended, that is, so far as satire upon then existing persons or contemporary things. As an instance, he holds that the story of the Wolf's becoming a monk, had not originally a satirical allusion to the monks, but is a perversion arising from his being described as grey, and hence old, and in consequence called grey coat, etc. In the meaning of the names borne by the principal characters in the poem, Grimm observes these appellations are of three kinds—firstly, Animal names having a meaning in themselves, unlike names of men. Secondly, Proper names of men, given to animals on account of their meaning. Thirdly, Similar names given to animals with reference to some Historical Personages; though, as he says, it is not easy to distinguish between the second and third of these classes. These names have been appropriated to personages historically known, and have even been adopted with modifications by writers of eminence, but these adaptations have generally exploded by reference to the chronology of the periods in which these persons supposed to be so personified existed. Grimm's opinions are notwithstanding entitled to much respect, as it must be confessed he has succeeded in satisfactorily disposing of various theories which have at times been advanced in elucidation of the allegorical meaning of the poem.

Till Grimm took up the subject it was universally believed the Low German or Saxon poem, Reynke de Vos, printed at Lübeck, in 1498, in quarto, was the original story, while it was even then a diversified opinion whether the authorship rested with Heinreck von Alkmer,* or Nicholaus Baumann, writers who were said, or supposed to have lived at the close of the fifteenth or commencement of the sixteenth century; but this was an erroneous acceptance, the manuscript of a much earlier Flemish version, attributed to the middle of the thirteenth century, or earlier, was purchased by the Belgian Government, at the sale of Mr. Heber's library. The author of this Flemish version is said to have been named Willem die Madock (or Matoc), or Willem van Uterhoven. From this, a version in prose and verse was printed in quarto, by Gheraet Leeu at Gouda, in 1479; Caxton translated this volume and printed it in 1481, in one of the chapels attached to Westminster Abbey. Leeu's edition of Die Historie van Reynart de Vos was again printed at Delft in Holland, in 1485, and amid the facilities proffered by the extension of the art of printing, translations in most of the continental tongues became disseminated, and created a generally extended ramification of the Reynardine fables. They are subsequently found in all languages, and editions of multitudinous places and dates—no story was more popular, it diverted childhood, pleased if it did not instruct those of maturer years, and was the amusement and solace of greatly advanced age.

Fashion and the quest of novelty during the eighteenth century seem to have caused a partial forgetfulness of Reynard by the generality of readers, till it was awakened by the pictorial display of stuffed animals sent by Hermann Ploucquet of Wurtemberg, to the memorable Exhibition in Hyde Park, in 1851, when several of the groups were in positions conformably to Kaulbach's Illustrations to Goëthe's poem of Reinke Fuchs. Admirable in themselves, they induced a more general attention to the story, and the several versions of it; to satisfy which, various publications have emanated, and elicited the certainty of the public desire to obtain a popular version, and one that should be deemed an ornament in the library. Mr. Arnold's translation is wholly based on Goëthe's poetical recital adopting the usual heroic couplet as the most familiar representative of the hexameters of his original, and in all respects is fully such as is required by the reading public; while the engravings from the designs of Mr. Joseph Wolf, are pre-eminently distinguished for their admirable excellence of artistic skill, and the generally forcible illustrations they render to the unequivocally broad Hudibrastic humour of the work.

SCHOLA SALERNITANA.

The authority of Muratori, and of Gibbon, to prove who was the King of England to whom the verses of the Schola Salernitana were dedicated, having been more than once quoted, it may not be amiss to place before the readers of Current Notes who have taken an interest in the discussion, the words of these two celebrated authors, in order that they may of themselves judge of the credibility which their opinions invests the side to which they are really inclined. Muratori's words are—

Nel Secolo XI., la Città di Salerno singolarmente fiori per l'Arte della Medicina, e abbondò d'uomini molto rinomati in essa: del che fa tuttavia testimonianza il Libro intitolato La Scuola Salernitana, che alcuni credono dedicato, circa l'anno 1099, a Roberto, figlio di Guglielmo Primo, Re d'Inghilterra; ma altri più probabilmente a Edoardo Re d'essa Inghilterra, prima dell'anno 1066; giacchè la dedica del Libro li chiama Angliæ Regem. Fors'egli ricercò il parere di quei medici per conservare la Sanità; giacchè si grande era il credito di essa Città per la Medicina, che anche uomini di alto affare passavano in essa per isperanza di guarire i loro Mali.†

Gibbon's words, which are of similar import, may be thus quoted—

Salerno was enriched by the practice, the lessons, and the writings of Constantine, an African Christian, the pupil of Avicenna. The School of Medicine long slept at the name of a university; but her precepts are abridged in a string of aphorisms, bound together in the Leonine verses, or Latin rhymes of the twelfth century. Muratori carries their antiquity above the year 1066, that of the death of Edward the Confessor, the Rex Anglorum to whom they were addressed.*

* Alkmer was the author of the version printed in 1498, from its rarity, long almost unknown. It was reprinted at Estock, in 1517, without name of Editor or Printer. There were three subsequent editions, printed at the same place in 1522, 1539, and 1543, all in quarto, the former of these was edited by Baumann, and while the Lübeck edition was undiscovered, Baumann was by many held as the writer.

THE BRONZE GALLEY AT SEBASTOPOL.

On the hill to the right of Fort Nicholas, which projects out into the harbour, as seen from the western heights of Sebastopol, towers prominently a majestic monumental trophy, surmounted by a bronze galley of elegant form and elaborate enrichment. Upon the entry of the allies, many were the conflicting assertions made respecting its purpose; by some it was heedlessly said to have been commemorative of the Empress Catherine; by others that it was a symbolic emblem of Sebastopol. The position of this magnificent structure was doubtless intended to serve for more than its apparent intention, and the following observations, forwarded by a respected correspondent, seem to proffer conjectures in aid of a very satisfactory elucidation.

The bronze galley of Sebastopol is in all likelihood the Labarum of the Eastern Empire. Its origin was this. The Ark of Noah, that supernatural abode wherein wood, couched upon water, accomplished the rescue of our race, was the elected Symbol in the early Ages of the Visible Church; the place of safe sojourn for man, the exile upon Earth! Thus, the actual and the emblem shape of the Ark, graphic or graven, was that of the ancient vessel of every land, double prowed, to glide every way as the church would move; and crescent-formed, the Image of the Moon in her youth, that mystic Lady of the Sea! So was traced on Egyptian walls, the galley of Ogyges; and so in their marbles was shown the antique vessel of the Phœnicians and the Greeks, until the boat of Gennesaret took up and delivered onward the symbolic form to signify the Nave or the Church of the Apostles, on every shore and sea. Therefore, it was, that when Constantine framed his supernatural banner, he portrayed thereon a Crescent-ship lifted on high upon the stock and transome of a Cross, and underneath he wrote the legendary Promise of Victory from God, in such a sign—IN HOC, VINCE—the starry words he saw in dreams of night.

The word Labarum is a name of very harassed import among learned men, but the nearest approach to its origin appears to be traceable in the dialect of Armenia, and around Mount Ararat, where the vessel of Noah stood still. There, they to this day call the Ark "Baris," and possibly some Eastern prefix or change may constitute the total name. Be this as it may, we know that Constantine did lift the Labarum; that his Arkite Ensign was so called, and that it was a Church-crested Cross.

What is more probable than that the Czar with his semi-Scythian, semi-Oriental trust in Imagery may have built that brazen galley to frown along the Western Sea, and to become, alas, the treacherous Labarum of his fatal war.

INSCRIPTION ON A ROCK IN GALLOWAY.

I send the enclosed drawing of an Inscription on a rock in Anwoth parish, in Galloway, N.B., in the hope some of your Antiquarian correspondents may be able to give a solution of it. The characters are neatly and exactly executed, and are admitted by all who have seen them to be very ancient—and though they seem to belong to Scotland, they are found in various places in this country, as at Keilor, Arbroath, and elsewhere, which shows they had a signification which was generally understood at the time they were chisell'd on the hoary rocks on which they remain as a puzzle and wonder to all who behold them.

Should any of your numerous readers be able to give a satisfactory explication of these characters, it will, I am sure, create much gratification to many in this part of the kingdom, and in particular to

FREDERICK THE GREAT AND TOTTLEBEN.

Considerable interest is at this moment attached in reference to the ancestry of General Tottleben, the able defender of Sebastopol by his masterly application of means for repelling the invincibility of the Allies. The following letter from Frederick the Great, addressed to the Grand Bailiff and the Burgomasters of Antwerp, in interest of one of his officers, Colonel Tottleben, appears to relate to the General's grandfather(?), who would seem to have been a Prussian. The whole is a love affair, sufficiently romantic in its commencement, but gradually involving the parties in an unpleasant situation. Colonel Tottleben had carried off the ward of some rich burgo-master of Amsterdam, who had designed her and her fortune for one of his own family. The Colonel is pursued and taken at Weimar, and every means used to bring him to destruction; he is incarcerated and tried for the offence, and would, without a defence, have been condemned, if some friend had not furnished him the means of procuring legal assistance, by which his case is nanced in its true light. It is shewn that the young lady, who was an orphan born in the East Indies, had been encloistered without receiving the education proper for her station, and treated harshly because she would not receive the husband proposed for her. The monarch enters into the detail of the case, and asserts that the Bismarckians unjustly charge Tottleben with having obtained the protection of his ministers by corruption, and that he was recommended to his notice by the same friend who had furnished him with the means of defence; and that after having investigated the original papers of the process, the King offered to become the mediator between the Colonel and the guardians of his wife, and to be trustee for the assurance of the whole principal of her fortune against all accidents; thinking that the young people had already been too much persecuted for a quarrel which has happened a thousand times without the same stir having been made.

Monsieur, — J'ai reçu la lettre que vous m'avez écrite le 23 Juillet passé, pour me prévenir contre le Comte de Tottleben, et pour l'accuser de rechercher ma protection par des corruptions et par d'autres voyes illicites. Vous alleguez en preuve une de ses lettres, que vous avez interceptée, et où il remercie son Correspondant, de l'avoir mis au fait par ses avances de vaincre ses ennemis à Weimar, et de se procurer un accès salutaire à Berlin. Trouvez bon, que je vous dise, que je n'y saurois voir la noirceur, que vous prétendez y trouver. Vous avez fait poursuivre le Comte de Tottleben jusqu'à Weimar, et vous l'avez fait rechercher comme un criminel, pour une affaire, qui s'est présentée mille fois parmi vous, sans que vous vous soyez jamais avisés d'en faire tant de bruit, et de pousser les choses à des semblables extrémités. Obligé donc de se défendre, le pourroit il sans argent, tandis que vos commis en dépendent à pleines mains pour le ruiner? Sorti ensuite de l'accusation, que vous aviez intentée contre lui, par le secours d'un ami, qui a bien voulu risquer quelques francs, pour lui faire soutenir les frais de la prison et de la procédure, faute de quoi, il n'auroit jamais pu ni se justifier, ni se rendre ici, n'est il pas naturel, et dans l'ordre, qu'il en marque sa reconnaissance à son bienfaiteur et qu'il vous dise, que c'est à ses secours, qu'il est redevable de sa présence à Weimar, et du bon accueil qu'il a trouvé à Berlin. Quant aux corruptions, dont vous le chargez d'avoir été surpris de mes ministres, je suis bien aise de vous dire, que ceux ci n'entrent absolument pour rien dans l'affaire du dit Colonel, et que ce n'est ni par leur canal, ni par leur rapport, que j'en ai pris connoissance, mais que cet allié s'étant adressé immédiatement à moi pour demander ma protection, je ne la lui ai accordée, qu'après qu'il m'eut mis devant les yeux les pièces originales du procès de Weimar. C'est là que j'ai compris clairement, qu'il n'est question dans cette affaire, ni de rapt, ni d'enlèvement, comme il vous plaît de le qualifier, et que tout ce qu'on peut reprocher au Colonel de Tottleben, c'est d'avoir épousé une orpheline étrangère, qui l'en avoit sollicité elle-même et qui s'étoit jetée de plein gré entre ses mains, pour se soustraire, et son bien, à la cupidité de ses Tuteurs, qui l'avoient séquestrée du commerce du monde, et comme on ne peut que lui donner même une éducation convenable, sans lui donner pour s'accommoder de ses richesses, et pour en donner à quelqu'un de leur Famille, pour lequel il ne peut avoir une aversion insurmontable. S'il l'a épousée ensuite, cela s'est fait de son libre consentement, et avec toutes les formalités, qui rendent le mariage valide en tout pays du monde. L'unique défaut qu'on pourroit y objecter, c'est celui du consentement des Tuteurs: Mais outre que selon vos propres loix, ce consentement n'est pas d'une nécessité absolue, et que les Tuteurs ne peuvent pas le refuser, à moins d'alléguer des raisons très graves, contre la personne de l'époux, il est à observer, que les deux époux sont tout à fait étrangers à votre égard, que l'épouse étant née aux Indes, ne s'est jamais fait inscrire au nombre de vos habitants, que si vous l'avez considérée, comme sujette de votre ville, cette sujétion n'a été que temporaire, et n'a pu avoir de force, que durant le temps, qu'elle y a demeuré, et que ce lien cesse naturellement dès qu'elle transporte d'ailleurs son domicile l'administration de ces biens par la chambre des orphelins ne l'attachant pas plus à vos loix, que tant d'autres étrangers, qui ont du bien dans votre banque, et dans vos autres fonds publics. Supposé néanmoins, que vous croyiez avoir des raisons, pour obliger les deux Epoux à se conformer à vos loix, ils ne seront pas difficilement de s'y soumettre, et comme ils m'ont représenté, que le crédit de leur partie, dont la supériorité ne s'est manifesté que trop dans toute la procédure, les empêchoit de comparoître personnellement, et que par la même raison aucun Avocat ni Procureur n'osoit se charger, de leurs intérêts, c'est sur leurs instances, que j'ai chargé et autorisé mon Intendant des Domaines le Sr. Douglas de faire toutes les démarches, que vos us et coutumes exigent pour legaliser le mariage en question, aussi bien que de convenir avec vous, en y interposant même mon nom, s'il le faut, de toutes les précautions, que vous jugerez nécessaires, par rapport au bien de la femme du Colonel de Tottleben, de manière que son Capital lui reste assuré contre toutes sortes d'événements. Comme cet arrangement satisfait et remédie à toutes les objections, qu'on a faites jusqu'ici contre le mariage en question, je me promets de votre équité, que vous vous y preterez avec plaisir, et que vous rendrez prompte et impartiale justice aux deux Epoux, qui n'ont que trop souffert jusqu'ici par les persécutions de leur partie. Vous augmenterez par là la réputation de sagesse, et d'intégrité, que vous vous êtes acquis à juste titre, et vous ne laisserez pas de m'obliger très particulièrement, et de m'engager à m'employer avec plaisir toutes les fois, que je trouverai occasion de contribuer à votre satisfaction et à vos avantages. Sur ce je prie Dieu de vous avoir en sa sainte et digne garde. à Berlin 3 Aout, 1751.

Subsequently, as Count Tottleben, he is mentioned frequently in the history of the wars of that period; and appears to have entered into the Russian service. A portrait before the writer is designated, Le Comte de Tottleben, General d'Armée au service de S.M.I. de Russie, etc.

SONNET ON LOSS OF LIBRARY.

Shortly after the unfortunate accident, the destruction of his Library, mentioned in the notice of the Biographer of Camoens, in Current Notes, p. 79., Mr. Adamson sent to me the following sonnet, in which, while lamenting his loss, he exhibits his happy disposition to find something consolatory in the most adverse circumstances.

ON THE DESTRUCTION OF MY BOOKS BY FIRE.

Farewell, Companions of each passing year
Which o'er my head has roll'd. Ye cannot feel
The pangs which o'er my broken spirit steal;
Ashes are ye, while I indulge a tear.
To you I look'd in sad affliction's hour,
When illness press'd, in you I sought relief,
And oft have felt th' influence of your pow'r,
Assuaging sickness or consoling grief.
'Tis solace to me that in earlier time,
When my eyes feasted on your various lore,
The dire calamity was kept in store,
And the blow struck when I was past my prime.
'Twas willed by Him who judges what is fit—
'Twere impious to repine, 'tis duty to submit.

JOHN ADAMSON.

I take the opportunity of adding that Mr. Adamson's acquirements as a numismatist were very extensive, whether measured by his acquaintance with ancient coins, or by his collections of them. His account of the Anglo-Saxon Stycas found at Hexham, Archæologia, 1834, vol. XXV., pp. 279-310; and vol. XXVI., pp. 346-348, contains representations of about two thousand of these interesting relics of bygone ages.

THUNDER STORMS ON GREAT DEATHS.

Can such things be,
And overcome us, like a summer-cloud,
Without our special wonder?

Quoniam non est nobis collectatus adversus carnem et sanguinem, sed adversus Principates et Potestates, adversus Mundi Rectores tenebrarum harum, contra Spirituales Nequitias, in Celestibus.—Ephes. ch. vi. v. 12.

When in 1658, the Protector Cromwell lay a dying, there came on a mad and ruthless storm suddenly. Cataracts of rain beat upon roof and wall, lightning fell in floods, fierce thunder rolled around the palace where he groaned, and trees, the growth of ages were struck down as by a blow. "Behold!" said his Friends, "the rush of Archangels to marshal into Paradise my Lord's illustrious soul!" "Mark!" said his Enemies, "how the Demons of the air battle for the mastery of his spirit, and assemble to grasp it, when it glides away!" Thus wrote Waller—

We must resign! Heaven his great soul will claim,
In storms as loud as his Immortal Fame,
His dying breath, his last sighs shake our Isle
And Trees uncut fall for his Funeral Pile!
Around his palace their broad roots are tost
Into the air—thus Romulus was lost.

He is not dead, he breathes the air
In lands beyond the deep,
Some distant sea girt Island, where Harsh men the Hero keep.

Long generations! There is a bleak grim guarded Island of the main; a lonely rock, but vast, girded and imprisoned by the solitary sea. The hour is at hand, and the doom. The captive Emperor Napoleon must die. A sudden and supernatural tempest roars along the deep, lightnings rush, thunder boomed and crashed afar off and nigh; the voices of those who watched by that awful couch could hardly be heard; but in the pauses of that storm, there came ever and anon from the throat of the dying, the shout of battle, and the signals of the old command. At length, as his spirit passed away, and as though it rushed to meet the unseen armies of the air, his voice sounded like a Trumpet, TETE D'ARMÉE! TO THE FRONT, he said, and thus, Napoleon died.

And move

In hearts all rocky once, the late remorse of Love.

Long years! long years! The sinews of Old England that strove so fiercely in the Belgian field are summer dust! There is joy aloud in France! Shouts in the Gallic City, for the Daughter of English Kings leans on the arm of the Frank caressingly. Amid these multitudes, the corpse of Napoleon the Exile, returned to triumphant rest, rules them from his dust as from a Throne. His descendant, the avenger of his race; he who wears his very name, he and none other, must lead the Lady of England to stand in homage at the tomb of his ancestor. They pause at the threshold of that sepulchre, an Emperor and a Queen! Hearken! the sound as of angry waters gathers in the sky; once more lightnings leap, thunder cleaves the air like the charge of demon battalions. Is it the sympathy, or the wrath of invisible armies? The gratulation, or the trouble of the conscious dead?

In the notice of the Queen's recent visit to the tomb of the Emperor Napoleon, it is stated—

The weather, which looked very threatening during the progress of the review, fortunately continued fair, until it had terminated; but then, the rain descended in torrents, and it was in the middle of a thunder-storm, that the Emperor took his guests to the Hospital of the Invalides, there to visit the tomb of the First Napoleon.

The German motto, in Current Notes, page 75, col. 1, should have been printed thus—

Wer nicht Lust hat zu schönen Pferden,
Ein blankes Schwerdt,
Ein schoenes Weib,
Hat kein Soldatenhertz im Leib.

- IMPORTANT ILLUSTRATED WORK.
- 407 GRANGER'S BIOGRAPHICAL HISTORY OF ENGLAND, from the Egbert the Great to the Revolution of 1688; enlarged edition, with upwards of Four Hundred additional Lives. In this remarkable copy, the whole of the letterpress is struck off on ROYAL FOLIO PAPER, AND IS ILLUSTRATED WITH UPWARDS OF THREE THOUSAND ENGRAVED PORTRAITS, by celebrated Engravers, of the persons mentioned in the work. It includes also a CONTINUATION, containing upwards of SIX HUNDRED AND FIFTY PORTRAITS of noted persons during the reigns of William and Mary, Anne, the four Georges, William IV. and Victoria, which are not contained in Granger's work. The whole of the engravings are neatly laid down on fine cartridge paper, with space for inserting more; and bound in 19 LARGE THICK FOLIO VOLS. half russià, £88. 10s
- THIS IS ONE OF THE MOST EXTENSIVELY ILLUSTRATED COPIES OF GRANGER'S INTERESTING WORK EVER FORMED. It contains upwards of Three Thousand ancient and modern Portraits, engraved by FAITHORNE, HOLLAR, HOUSSAËRE, VERET, and more modern engravers of eminence. There scarcely a notable person, whether Sovereign, Noble, Divine Statesman, Warrior, Poet, Physician, Artist, Eccentric Quack, Mountebank, &c. from the earliest times to the present but who may be found figured in this work. It cost the former possessor, independent of many years labour, nearly £200.
- Granger's 'Biographical History' is universally allowed to be one of the most valuable works of the kind ever published. 'Is,' said Dr. Johnson, 'full of curious anecdote. I have read every word of it: it has entertained me exceedingly.'

This is one of the finest and most interesting of the "Voyages Pittoresques," and the most difficult to procure particularly on large paper as the above.

- 900 VOYAGE PITTORESQUE des Isles de SICILE, de MALTE, et de LIPARI, par Jean HOUËL, Peintre du Roi, with 264 fine plates of Views and Antiquities, Natural Phenomena, Costume, &c. original impressions, 4 vols. imp. folio, hf. russa gill, £4. 14s Paris, de Impr. de Monsieur, 1782-7
- The plates in this work, which represent more Antiquities than those in other Voyages Pittoresques, are printed in bistre, and resemble drawings.
- 901 VOYAGE PITTORESQUE DE CONSTANTINOPLE et des Rives du Bosphore, par MELLING, (complete with the letter-press), 48 VERY LARGE and SPLENDID VIEWS, in the finest style of line engraving, 2 vols. atlas folio, hf. russa gill, with calf sides, gilt leaves, only £5. 15s (PUB. AT 91 GUINEAS) Paris, 1809-19

The grandest and most beautiful of all the Picturesque Voyages, by a distinguished artist who resided eighteen years at Constantinople. CHOUKUL GOUVFIER, himself a traveller over the same ground, and Vivant Denon, are lavish in their praise of this extraordinary work, which is equally valuable for the faithful representation of the places, the beauty of the designs, and the perfection of the engravings. The plates are of unusually large size.

- 902 VOYAGE PITTORESQUE de NAPLES et de SICILE, par Saint-Non, containing upwards of 280 beautiful engravings of Neapolitan Scenery, Discoveries in Pompeii, Paintings, Antiquities, Coins, Buildings, &c. fine original impressions, 5 vols. imp. folio, hf. morocco, £4. 10s Par. 1781-86

This is one of the most beautiful and interesting works ever published on the Scenery, Antiquities, and Modern State of any country.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL FROM THE PIAZZA TO 136, STRAND.

G. WILLIS most respectfully informs his Customers and the Public, that finding the accommodation afforded by his Covent Garden establishment insufficient for the requirements of a large and increasing trade, his business is now removed to very extensive and centrally situated premises, No. 136, Strand, which probably form the largest and most convenient establishment of the kind in England.

At the same time he has entered into partnership with MR. HENRY SOTHERAN of Tower Street and the Strand, whose abilities as a Bookseller, and valuable collection of books, have been long known to the public.

As the Proprietors, from their long experience and known resources, possess unusual opportunities for conducting with success and on the most extensive scale, both at home and abroad, every department of their business, they will be enabled to offer to their customers, on the most favourable terms, such an assortment of the best Books, in every branch of Literature and the Fine Arts, as has never hitherto been brought together in a single establishment.

THE OLD AND SECOND-HAND BOOK DEPARTMENT will embrace an unrivalled collection of the best Standard Works, in all Languages, also Rare and Curious Books, Manuscripts, etc.

To the NEW BOOK DEPARTMENT will be added every work of reputation as soon as published; thus combining, what to the Book-buyer has hitherto been a desideratum, the advantages of an emporium both for Old and New Books.

In addition to a large collection of BOOKS SUITABLE FOR PRIZES AND PRESENTS there will constantly be kept on hand an extensive assortment of works of a superior character adapted to the wants of LITERARY INSTITUTIONS and PUBLIC LIBRARIES, estimates for which will be forwarded on application.

The MONTHLY CATALOGUE AND PRICE CURRENT OF LITERATURE, which has been published regularly for many years, will appear as heretofore on the 25th of each month.

In conclusion, G. WILLIS, while gratefully acknowledging the extensive patronage which has been bestowed on him individually for upwards of twenty years, trusts that the combined and increased exertions of himself and partner will secure its continuance, and that the confidence hitherto reposed in him will be extended to the new firm of

HEREFORDSHIRE NEW-YEAR CUSTOMS.

A comparison of the many diversified customs in the English Counties at various periods of the year presents much interest, and as customs, are peculiarly gratifying to many persons who are not strictly observers themselves of these interminable occasions for displaying our native character, arising from traditions of which time is fast obliterating all record. Whilst spending Christmas-tide at Bromyard, a snug little self-satisfied town, about fourteen miles from Hereford, I noted the following curious observances, which possibly are not confined to this one of our western counties.

On New-Year's Eve, as the hour of twelve drew near, within doors a pleasurable excitement became visible in the face of each person, then seated about the Christmas log; and without, the chanting of the last new carol broke upon the stillness of the night in discordant sounds with no very harmonious effect. So soon as the clock had struck twelve, there was a rush out of doors to the nearest spring of water, with this object; Whoever first brought in "the cream of the well," was deemed fortunate, and those who first tasted of it had also the prospective good fortune of luck following at their heels throughout the whole of the ensuing year. Meanwhile in the street, borne upon the night air, was heard the incoherent noise of the ribald laugh and the joyous song, lustily shouted by many sturdy labourers, who, though usually steady, "only this once" in the year, had made a rather long sitting at "the Lion," or "the Plough," and were then wending their homeward course at the friendly intimation of Boniface, who had warned them of the hour when sober men should be in bed. With these, happy souls, the custom is called the "burying Old Tom," i.e., the assisting at the departure of the old year, and in jocund exultations welcoming in that of the new.

After the noise and uproar of the funeral obsequies of Old Tom have ceased, the street is in its turn the scene of a tumultuous jollity, caused by bands of boys, chanting in the loudest possible note, and with an indisputable contempt for the Queen's English or Murray's Grammar, the following hearty good wishes, to those whose munificence may be excited by the plenitude of their unbiased, yet plaintive benevolence.

I wish you a merry Christmas,
And a happy New Year;
A pocket full of money,
And a cellar full of beer;
And a good fat pig,
To serve you all the year.

Ladies and gentlemen, sat by the fire,
Pity we, poor boys, out in the mire!

MADRON WELL BAPTISTRY OR CHAPEL.

Madron Well is situated in a moor, about a mile to the north-west of Madron church; and about two hundred yards from the well is the ruined baptistry or chapel, having been partially destroyed in Cromwell's time by Major Ceely, of St. Ives.

The interior as it is now seen, is represented in the above cut; the following is the—

PLAN OF THE CHAPEL.

On the outside of the building, the length is twenty-five feet; the breadth, sixteen feet; the walls are two feet in thickness. The altar stone, marked A, is five feet ten inches in length, two feet seven inches wide, and in height above the level of the floor, two feet ten inches. The cavity or socket, marked B, where a cross, or the image of the patron saint, St. Maternus, may have been placed, is nine inches by eight. C is a row of stones forming a step which divides the chancel from the nave. E E indicate the remains of the stone benches or seats. D, the doorway, facing directly north, is two feet wide at the entrance, gradually extending to two feet eight inches within.

An excavation, G, in the south-west corner, appears to have been used as a font, the water being supplied from the well above, and for which purpose there is an inlet in the wall at F. The drain marked H served to carry off the waste water.

There are still some remains of the outer wall that enclosed the building when Catholicism was the national religion.

The woodcuts have been kindly forwarded by Mr. J. F. Blight, of Penzance, in whose work on the Crosses and Antiquities of West Cornwall, to be published in the ensuing month, they are part of its illustrations. To the antiquarian readers of Current Notes, it is respectfully commended to their notice.

H. A. C., in Current Notes, 1855, p. 93, states that "many County and Local Historians allude to the poem written by Bishop Hall, entitled the Mysterie of Godlinesse, describing the miraculous cure of the poor cripple through the agency of the waters of Madron Well." Unless H. A. C. has misquoted the County and Local Historians, he has been greatly mised by them, for,— Firstly, Bishop Hall did not write any poem on the Great Mysterie of Godlinesse; that tract is in prose.

Secondly, Bishop Hall did not describe the miraculous cure of the poor cripple in his tract on 'the Great Mysterie of Godlinesse,' nor did he therein make any allusion to it. I gave the passage in Current Notes, p. 93, from the treatise of the good Bishop, in which the description of the Madron cripple does occur, from 'the Invisible World, edit. Lond. 1808, 8vo., Book I., sect. viii. p. 465; but this tract is also in prose. I observe that Lysons, Cornwall, p. cci., makes this mistake of citing 'the Mysterie of Godliness' for 'the Invisible World;' he, however, does not cite it as a poem, but a publication. Probably he also, like H. A. C., copied from preceding writers, instead of going to the original, and thus errors become perpetuated.

May I ask H. A. C., whether, from his own observation, he has ascertained that the door of the Chapel, near Cape Cornwall, in St. Just parish, 'faces the north,' as that in Madron does? I believe there are now no remains of that building in Park-an-Chapel enclosure. Borlase, in some manuscript notes, speaks of it, in his time; and the Rev. J. Buller says the remains were, in 1842, still to be seen. Account of St. Just, p. 45. I did not see them while I was incumbent of that parish, from 1846 to 1850.

Brampford Speke, Dec. 31.

G. C. GORHAM.

Mr. JOHN MARTIN, F.L.S., died at Froxfield, Bedfordshire, Dec. 30, in his sixty-fifth year. He was formerly of the firm of Rodwell and Martin, booksellers, 46, New Bond Street, and the author or compiler of a "Bibliographical Catalogue of Privately Printed Books, 1834," pp. 564, 8vo. On the decease of Mr. Wiffen, the librarian at Woburn Abbey, the late Duke of Bedford thought so favourably of this volume, that he unsolicited appointed Mr. Martin, as his successor.—The Bibliographical Catalogue was recently reprinted.

BUT AND BEN DEFINED.

The Cornish application of "but and ben" may be what Mr. Hawker of Morwenstow, Current Notes, 1855, p. 93, says it is; but the phrase is by no means confined to that district, nor does it bear in other parts of Great Britain the signification of "butlery and hall." All over Saxon Scotland it is still in colloquial use, every cottage having its 'but and ben,' as formerly every farm house had. The ground floor of a Scottish hynd's house may be thus represented—

The passage (A) from the outer to the inner door, is called the but-a-house, and in some cases is still partly occupied by the cow. Occasionally in cold weather I have seen a pig kept in it. The main apartment (B) is the only one having a fireplace (a); it serves the inmates and has a dresser (Fr. dressoir), or bink (old German, binke), opposite to the window, stored with crockery of all sorts. Two beds, large wooden boxes, with sliding panels in front, are placed (c c) across the cottage, nearly in the centre of its length, and a door or curtain occupies the space between them, to screen the entrance to the ben-a-house (C), which is used as a miscellaneous store-room, and generally containing a bed in which the eldest son or daughter, or the bondager or hired servant sleeps. So 'gang ben the house,' is to enter this inner apartment; and to 'gang but the house,' is to move towards the door. 'Ben i' the room,' and 'but i' the kitchen,' are phrases quite common among farm servants.

For kitchen, for parlour and hall;

But and ben are the Dutch buiten and binnen; and buiten or binnen gaan, is to go out and in, with the affix by. 'In by' and 'out by' are phrases heard everywhere. The ben-a-house is the Latin pen-us or pene-tral; the Hebrew penimah (פנימה), the benmost, innermost, or most retired, or private part of the house, peculiarly consecrated to the Penates or household gods.

WILLIAM BROCKIE.

GRAVE OF SIR ROBERT STRANGE.

In the recently published Memoirs of Sir Robert Strange, Knight, Engraver; and of his brother-in-law Andrew Lumisden, Private Secretary to the Stuart Princes, by James Dennistoun, of Dennistoun; are embodied much that will interest the reader, but there is occasionally a deficiency of minutiae, which the author might easily have avoided, and the following Notes are submitted in the hope of partially supplying that defect.

Robert Strange was born at Pomona, in the Orkneys, July 14, 1721. He served as an apprentice to Cooper the engraver, from 1735 to 1741; and during this time, among other occupations, was successful in engraving anatomical plates. At the memorable conflict at Cul-loden, he served the Pretender as one of his Life-guards, and after the fight was pursued, but contrived to escape to Paris, where he became the assistant of Le Bas, the engraver. He continued abroad unattainted.

In October, 1750, he returned to London, and in 1751, commenced business as an engraver. In June, 1752, Dr. William Hunter, then living in the Little Piazza, Covent Garden, between King Street and James Street; announced his Proposals for printing by Subscription, the Anatomy of the Pregnant Uterus, etc. illustrated by ten copper-plates, represented as large as life. The plates were to be engraved by Mr. Strange; the first was already finished, and was to be seen at "the engraver's, at his lodgings, at Mr. Tisoe's, pewterer, Parliament Street, Westminster." In these lodgings he appears to have resided from October, 1750, till March, 1754, when, according to the parochial rate-books, he commenced the occupation of the house, now no. 26, in Henrietta Street, Covent Garden. Here, in the general absence of numbers to the houses, he appears to have adopted the sign of "the Golden Head;" Hogarth had set up the same distinction over the door of his house in Leicester Square; now the northern half of the Sabloniere Hotel.

The house in Henrietta Street, for which he was rated at forty pounds annual rent, was then, in all probability, a private house, and not as now a shop. His family were resident there at Christmas, 1762, and probably till March, 1763, when the celebrated demirep Nancy Dawson, would seem by the rate-books, to have commenced the occupancy. Her name appears in the rate-books, in June, in that year.

Strange's next residence was in Castle Street, Leicester Square; after the numbering of the houses in 1764, it was number 14, but has been rebuilt, the site being that of the well-known Ham and Beef-house, the corner of St. Martin's Court; and hence, in the Gazetteer, May 18, 1765, was announced the following notice.

Mr. Strange, being to set out for Paris, in order to procure the necessary assistance towards executing the inferior part of his works, takes this opportunity to acquaint the public, that the exhibition of his drawings will end on the 25th instant, when the subscription for his late Proposals will likewise be closed. His works will be sold, as usual, at his house, in Castle-street, Leicester-fields; where, towards the beginning of winter, will be published two prints; one, a sleeping Cupid, of late in the Aldrovandi Palace at Bologna, and now in the collection of Sir Lawrence Dundas, Bart.; the other, a Madonna with the Child, in the collection of Mr. Strange: both from the paintings of Guido.

From 1775 to 1780, Strange resided in Paris; in the latter year, he and his family tenanted the house, no. 52, Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields. It was then doubtless, a private house, but is now a furniture-dealer or broker's shop. On January 5, 1787, in compliment for having, in the previous year, engraved West's picture of the Apotheosis of the King's children, to the great satisfaction of the Royal Family, he received the honour of knighthood. Sir Robert Strange died in Great Queen Street, at one o'clock, p.m. on Thursday, July 5, 1792, within a few days of the seventy-first year of his age.

How dearly his memory was cherished by his widow, as "the best of husbands, fathers, and men," appears by her letters; that, describing his death, is singularly natural and affectionate—"Two days after he was put in a lead coffin: but I would not let it be closed for eight days. Often, often did I visit his dear cold face, kiss'd it, and knelt by him." Dennistoun, in his Memoirs, vol. ii. p. 250, states—"On the testimony of his daughter, I am enabled to say that Sir Robert was buried in a family-tomb, at the cemetery of St. Paul's, Covent Garden, with a simple Tablet bearing his name; but I find no trace of this fact, either in the grave-yard, or the parish-register."

From the assertion here made, it is evident the writer was very deficient in his mode of enquiry; as the burial register unequivocally records his interment—supplying the additional interesting fact, that Lady Strange did not allow the coffin to close upon "her honoured lord," till the morning of the burial: the 12th would be the last of the "eight days" alluded to in her letters. Dennistoun found no memorial in the grave-yard—Did he look for it? Long known to the parishioners, was the inscribed ledger-stone to Sir Robert Strange's memory, in the watch-house plat, laid immediately in front of the parlour-window, at the back of the house, No. 35, in Henrietta Street. It is true, the weather, since 1792, had rendered it almost illegible, and on the recent arrangement of the grave-stones, it was found broken in several pieces, but enough remained to identify it; the fragments of the stone are now in the vault below the church; and the immediate spot is now covered by the head-stone of a family named Jones, recording their interments there, or near by, in 1837 and 1838.

During the last month, December, 1855, there has been placed a tablet of stone, about two feet, six inches, by two feet, four inches; inscribed—

HERE LIES

SIR ROBERT STRANGE,
THE EMINENT ENGRAVER.

BORN JULY 14TH, 1721.

DIED JULY 5TH, 1792.

This, however, has been placed at the foot, and not over the grave of the most eminent engraver that has existed; at the private cost of Mr. Henry Graves, printseller, in Pall Mall. It is, however, so greatly inferior to the transcendent merits of the deceased, that the same party, has, we are assured, concerted some measures for the raising by subscription among the venerated of the art by which he lived, a more fitting Testimonial, one that shall proffer a more lasting and more honourable memento over the ashes of the dead.

The family of Sir Robert Strange is extinct.

BERNARDO TASSO'S L'AMADIGI.

After perusing the interesting bibliographical article concerning the early editions of Amadis de Gaula, in your last Current Notes, pp. 95-96, it would possibly be of some interest to notice that so soon as the said Spanish romance was published, the Noveno Libro included, Bernardo Tasso, father of Torquato Tasso, the author of La Jerusalemme Liberata, took it into his hands, and wrote an Italian poem in ottava rima, entitled, L'Amadigi. Tiraboschi,* in reference to the work, says—

L'Amadigi è tratto da un Romanzo Spagnuolo, e il Tasso s' accinse a scriverlo circa l'anno 1545, mentre viveva tranquillamente in Sorrento. Egli il condusse a fine verso l'anno 1569; e l'Accademia Veneziana gliel chiese, per darlo alla luce, pensando a ragione, che grande onore ne dovesse ad essa venire. Ma il Tasso volle farne l'edizione a sue spese, ed ella uscì alla luce nel 1560.

The edition in my possession is that printed in Vinegia (Venice) by Giolito de Ferrari, 1560; a small quarto volume in fine italic character, with the portrait of the poet, and a small vignette at the beginning and end of each canto, which are in number one hundred.

Bristol, Jan. 7.

F. S. DONATO.

INEDITED LETTER OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

The following letter, by "the author of Waverley," was addressed, in 1818, to James Ellis, Esq., Otterburn, near Newcastle upon Tyne; and like most which emanated from that celebrated writer, will be found to be replete with anecdotal and historical interest.

Scott's early association with James Allan, the Northumbrian piper, is humourously depicted, but the fate of this "desperate reprobate," has yet to be told—in 1803, he was capitally convicted at the Durham assizes for horse-stealing; he, however, appears to have ended the motley tenor of his days within the walls of Durham gaol: he died there, Nov. 13, 1810, in his seventy-seventh year.

My dear Sir,—I am greatly interested in your index for Froissart, which must be very valuable to all antiquaries. If you will trust me with it about the 12th of May, enclosed under cover to William Kerr, Esq., Post Office, Edinburgh, I will receive it safe and void of expense, and cause print a few copies of it, which I can get done for a trifle, or rather for nothing, excepting having a very few for sale, and get you as many as you wish to make presents of. There is a separate index of this kind to Warton's History of Poetry, without which that confused mass of curious matter could scarce be turned useful, since one might as well look for a needle in a bottle of hay, as for any particular passage. I mention the 12th of May, because I return then to the Court.

I should be glad to have a copy of the Alnwick work upon Allan, whom I have often seen, and heard, particularly at the Kelso races. He was an admirable piper, yet a desperate reprobate. The last time I saw him he was in absolute beggary, and had behaved himself so ill at my uncle's house, that the old gentleman himself a most admirable piper, would not on any account give him quarters, though I interceded earnestly for him, "the knave," as Davie tells Justice Shallow, "being my very good friend." He was then quite like a pauper, with his wife, and an ass in the true gipsy fashion. When I first saw him at Kelso races, he wore the Northumberland livery, a blue coat, with a silver crescent on his arm.

I knew something of Allan's grandfather, or, perhaps, great-grandfather. They were Yetholmers and retainers at one time of the Marquises of Lothian. In the reign of Charles the Second, or James the Second, there was living near to Fairnihurst, the castle of the Marquis of Lothian, three miles above Jedburgh, a certain bold yeoman called Ringan Oliver, one of the strongest men in our country. This man was much irritated by the Marquis, repeatedly hunting over his fields when the corn was growing. And, at length, to mark his resentment of the injury, he shot one of the dogs. The Marquis, in revenge, came to his house at Smalcleugh, with a party, and among the rest Allan, all of them boys of the belt, who were to do their laird's bidding, right or wrong. Ringan had secured his doors and windows with withies fastened across them, and fired out on the assailants, while a maidservant, the only other person within the house, loaded his guns, of which he had two or three. He made good his defence, till a shot killed the poor maid, on which Ringan hewed down the withies, and rushed desperately out on his assailants with an axe in one hand, and his broad sword in the other. His foot, however, being entangled in the withies, he stumbled; and ere he could recover himself, Allan the tinker struck him down with a melle or hammer: Ringan was made prisoner, and sent to Edinburgh, where he died. But his son was upside with Allan, to whom he gave a most dreadful beating at the pass above Inchbinny near Jedburgh. I heard these particulars from James Vietch, a very remarkable man, a self-taught philosopher, astronomer, and mathematician, residing at Inchbinny, and certainly one of the most extraordinary persons I ever knew. He is a connection of Ringan Oliver, and is in possession of his sword, a very fine weapon. James Vietch is one of the very best makers of Telescopes, and all optical and philosophical instruments now living, but prefers working at his own business as a ploughwright, excepting at vacant hours. If you cross the borders, you must see him as one of our curiosities, and the quiet simple unpretending manners of a man who has, by dint of private and unaided study made himself intimate with the abstruse sciences of astronomy and mathematics, are as edifying as the observation of his genius is interesting.

The lines on the North Tyne are highly creditable, and record in easy verse much that one is willing to carry in memory. I hope Mr. Shepherd will continue his lines, and will introduce the other rivers. Drayton's Poly Olbion has always had peculiar charms for me, though many persons tire of it, and, for the same reason

* Storia della Letteratura Italiana, Tomo VII., p. 1168.

I like your Reedwater minstrel. Necessarily prevented from being prolix by the extent of his subject, a poet labouring on such a theme often throws out little brief sketches of landscape painting which, perhaps, like many other sketches, would have been spoiled by finishing.

As for Golden Thomas, of whom Mr. Hedley tells some admirable stories, we will let that fly stick to the wall,* and not disturb the eyes of the living by raking up the ashes of the dead: but after all, if "neat conveyance" were an allowable crime, I know few border families, but what have blots on their 'scutcheons. I understand Golden Thomas's estate went to collaterals.

I have not printed the appendix yet, but certainly shall do so, for private dispersion only.

Mrs. Scott joins me in kind remembrances to Mrs. Ellis, and I am always very much your obliged humble servant,

Abbotsford, 25 April.

WALTER SCOTT.

I go to Edinburgh on the 12th of May.

* The saying appears to have been a passing phrase of Scott's Rigdumfunnidos, the memorably jocund John Ballantyne; and was current with a certain meaning among those of his confraternity. Lockhart, in his Memoirs of Scott, edit. 1837, vol. iv. p. 170, relates the particulars of his first meeting with Constable, the bookseller, at one of Scott's Trinity dinners, in the summer of 1818. "Being struck with his appearance, I asked Scott who he was? and he told me, expressing some surprise, that any body should have lived a winter or two in Edinburgh, without knowing, by sight, at least, a citizen, whose name was so familiar to the world. I happened to say, that I had not been prepared to find the great bookseller, a man of such gentlemanlike and even distinguished bearing. Scott smiled, and answered—'Ay, Constable is indeed a grand looking chield. He puts me in mind of Fielding's apology for Lady Booby: to wit, that Joseph Andrews had an air, which, to those who had not seen many noblemen, would give an idea of nobility.' I had not, in those days, been much initiated in the private jokes of what is called, by way of excellence, the trade, and was puzzled when Scott in the course of the dinner, said to Constable—'Will your Czarish Majesty do me the honour to take a glass of Champagne?' I asked the master of the feast for an explanation. 'Oh!' said he, 'are you so green as not to know that Constable long since dubbed himself the Czar of Muscovy; John Murray, the Emperor of the West; and Longman and his string of partners, the Divan?' 'And what title,' I asked, 'has Mr. John Ballantyne himself found in this new almanac imperial?' 'Let that flee stick to the wa,' quoth Johnny; 'when I set up for a bookseller, the Crafty [Constable's cognomination] christened me the Dey of Algiers—but he now considers me as next thing to dethroned.' He added, 'His Majesty, the Autocrat, is too fond of these nicknames. One day, a partner of the house of Longman was dining with him in the country, to settle an important piece of business, about which there occurred a good deal of difficulty. The Londoner, by way of a parenthesis, said—'What fine swans you have in your pond there.' 'Swans!' rejoined Constable, 'they are only geese, man. There are just five of them, if you please to observe, and their names are Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown.' This skit cost The Crafty a good bargain."

HATS.—When did the practice of wearing Felt Hats obtain an introduction in England?

Newbury, January 14.

T. S.

Herbert, in his History of the Livery Companies of London, vol. II. p. 533, notices as extant among the City archives, Lib. Fr. 147—Les Ordinaunces des Hatters, temp. Edw. III.; but these were importations of hats, of which the quality or substance is not defined. Hats made of felt are said to have been first invented by a Swiss, at Paris, in 1404. In England all grades of society wore caps, according to statute; thus, later, Shakespeare makes Buckingham, while relating to Gloster his non-success with the Mayor and Citizens of London, allude to the futile trick for a vote in his favour—

Some fellows of mine own

At lower end o' the hall, hurl'd up their caps.

Richard III., Act iii. sc. 7.

Herbert also refers to Ordinances of the Hatter Merchants, 1487-8, 3 Hen. VII., but these were probably importations by the Merchant Haberdashers, who were as a company first incorporated in 1447. Felt Hats are stated to have been first made in London by Spaniards, in the reign of King Henry the Eighth. The hats worn by the Queen's bouffettiers, or Yeomen of the Guard, first instituted by King Henry VII., though not "moulded on a porringer, a velvet dish," are still covered with velvet, as was the custom in the olden time.

SCEPPE.—Bp. Fleetwood, under the year 1237, referring to the Antiq. Peterborough, p. 304, observes, 'Here I meet with the word Sceppe, which the glossaries forget, but it signifies a bushel.' Chronicon Preciosum, 1707, 8vo. p. 77. A contemporary manuscript note adds, the word is still used in Norfolk for a basket of wicker, that does, or should contain a bushel.

Skep, in the north of England, also signifies a hive for bees.

EARLY MERCHANTS MARKS.

In Current Notes, Dec. 1855, p. 97, are some interesting examples of these curious devices, copied from monumental brasses, and the enclosed rubbing from a brass in the chancel floor of Chacombe Church, in Northamptonshire, presenting the monogram of Michel Fox, taken by me July 19, 1854, may possibly be worth adding to them. The brass has a representation of the Holy Trinity, with—in old English—the following inscription:—

In the name of the Lorde I desyer you of yor Charyte [the word pray is omitted] for the Soule of Myghell Fox, Cytyzen and Groc^r of London, and Patron of this Church, and for y^e Soules of Mari and Clemens hys wyffes. Rychard Antony and Johā hys Sonnys. Anne Alys Jane and Alys hys Dowghters. wyche Myghell Decessyd the [blank] daye of [blank] in the yere of owre Lorde God a. mcccc. [blank].

On whose Sowles and all Crysten soules Jhū haue mēy.

The monogram is on the lower dexter corner of the slab; and in Hudson's Brasses of Northamptonshire, the brass, with the arms on the other corners, will be found described and engraved.

Deddington.

C. FAULKNER.

I enclose a drawing of the mark of the Merchants of the Staple at Calais, which appears in various parts of Hitchin Church, Herts.

The merchants are known to have had a Hall at Hitchin, of which there are still some remains in a house in the town, and probably the church was built, or beautified, by some of them.

January 14.

C. B. P.

Clutterbuck, in his History of Hertfordshire, vol. III., p. 12, states that the Town of Hitchin has been famous in early times for the manufacture of wool, when many merchants of the Staple of Calais resided here, as appears by the inscriptions on several brasses in the church.

Again, at p. 39, he observes, On the roof of the chapel, north of the chancel in Hitchin Church, are carved several of the marks formerly in use by merchants to distinguish their goods from those of other merchants trading to the same place, and it is probable that they may represent some of those borne by merchants of the Staple of Calais, of whom many are buried in this chapel.

Chauncy mentions an inscription in the church in his time—Hic jacent . . . quondam Mercatoris Stapule Uille Calisie, qui obiit xix^o die mens' Aprilis a^o D'ni m^occclij^o. Et p' a'ia Alicie ux. ej. q^e obiit . . . die . . . a^o D'ni m^occclx^o. Clutterbuck, p. 47, copies this from Chauncy as formerly there, but now gone; yet previously, at p. 38, he describes this brass as being still in the chancel, on the floor; the arms gone, but the inscription remaining, under the effigies of a man and woman, four sons and six daughters.

On the floor of the chapel north of the chancel, Clutterbuck, p. 40, quotes the inscription on a brass—

Hic jacet corpora Nicholai Mattok M^occatoris Stapule Uille Calisie ac^o Civis et Piscenarii Civitat. London. ac bone et laudabilis Generose Elizabeth, uxoris sue qui quidem Nich^o obiit . . . die mens' . . . a^o D'ni m^occccc. . . Et dicta Elizabeth obiit vicesimo sexto die mensis Septembris a^o D'ni m^occcccxxxv.

A descendant of this Nicholas; John Mattocke, of Coventry, Esq., by deed dated July 26, 1639, settled nine acres of land in Hitchin for the "maintenance of an able and learned Schole Master, that therewith, and with other revenues, he may teach and instruct and trayne up the children of the inhabitants of Hitchin, in good literature and vertuous education, for the avoideing of idleness, the mother of all vice and wickedness.

The Free-school, a house at the west end of Tyler's-street, in Hitchin, that had immemorably been used as a school-house, was, in 1640, begun to be rebuilt by voluntary contributions, and in 1678 was enlarged and completed by Ralph Skynner, Gentleman, who died in June, 1697.

BOTTLE CONJUROR.—Has it transpired who was the perpetrator of the celebrated hoax in reference to the performance of the Bottle Conjuror, at the Haymarket Theatre, in 1749?

Wisbeach, Jan. 4.

P. E. H.

This has long been a mooted point; but in "the Life and uncommon Adventures of Capt. Dudley Bradstreet, printed at Dublin, 1755," 8vo., are some particulars which may be deemed conclusive. The writer appears to have been engaged in a variety of adventures and intrigues; he asserts that as a spy for the government, in 1745, he joined as a volunteer the rebel army, and when at Derby, by his counsels induced the leaders to abandon the design of advancing on the metropolis, and return to Scotland. He also, according to his own account, contrived 'the famous Hoax of the Bottle Conjuror,' and to this volume is appended the play of the Bottle Conjuror, commemorative of that event. The volume, however, is so rare that it has escaped the notice of all the editors of the Biographia Dramatica.

AMERICA, A CENTURY SINCE!

In 1755, the following statistical account of English subjects in the Colonies of North America was taken from Militia Rolls, Poll Taxes, Bills of Mortality, Governors' Returns, and other authentic sources. These numbers were exclusive of the military in the pay of the Crown, and the negroes:—

Halifax and Lunenburg, in Nova Scotia	5,000
New Hampshire	30,000
Massachusetts Bay	220,000
Rhode Island and Providence	35,000
Connecticut	100,000
New York	100,000
The Jerseys	60,000
Pennsylvania	250,000
Maryland	85,000
Virginia	85,000
North Carolina	45,000
South Carolina	30,000
Georgia	6,000

Total . . . 1,051,000

The French inhabitants in North America, exclusive of the military and the negroes, were—

Canada	45,000
Louisiana	7,000

Forming a total of 52,000. The English on that continent being more than twenty to one of the French.

A century has elapsed, and now, thou land whose flag is bedecked by a Constellation of many stars, whose colours display the blue white and red of old England; what is the number of thy people—almost innumerable!

Warren's Ten Thousand a Year has recently been published in the Russian language at St. Petersburg; and is now, with the Diary of a Physician, being translated into the Danish, by Hans Christian Andersen.

Adam Miczewicz, the Polish poet, died of cholera, at Constantinople, Nov. 26th last. The coffin containing his body was brought to France by the Euphrate, which arrived at Marseilles on the 7th instant.

THE LEGEND OF MORWENSTOW.

In the ninth age, there dwelt in Wales, a Celtic king, Brechan by name: it was from him that the words Brecon and Brecknock received origin; and Queen Gladwise was his wife. They had, as it is recorded by Leland the scribe, four-and-twenty children: either these were their own daughters and sons, or, according to a usage of those days, they were the offspring of the nobles of that land, placed for loyal and learned nurture in the palace of the king, and so called children of his house! Of these, Morwenna was one. She grew up wise, learned, and holy above her mates; and it was evermore the strong desire of her youth, to bring the barbarous and pagan people among whom she dwelt, to the Christian font.

Now, so it was, that when as Morwenna had grown up to a saintly womanhood, there was a king of Saxon England, Ethelwolf by name. He also had many children, and while he gave to the famous St. Swithin the guidance of his sons, he besought King Brechan to allow the maiden Morwenna to become the teacher of the Princess Edith, and the other daughters of his house. She came, and she so gladdened the king by her grace and goodness, that at last he gave her whatsoever she sought.

Now the piece of ground, or the God's acre, which in those days was wont to be set apart and hallowed for the site of a future church, was called the station,* or in native speech, the Stowe of the martyr or saint, who gave name to the altar stone. So on a certain day, thus said Morwenna to the king, "A boon! O king! a boon!" "Be it so, my daughter! so it shall be!" Then made answer Morwenna, "There is a tall and stately headland in far Cornwall, and it looks along the Severn sea. They call it in that region Hennacliff, that is to say, the Raven's Crag. Often, in wild Wales, have I watched across the waves, until the westerling sun fell red upon that Cornish rock, and I have said in my vows, Would to God that a font might be hewn, and an altar built among the stones, by yonder barbarous hill! Give me then, I beseech thee, my Lord, a station for a priest, in that scene of my prayer, that so the saying of the Seer may come to pass,† 'In the place of dragons, where each lay, there shall be grass with reeds and rushes!'" Her voice was heard! Her entreaty was fulfilled, and so it is, that notwithstanding the lapse of ten centuries of English time, at this very day, the bourne of many a pilgrim to the west, is the station of Morwenna, or in simple and Saxon phrase, Morwenstow.

Morwenstow.

R. S. H.

* Station, or the title, from Jacob's Pillar, literally, the stronghold or fort of the warrior in the land of the foe; the garrison of God's soldier in the battle field, the region of Adam.
† Isaiah, chapter xxxv. verse 7.

ANOTHER CHRIST CROSS RHYME.

The following verses, from a hitherto unpublished manuscript, met my eye the very day on which I saw those of the Rev. R. S. Hawker, in Current Notes, p. 86; and bear so striking a resemblance to his, that I strongly suspect the two Canticles are derived from a common source, and yet the varia lectiones of that which I now copy are by no means unimportant, and have doubtless been adopted from a still more ancient version than the mediæval model on which his very elegant and picturesque rhymes have been constructed.

TIMOTHEUS.

A CHILD'S PETITION.

Christ His Cross shall be my speed!
Teach me, dear Mamma, to read;
That I may in Scripture see
What His love hath done for me.

Let me learn that I may know,
Why I came to dwell below;
Why above so bright He stands,
Wounded in side, feet, and hands.

Teach me letters, A, B, C;
Till that I shall able be,
Signs to know and words to frame,
And to spell sweet Jesu's name.
Then, dear Teacher, will I look
In that precious Holy Book,
Which doth Wisdom's Treasures hold,
"More to be desired than Gold."

Teach me, dear Mamma, to pray,
Bible verses day by day;
So when I to GOD shall plead,
Christ His Cross shall be my speed.

How must a neglected man of genius conscious of his own powers, pity those who cannot appreciate him, and who bestow what is due on mere pretenders.

Margaret, Countess of Blessington.

JOSEPH HAYDN, the author of the Dictionary of Dates, Book of Dignities, and compiler of several other works of general utility, having recently become paralyzed, the distressed position of himself and family was by the friendly operations of the press, fairly made publicly known. Lord Palmerston, greatly to his honour, transmitted 100*l.* Her Majesty, in consideration of Haydn's literary services, the extent of which few appreciate, or know the anxiety, labour, vexation, or destructive quality, save those who are so employed, conferred a pension of 25*l.* Mr. D'Israeli and others, more fully estimating the requirements of Haydn's helpless need and situation, contributed a sufficiency to place Mrs. Haydn and her family in a stationery business, 13, Crawley Street, Oakley Square. Haydn has not long survived, to be much indebted to the Government's munificent aid, amounting to 1*s.* 4*d.* per diem, evincing a nation's remunerative gratitude to a soul-broken, distinguished literary struggler for bread. He expired on the evening of the 17th instant.

PAPAL DESTRUCTION OF CLASSICAL MANUSCRIPTS.

Pope Gregory VII. is accused by Machiavel and by Cardan of destroying a manuscript of Varro, then extant in the library of the Vatican. The reason given for this illiberal conduct is as strange as the deed itself. The Pope, they say, having discovered that St. Augustine had made a very free use of the inedited part of that learned Roman's work, chose rather to burn the original than that his favourite polemic should be convicted of plagiarism. Several other classical manuscripts, having been confounded with that of Varro, are supposed to have perished by the same barbarous hand.

Gregory, notwithstanding the conceited sanctity of his last words—"I have loved righteousness, and I have hated iniquity, therefore I die in exile," had been the most ambitious and imperious of prelates. He wrote to Henry the Fourth of Germany, "I wish I may perish if I do not deprive you of life and empire!" The people of Sardinia having hesitated as to paying the exactions of the Holy See, this meek servant of the servants of God threatened their extermination in these words, "I will stir up against you the Normans and the Lombards who shall waste your island with fire and sword." On another occasion, this same Pontiff expressed to his legate in Spain similar sentiments, "I had rather that the whole country were overrun by the Saracens, than possessed by wretched Christians who refuse homage to the Holy Church." He had proposed to unite all Christendom against the Saracens, but died at Salerno in 1087, after having kindled a lasting flame throughout Europe.

WAYSIDE CROSSES.

During a recent ramble in France, I observed frequently small crosses of wood, roughly fashioned, placed on the mound, at the foot of the wayside crosses. These, I concluded, were memorials or offerings deposited there by the worshippers from the adjacent villages, or, mayhap, by the passer by; if so, it appeared to me as being an interesting and peculiar custom among the many errors and superstitions of the Romish Church.

I should be glad to know if I am correct in my conjecture; and if not, to be set right.

RUSSIA SUBSIDIZED BY ENGLAND.

Elizabeth Empress of Russia, by a Treaty in 1755, with King George II., was to receive, for ten years, a subsidy of 60,000*l.*, during which time the Empress was to maintain, ready for the service of Great Britain, 73,450 men; it was further provided, that should they be actually employed in the field, the subsidy was to be augmented to 500,000*l.*, per annum, but the troops were to be paid by Russia. What will the year 1855 produce?

E. PHILPOT, Lyme Regis, is respectfully referred to Current Notes, 1853, p. 90.

SHAKESPEARE'S ARCHDEACON OF BANGOR.

A clever genealogist has lately been examining into my pedigree, which is one of the oldest of the Welsh descents, and collating it with others; and, amongst the rest, with that in Lewys Dwnn's Heraldic Visitation of Wales, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and printed by that distinguished antiquary, Sir Samuel Rush Meyrick. He who is curious in such matters will find it in vol. II. page 290 (North Wales), and at the bottom of the left hand page, thus headed—Yr ach yma oedd yr gyntaf yn yr hên llyfr, i.e., This Pedigree was the first in the old Book. This pedigree, though incomplete, is one of the fullest and longest in the book. The lineal descent from Jestyn ap Gwrgant, King of Glamorgan, whose arms I bear; down to Davidd Vangor, i.e. David of Bangor, is clearly shewn, and is corroborated by old Welsh Manuscripts and other authorities. This David of Bangor, the Dean, is named by Browne Willis, David Daron; and, it is said, that in his house at Bangor, that scheme of resistance was concerted, which caused so much disquietude to King Henry the Fourth. It is also said, that my ancestor, David Daron, whose eldest son is styled Davidd Vilwr, i.e. David the soldier (he married Jane, daughter and heiress of Black David, the son of David Wynne, the son of Red Evan of Powys), was outlawed in 1406, for his complicity with Owain Glyndwr. He is, beyond all doubt, "the Archdeacon" of Shakespeare, in whose house Hotspur, Worcester, Mortimer, and Glendower meet. See First Part of King Henry the Fourth, Act III., sc. 1.

Shakespeare, it would seem, had erroneously styled him Archdeacon, or, he might have been Archdeacon, as well as Dean. If any of your antiquarian friends can throw light upon this matter, and upon the conduct and history of David Daron, the Dean; as well as upon the manner and term of his outlawry, they will confer a very great favour upon me. I am not a notoriety-monger, and, at the same time, I have no wish for concealment. You are at liberty to make known to any gentleman desiring information, my name, and condition, or to send him a copy of my arms, etc.

RICHARD AP DAVIDD DARON.

North Wales, Jan. 19.

Frederick the Great, while reviewing some troops, observed a soldier with the scar of a deep cut across the cheek. The king asked him, "At what ale-house did you get that scratch?" "At Cöslin, please your Majesty, where your Majesty paid the reckoning," was the prompt reply. How many are now in the same condition, but who has to pay the reckoning has yet to be seen?

- The Gentleman's Magazine has long been regarded as the most important collection of matter relative to Topography, Family History, and Antiquarian subjects generally, in this or any other language. Independently of the many interesting associations connecting it with JOHNSON and the literary men of his era, it forms a complete CHRONICLE and OBITUARY for ONE HUNDRED AND TEN YEARS.
- 448 GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE.—Selections of Curious Articles from the Gentleman's Magazine by Walker, containing Biographical Memoirs, Literary Anecdotes, and Characters, Antiquities, &c. 4 vols. 8vo. bds. 15s 1814

LARGE PAPER, INDIA PROOFS, in portfolio, PROOFS BEFORE LETTERS, with Text separately, £7. 7s (pub. at £13. 13s) 1841
- This charming work is generally considered the CHEF-D'ŒUVRE of the Etching Club. No poem in the language perhaps holds out so many opportunities to the artist. The exquisite little gems with which it is thickly studded, are all wrought out in a spirit of graceful poetry worthy of the genius of GOLDSMITH, and, by the beauty and delicacy of their execution, carry us back to the "olden time," when the greatest luminaries of Painting were also the first among the ETCHERS.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL FROM THE PIAZZA TO 136, STRAND.

G. WILLIS most respectfully informs his Customers and the Public, that finding the accommodation afforded by his Covent Garden establishment insufficient for the requirements of a large and increasing trade, his business is now removed to very extensive and centrally situated premises, No. 136, Strand, which probably form the largest and most convenient establishment of the kind in England.

At the same time he has entered into partnership with MR. HENRY SOTHERAN of Tower Street and the Strand, whose abilities as a Bookseller, and valuable collection of books, have been long known to the public.

As the Proprietors, from their long experience and known resources, possess unusual opportunities for conducting with success and on the most extensive scale, both at home and abroad, every department of their business, they will be enabled to offer to their customers, on the most favourable terms, such an assortment of the best Books, in every branch of Literature and the Fine Arts, as has never hitherto been brought together in a single establishment.

THE OLD AND SECOND-HAND BOOK DEPARTMENT will embrace an unrivalled collection of the best Standard Works, in all Languages, also Rare and Curious Books, Manuscripts, etc.

To the NEW BOOK DEPARTMENT will be added every work of reputation as soon as published; thus combining, what to the Book-buyer has hitherto been a desideratum, the advantages of an emporium both for Old and New Books.

In addition to a large collection of BOOKS SUITABLE FOR PRIZES AND PRESENTS there will constantly be kept on hand an extensive assortment of works of a superior character adapted to the wants of LITERARY INSTITUTIONS and PUBLIC LIBRARIES, estimates for which will be forwarded on application.

The MONTHLY CATALOGUE AND PRICE CURRENT OF LITERATURE, which has been published regularly for many years, will appear as heretofore on the 25th of each month.

In conclusion, G. WILLIS, while gratefully acknowledging the extensive patronage which has been bestowed on him individually for upwards of twenty years, trusts that the combined and increased exertions of himself and partner will secure its continuance, and that the confidence hitherto reposed in him will be extended to the new firm of

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, KNIGHT, ÆTAT. XXXII.

At a period when the public attention is arrested by the numerous accusations against individuals for having insidiously exercised their skill in dispensing deadly poisons to their kindred and wives; the case of Sir Thomas Overbury occurs to excite our most particular

* The Trial of the Earl of Somerset, for the poisoning of Sir Thomas Overbury; edited by Andrew Amos, Esq., late member of the Supreme Council of India; Recorder of Nottingham, Oxford, and Banbury; Auditor and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, etc., with portraits, 8vo., pp. 552. The work recently published by Mr. Bentley, at FOURTEEN SHILLINGS, having become the property of Messrs. Willis and Sotheran, has been by them reduced in price to FOUR SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

The woodcut is from a print engraved by Reginald Elstracke, shortly after Sir Thomas Overbury's death; it is of such extreme rarity, that at General Dowdeswell's sale, Sir Mark M. Sykes purchased an impression for fifty pounds. On the dispersion of the Sykes' collection, Woodburn was the buyer at seventy-four guineas.

observation, seeing that of all others, from the position of the murderers, the distinction of their characters, the malevolence of the conspiracy, and the range it was in purpose to have taken, it has no equal in history, neither before or since the perpetration of that diabolical deed.

The volume bearing the above title, embodies much that has not hitherto been printed, nor have the original papers been perused, or used by the historians of the reign of James the First, who seems to have been the presiding spirit of every bad quality, and by the subserviency of men, whose education should have embued them with more independence of character, many most disgraceful traits occur, simply from the reason to court his favour, and impose upon his weakness. The Howards of that day appear to have largely partaken of the royal patronage, and to have been utterly unworthy. The marriage of Lady Frances Howard with Robert D'Evreux, Earl of Essex; the bridegroom but fourteen years of age, and the bride not more than thirteen, has been celebrated in history by Ben Jonson's highly poetical espousal drama, the Masque of Hymen. This was the first characteristic event in a long series of incidents, all tending to an unexampled career of guilty enjoyment, magnificence, crime, and degradation. Her intrigues, young as she was, were continued in such a reckless course, that she seemed to be abandoned to all sense of shame. She intrigued with Prince Henry, and her general wantonness became so flagrant, that even he retired from her in disgust. As a woman thwarted in her object she appears to have breathed revenge, and according to the admission of Anne Turner, whose conduct was more memorable subsequently, the Prince was deprived of affording the Countess of Essex further provocation, by poisoning grapes at Woodstock.

Robert Carr, a countryman of King James, became the favourite of the monarch, and disgusting as in all particulars that connexion appears to have been,* the Countess, and her uncle, Henry Howard, Earl of Northampton, recognised in him the means of their further advancement, no matter by what crimes it was achieved, and these conspiracies would seem to have been contrived at the now Northumberland House, in the Strand.

* When the widow of Sir Walter Raleigh supplicated the king's mercy, and implored him to restore to her and her children Raleigh's forfeited estate of Sherborne Castle, with brutish feeling he denied her the boon, exclaiming—"I mun have it for Carr." If this fact cannot pass in the present day without exciting indignation, what must have been the feeling produced by this atrocious act on the contemporaries of Raleigh and Carr?

It was proposed to sue for a divorce between the Countess and the Earl of Essex, and to effect a marriage between her and this satellite of kingly adoption—King James not only sanctioned the proceedings, but impatiently urged them on, and dictated their final conclusion. The Countess, notwithstanding the flagrancy of her conduct, protested her innocence, and the jury of matrons who were employed on the occasion were deluded by the substitution of the daughter of Sir Thomas Mounson, who being thickly veiled eluded the detection of her identity. The divorce took place, but Overbury, who knew her infamous bearings, and appears to have been the successful director of Carr in his onward course, and to have really entertained a true friendship for him, endeavoured in every possible way to prevent the marriage—one that has no equal on record, as having been followed by consequences in which morality, law, and religion were so greatly outraged for the indulgence of guilty and impetuous passions.

Overbury was, by all the parties, considered as an impediment to the marriage—how to get rid of him was the subject of many consultations. It was proposed to involve him in a quarrel with one of the courtiers, and thus obtain his imprisonment. There were none who would quarrel with him, and the scheme failed. Sir Davie Wood, in some proceeding, had sought Carr's interest, and he consented, provided Overbury should be a sharer with him; this failed, and Sir Davie imbibed a hatred of Overbury, who he considered was the sole cause of his non-success. The Countess, aware of this ill-feeling, sought, under the promise of one thousand pounds, to induce Wood to effect Overbury's assassination. Sir Davie accepted the terms, but required a surety from Lord Rochester of a pardon from the king for the act; but as Carr could not ensure that instrument, Wood prudently declined proceeding. To poison Overbury was next determined, but the depriving him of liberty was essential to its accomplishment. Overbury was, by Carr's instigation, appointed to a ministerial appointment abroad; and he treacherously induced Overbury to refuse it; for this, the latter was on April 21, 1613, committed "for contempt" to the Tower. Sir William Waad, the governor, was dismissed under the pretext of unfitness, by having permitted the Lady Arabella Stuart a key to enlarge the limits of her range in the Tower; and succeeded by Sir Gervase Elwes, who "bled" to the tune of 2000*l.* for the place, besides a compliance with conduct required of him; and the gaoler, who had the care of Sir Thomas Overbury, was also moved to make way for Richard Weston, who had been by the Countess specially commended to that appointment. All this was accomplished in the brief space of fifteen days, and the poisoning was commenced on the 9th of May; all intercourse was denied to the unhappy victim of her vengeance, and the particulars detailed in the volume are most appalling. The poison was supplied by James Franklin, a physician, "then dwelling on the back side of the Exchange," and taken to the Countess by Anne Turner, the widow of "a Dr. Turner." From the Countess they passed to Weston, by the hands of Mrs. Turner, with the positive knowledge of Lord Rochester, and the connivance of the Governor Elwes. These poisons, however, operated but slowly, and Rochester, in his frequent visits to the Countess of Essex at her lodgings in Whitehall, having access thereto by a straight long gallery from St. James's Park,* frequently complained of the delay, and expressed doubts whether Weston was not playing the knave, and forgetting to execute his part? The eight several poisons which were administered to Overbury, were first given as a powder to renovate his health, and afterwards introduced in jellies and tarts. Mayerne, the king's physician, was induced to send Overbury medicine, being then, as stated, in a consumption, and to have been innocently made the tool of the parties by commending as medical attendant, one Paul de Lobell, an apothecary dwelling in Lime-street, near the Tower. This latter, for the sum of twenty pounds, administered a clyster, on Sept. 14th,† that ended all anxieties on the part of the persons involved in the guilty transaction.‡ Sir Thomas Overbury, already prostrated by the frequent appliance of the poison, which Weston affirmed to have been sufficient to destroy twenty other men, was a mass of sores, and reduced to skin and bone, expired about five o'clock in the morning of Wednesday, Sept. 15, 1613, and was buried in the body of the choir of the church within the Tower, between three and four p.m. on that day. Rochester was created Earl of Somerset in November following, and their marriage took place on St. Stephen's day, with unexampled pomp. Murder may for a time be hidden from mortal ken, but some unforeseen circumstance generally uplifts the veil, and discloses the villainy. The assertion that Sir Thomas Overbury had been poisoned obtained sufficient notice, that the individuals concerned were at length charged with criminality, but not till after the death of the Earl of Northampton, he who had been the main contriver, and possibly suggested the poisons, and their mode of application. He died June 15, 1614, and escaped a deservedly ignominious fate. Weston was charged in the indictment with having administered to Overbury certain poisons severally named, between May 9 and September 14; this last was not proved, but Weston, Franklin, Elwes, and Anne Turner, all perished by the hand of the hangman; their trials are embodied in this volume, and divulge astounding facts

* Through this same "straight long gallery" Charles the First passed to Whitehall on the morning of his execution, January 30, 1649.

† The charge, though urged against Weston, was not established, nor did Lobell, a Frenchman, appear in the affair; the clyster was administered by Lobell's assistant, William Reeve, who was sent to Paris immediately afterwards, by Lobell, senior, to be out of reach of enquiry, and the fact transpired years after, on the confession of Reeve.

‡ Their satiety in Overbury's blood was not sufficient for their resentment. Franklin and Turner, both spoke of other persons who were to have been poisoned by the instigation of the Earl and Countess; among them were the Princess Elizabeth and the Palgrave Frederic.

as to their depravity of character, and the condition to which each had been brought by the gold and chicanery of both the Earl and the Countess.

At length the Countess was tried on May 24, 1616, she pleaded guilty, but hoped for mercy; and being pregnant, had determined not to perish on the scaffold, but to accomplish her own death by the placing of a wet towel upon the abdomen after being delivered of the infant.* The Earl was tried on the following day, but denied all; his peers, however, found him guilty. James, who had sworn to pardon no one implicated in the affair, yet pardoned them; the new favorite, George Villiers, extinguished every idea of Somerset's return to favour, and he lived unpitied and contemned.

At the present time, the Great Oyer of Poisoning possesses unusual importance. The evidence in all these cases has been legally investigated; the asserted great luminaries of the law, Coke and Bacon, in their characters, are here shewn to be contemptible parasites, the minions of a base monarch, and to have entertained few higher sentiments, or notions of honour, than their own advantage. The evidence of opinion, and every matter, that has arisen in other cases of atrocity, particularly those of poisoning, are all here carefully canvassed and considered. Documents, highly important, and unpublished, discovered in the State Paper Office, enrich the materials in profusion, and are edited with an aptitude that increases their value.

CAMOENS.—The newspapers notice the death of Sir Thomas Livingston Mitchell, D.C.L., Surveyor-General of New South Wales, at Sydney, on the 5th of October last, aged 64. He had held this appointment for more than a quarter of a century; and the inhabitants testified their respect for him by a public funeral.

When, in 1853, he came to England for the last time, he brought with him, for publication, a translation of the whole of the Lusiad of Camoens. He had served in his youth, it appears, in the Peninsula, and was inspired with an ardent love for the poetry of Camoens, in consequence of an accidental visit to the celebrated Fount of Tears, in the vicinity of Coimbra, the scene of the murder of Dona Inez de Castro. In the preface, we are told, the translation was made in a small clipper, during a long and tedious voyage round Cape Horn.

George Weare Braikenridge, Esq., F.S.A. and F.G.S., of Broomwell House, Brislington, near Bristol, died after a few days illness, on the 11th inst., in his eighty-first year. His collections for the History and Topography of the County of Somerset, are of the most varied, extensive, and valuable character.

* This infant was subsequently Anne, Countess of Bedford, and mother of Lord William Russell, who expiated his hatred of the Stuarts by his execution in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields. Qu. Was the infant daughter of Somerset named Anne in compliment to the Queen of James the First?

PARC-AN-CHAPEL, CAPE CORNWALL.

Whilst engaged in collecting materials for the work on the Crosses and Antiquities in the West of Cornwall, referred to in the last number of Current Notes, I had occasion to visit Cape Cornwall in quest of the ruins of an ancient chapel said to be still there; these I found with little difficulty, the spot being well known to many persons in the neighbourhood. In the west of Cornwall are remains of many similar structures, a list and the localities of which, will be found in the work above mentioned.

The woodcut represents the ruins of the chapel at Cape Cornwall; the two walls on the north side, and the east end. The doorway, like that of Madron Well Chapel, is on the northern side: it is two feet wide, and five feet high; and near the east end of the same wall, is a small window, two feet wide.

In the east end, which is between six and seven feet high, is a comparatively large window, measuring on the inside six feet in width; but it is less on the outside. The eastern part of the side, as seen in the woodcut, was faced with hewn stone, no doubt denoting the length of the chancel. On the south side all that remains is the foundation. A modern building for cattle has been erected at the extremity of the northern wall, and on my last visit to the spot, I found the eastern part of the chapel covered in, and used for a similar purpose.

Externally, the length of the building is thirty-two feet, the width twelve feet. On the north side are remains of a wall which seems to have formed a circular enclosure around the chapel; this was the chapel-yard, and it is remarkable that the boundary wall of Madron Well Chapel was of a similar form.

This building has been called or known as St. Helen's Oratory; and in a water course near the ruins was found a small cross, supposed to have been the gable cross that formerly pertained to this structure; it has since been placed in the chancel of St. Just church.*

Penzance, Feb. 14.

J. T. BLYNT.

* The Rev. J. Buller, in his Account of St. Just's parish 1842, p. 45, alludes to this discovery in these words:—

The cross which once embellished the little chapel is of the rudest form, and was rescued a few years since by him who records the fact, from the artificial water-course which passes near, in which it was immersed.

It may now be seen preserved as a valuable relic in the chancel of the parish church, with a brass-plate denoting its ancient locality.

PARC-AN-CHAPEL, CAPE CORNWALL.

The warlike tribes which in the earliest period of her history occupied Britain, appear to have seized on every spot of vantage ground to construct places of defence. In many instances portions of the cliffs on the sea coast, accessible only on the land side, were by them converted into strongholds, by artificial fortifications in that direction. The bold promontory of Cape Cornwall affords an example of this kind of fortress, or cliff castle. Three parallel lines were constructed across the low neck of land by which it is approached; each had its ditch and rampart; and was extended from cliff to cliff on either side. Between these lines some very old enclosures have been made, and the land cultivated; the spade and the mattock have indeed, year after year, been so busy with the old fortifications, that the casual visitor may pass through without observing them; but he cannot well fail to see among these enclosures, a low roofless ruin, which on inspection will be found to have been erected with a considerable degree of care, at a distant period. The quoins and courses of the eastern portion of the building are of well cut granite; and in the eastern gable are the remains of a comparatively large window, which in its internal display exhibits some fine proportions.

The entrance to this ruin is by an arched doorway in the north wall, near the western end, and facing the Bristol Channel, or, if you like it—the Irish Sea.

On the south side, near the western end, and in close connection, is another building that appears to have been erected at the same time. This, within a few years, has been neatly roofed over with slate, and is used for the purposes of an outbuilding to the little farm there. A small and rude enclosure nearly encircles the ruin. If the tenant, who lives in the cottage hard by, or any of his family who may happen to be working on the land, are asked the name of this spot, the enquirer will be told—Parc-an-Chapel, or the Chapel in the Field. He may also hear, that whilst the church at St. Just was some years since being restored under the inspection of the Rev. J. Buller, then vicar, he caused to be conveyed thither from this locality, a cross that belonged to the chapel.

I cannot undertake to say there may not have been another Parc-an-Chapel hereabouts, and now destroyed; or, that I may have been misinformed as to the name of the ruin here described; but as a ruin, I believe, it is still extant.

LETTER SEALS.—What is the surest method of sealing letters, so that they may not be opened in transitu?

Ryde, Isle of Wight, Feb. 11.

A. F. T.

No more effective security for sealed letters has been devised than simply using a wafer to a non-adhesive envelope, and then applying a thin layer of the finest sealing wax. This impressed with the seal bids defiance to their being opened without shewing the attempted violation. The wax not to extend beyond the size of the seal. The application of heat or steam will only harden the wafer.

MADRON BAPTISTERY AND WELL.

Some additional particulars respecting Madron Well, with a detailed account of the rites observed by those who sought its healing waters, are given in Observations on an Ancient Manuscript, entitled Passio Christi, written in the Cornish language, and now in the Bodleian Library; with an account of the Language, Manners, and Customs of the people of Cornwall, by William Scawen, Esq., Vice-Warden of the Stannaries. The paper will be found in Davies Gilbert's Parochial History of Cornwall, Vol. iv. p. 190. The writer lived in the Stuart reigns, and was a prisoner under Shrub-sall, the Parliamentary Governor of Pendennis Castle. Bodmin, February 6, THOMAS Q. COUCH.

Of St. Mardren's Well, (which is a parish west to the Mount) a fresh true story of two persons, both of them lame and decrepit, thus recovered from their infirmity. These two persons, after they had applied themselves to divers physicians and chirurgeons for cure, and finding no success by them, they resorted to St. Mardren's Well, and according to the ancient custom, of which they had heard, the same which was once in a year, to wit, on Corpus Christi evening, to lay some small offering on the altar there, and to lie on the ground all night, drink of the water there, and in the morning after, to take a good draught more, and to take and carry away some of the water each of them in a bottle, at their departure. This course these two men followed, and within three weeks they found the effect of it, and by degrees their strength increasing, were able to move themselves on crutches. The year following, they took the same course, after which they were able to go with the help of a stick; and at length one of them, John Thomas, being a fisherman, was, and is able at this day, to follow his fishing craft. The other, whose name was William Cork, was a soldier under the command of my kinsman, Colonel William Godolphin, (as he has often told me) was able to perform his duty, and died in the service of his majesty, King Charles the First.

But herewith take also this: one Mr. Hutchins, a person well known in those parts, and now lately dead, being parson of Ludgvan, a near neighbouring parish to St. Mardren's Well, he observing that many of his parishioners often frequented this well superstitiously, for which he reproved them privately, and sometimes publicly in his sermons; but afterwards, he the said Mr. Hutchins, meeting with a woman coming from the well with a bottle in her hand, desired her earnestly that he might drink thereof, being then troubled with cholical pains, which accordingly he did, and was eased of his infirmity.

The latter story is a full confutation of the former for if the taking the water accidentally thus prevailed upon the party to his cure, as it is likely it did, then the miracle which it was intended to be by the ceremony of lying on the ground and offering, is wholly fled, and it leaves the virtue of the water to be the true cause of the cure. And we have here, as in many places of the land, great variety of salutary springs, having diversity of operations, which by natural reason have been found to be productive of good effects, and not by miracle, as the vain fancies of monks and friars have been exercised in heretofore.

MADRON WELL CHAPEL.

Several interesting particulars on the subject of Madron Well Chapel having appeared in Current Notes, I doubt not the following remarks, embodied in a letter dated Penzance, May 17, 1819, for the purpose of eliciting some elucidation of the enquiries then made, will be interesting to your readers.

Penzance, Feb. 4.

In Cornwall there are several wells which bear the name of some patron saint, who appears to have had a chapel consecrated to him, or her, on the spot. This appears by the name of Chapel Saint, attached by tradition to each. These chapels probably were simply Oratories, but in the parish of Maddern [now spelled Madron], is a well called "Maddern Well," inclosed in a complete Baptistery: the walls, seats, doorway, and altar of which still remain. The socket, that received the base of the crucifix, or pedestal of the saint's image, is perfect; and the foundations of the outer walls is apparent. The whole ruin is very picturesque, and I wonder it is passed over in so slight a manner by all Cornish historians, and particularly by Borlase, who speaks merely of the virtues superstitiously ascribed to the waters.

I was surprised at being informed that the superstitious of the neighbourhood attend on the first Thursday in May to consult this oracle by dropping pins, etc. Why on the Thursday? May not this be some vestige of the day on which the baptisteries were opened after their being kept closed and sealed during Lent, which was on Maundy Thursday? My informant told me that Thursday was the particular day of the week, though some came on the second and third Thursday.* May was the first month after Easter, when the waters had been especially blessed; for then was the great time of baptism. When I visited this Well last week, I found a Polianthus and some article of an infant's dress, which shewed that votaries had been there. After the sixth century, these baptisteries were removed into the Church. I will thank any of your readers who can inform me whether there are any other remains of the kind in this country so perfect, and I shall be much obliged at a probable guess at the age of this building, and for any other information that may induce me to revisit it with increased motives of admiration.

Hail to the CHIEF, who with a Patriot's zeal,
Wooes BRITAIN's friendship for his Country's weal;
Who, having fought and triumph'd in her cause,
Now seeks to cultivate her ARTS and LAWS:
Who views our Isle in conscious vigour bold,
For EUROPE's Peace her energies unfold.
Would he the secret of our strength explore,
And bear it back to ÆGYPT's fruitful shore?
Oh, may the secret to the earth belong!

PREDICTED SUBVERSION OF THE TURKISH EMPIRE.

Among the books presented by Lady Campden to Sion College Library, is a copy of Francisci Quaresmii Elucidatio Terræ Sanctæ, Antv. 1639, folio; in the first volume of that work, at p. 265, is the following passage. The reference is to Francesco Navarro, Discurso sobre la Conjunction Maxima, que fue en Diciembre del año 1603.

Circa quod priore loco propositus est, possumus hujus scriptoris sententiam ad quinque articulos reducere. Primus sit. Mahometa secta, cum suis sectatoribus et singulariter Turcicum Imperium, in spiritualibus et temporalibus finem habebit intra spatium annorum 251, tot enim dumtaxat illi supersunt.

Quando vero hæc scribebat Doctor Navarrus, vertebatur annus nostræ salutis 1604, quare secundum istum anno 1856, vel circiter, quoad tam spiritualia quam temporalia (hæc enim duo ritè in Mahometica Secta et Imperio Turcico Auctor ille considerat) cessabit et finem habebit perditâ ista superstitio.

Articulus quartus: Hoc regnum et secta penitus destructa et abolita erunt anno Domini 1854, vel 1856.

This prediction may be thus translated:—

Concerning that which is mentioned in the former place, we are able to reduce the opinion of this writer, viz.—Francis Navarre, to five points.

First, that the Mahomedan sect with its adherents, especially the Turkish Empire, will, both in its spiritual and temporal power, come to an end within the space of 251 years, for so many only remain to it.

When Dr. Navarre wrote this, the year A.D. 1604 was completed, hence according to him, in the year 1855, that abandoned superstition both in its spiritual and temporal power (for such is the Mahomedan sect and Turkish Empire justly considered by this author;) will cease and come to an end.

The fourth point is, that this kingdom and sect will be entirely destroyed and done away with, A.D. 1854, or 1856.

When it is considered that this presage was really written two centuries and a half since; and the fact of the acceptance by the Sultan and his ministers of the requirements made to them by England and France, it will be seen that this prediction has virtually happened! The passive Turk may no longer oppress the Christian, and the bolder energies of the latter will finally subvert Mahomedanism; the Cross will be exalted to the exclusion of the Crescent, and this certain and rapid declension may be dated from 1856. This vast revolutionary change has been no less forced on the Turk, by the aggressions of Russia, than by the obstinacy of the ruling powers of the Turkish Empire, till at length unable in the presence of the allied powers to defend the tyrannical dogmas of their faith, an effectual change has been demanded, and the events of 1854 and 1855, were the unmistakable precursors of what has happened, and will farther advance during 1856.

Adam Mickiewicz, the celebrated Polish poet, was buried in the church of the Madeleine, at Paris, on the 21st ultimo.

NOTES ON SIR WALTER SCOTT'S LETTER.

I have had great pleasure in perusing the inedited letter of Sir Walter Scott, printed in Current Notes, pp. 4-5. My father for many years rented a farm of Mr. Ellis, to whom it was addressed; and from the kindness that gentleman evinced towards myself, I ever respect his memory. At the sale of his library in May 1830, shortly after his decease, I made several purchases, but omitted to secure his copy of Froissart, with the elaborate Index to that work, in his beautiful handwriting. This was often to me a cause of regret, as I lost all trace of where it had gone; but in 1841, at the sale of the library of the Rev. John Dodd, late Vicar of this town, I obtained it, and the book with the Index is now in my possession. The latter is in foolscap size, of about 150 closely written pages. I never saw or heard of another copy; Scott's request as to the liberty of printing, appears to have failed of success.

My father once saw James Allan at Harbottle-fair, in a room crowded with people: he was chanting some verses of a song, and accompanying them on the pipes, making his instrument almost speak any word of double meaning, which he himself hesitated to utter. The Alnwick work upon him, was the first edition of his Life printed in that town; later editions of the volume were printed here, by Mackenzie and Dent. The particulars relating to Ringan Oliver and the Marquis of Lothian were communicated by James Veitch of Inchbonny, not Inchbinny, in a letter now before me dated June 21, 1836, and addressed to my worthy friend, Mr. James Telfer of Saughtree, Liddesdale, who wrote a good ballad on the subject, reprinted in his volume of Tales and Ballads, published in 1852. It is likely he will include this letter among his Border Gatherings, a work on which he is at present engaged.

I remember seeing James Veitch several times at Jedburgh; he was a tall stout man dressed like a superior workman, and wore a leather apron not over clean, much rounded at the bottom, and so short that it did not reach his knees. Besides being a first-rate maker of refracting and reflecting Telescopes, he made several pairs of spectacles for the neighbouring gentry; and an eight-day clock for Sir Walter Scott, which I have no doubt still indicates the hours at Abbotsford. A small white globe, not quite a foot in diameter, projecting from the wall, at the west corner of his house at Inchbonny, served the purpose of a sun-dial. His family were distinguished for mechanical genius. From his father's sister descended another friend of mine, James Thomson of Otterburn, who from the extent of his scientific acquirements, was possibly a still more remarkable man than his successful relative.

The lines to which allusion is made, are not on the North Tyne, which is a slip in Sir Walter's recollection, but are entitled—The Marriage of the Coquet and the Alwine; forming one of the poetical Tracts edited for the Typographical Society of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in 1817, by the late Mr. John Adamson. They are written after the manner of Drayton, in his Marriage of the Tame and the Isis, in the fifteenth song of Poly Olbion. The author's name appears to have been Shepherd, which for his own reasons the Editor very carefully concealed. I have an old manuscript copy of the poem bearing L. T., as the initials of the author.

The Lay of the Reedwater Minstrel was written by my late friend, Robert Roxby; the original manuscript is in my collection. Mr. Roxby, in conjunction with Mr. Thomas Doubleday, wrote the Coquet-dale Fishing Songs, of which an elegant edition was published in 1852, by Messrs. Blackwood.

MODERN CONSERVATORS OF ANCIENT ART.

A letter dated Naples, January 8, states, "an act recently committed here, has created as much indignation and ridicule among artistic persons, as the outrages of Mazza did lately in the political world. The group of the Rape of the Sabines, that has adorned the Villa Reale ever since the time of Charles the Third, has been removed from the public gardens. The group is a copy of the celebrated work of John of Bologna, and has not been imagined generally as capable of awakening any prurient thought, but within the last week has been condemned, muffled in canvas, and committed to the prisons of the Museum. The same fate it is said awaits the Rape of Europa, and the Rape of Proserpine, now in the Villa Reale. The Venuses of the Museum and the Nereid, are already locked up, and one unfortunate Venus, the Vincitrice of Capua, which had escaped priestly wrath, is soon to be laid hands on. Condemned to be no better than they should be, they are to be placed under lock and key—a fact! and this in a city where the foulest acts and sights present themselves every hour in the day, to the passenger; where a foreign lady can scarcely walk without blushing, and all these impurities which befoul the streets might be prevented by stringent directions to the police, from the men whose modesty they affect is shocked by a Sabine or a Venus. It is but due, that in the interests of art, such absurdities should be made known to the civilised world."

BELFRY RHYMES. BOWDEN RINGERS ORDERS.

You Ringers all, observe these Orders well!
He pays his Sixpence, that o'eturns a Bell;
And he that Rings with either spur or hat,
Must pay his Sixpence certainly for that;
And He that Rings and does disturb the Peal,
Must pay his Sixpence, or a Gun of Ale.
These Laws elsewhere in ev'ry Church are used,
That Bells and Ringers may not be abused.

According to Halliwell's Dictionary of Archaisms and Provincialisms, Gun is a north country word, for a large flagon of ale. Unde, "Son of a gun, implies a merry, jovial, drunken fellow."

COINAGE OF EDWARD THE FIRST.

Some months since I proposed that a complete list of all Edward the First and Second's pennies should be published in Current Notes; and now forward a list of those which have come under my notice, and shall feel much obliged if any of your readers who are interested in Numismatics would add to it any varieties. The basis of this list is Mr. Hawkins's Account of the Tutbury and Wyke "finds," in neither of which is the presence or absence of the marks of abbreviation of the Edw R' noticed—in the following list I shall presume this to be found on all the coins.

The London mint is placed first in the list, as emanating from the seat of regal authority: the provincial mints follow in alphabetical order.

Diss, Feb. 7.

Thirteen as twelve, which has long been the custom. Taylor, the Water-poet, in his Travels of Twelve Pence, notices—

How bakers thirteene penny loaves doe giue,
All for a shilling, and thirue well, and liue.

So also, Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, in her Nature's Picture, 1656, folio, observes—

In this volume there are several feigned stories; also, there are some Morals, and some Dialogues; but they are as the advantage loaf of bread to the baker's dozen.

CREATION OF PEERS FOR LIFE.

The opponents to the unquestionably constitutional and legal prerogative vested in the Queen's authority to create Peers for life, appear to have purposely omitted any reference to Blackstone, who in his Commentaries, p. 401, observes:—

Creation by writ has one advantage over that by patent: for a person created by writ holds the dignity to him and his heirs, without any words to that purport in the writ; but in letters patent there must be words to direct the inheritance, else the dignity ensues only to the grantee for life.* For a man or woman may be created noble for their own lives, and the dignity not descend to their heirs at all, or descend only to some particular heirs: as where a peerage is limited to a man, and the heirs male of his body by Elizabeth his present lady, and not to such heirs by any former or future wife.

CROSS AT ST. BURYAN, CORNWALL.

The antiquity of Crosses everywhere, but especially in Cornwall, is an old and somewhat worn subject, but I consider one in the churchyard of St. Buryan in that county, is entitled to more than a passing notice. I have looked into all the Cornish histories at my command, but in none of them do I find the Buryan Cross engraved. The Rev. W. Haslam, known as the discoverer of the old Oratory of Perran Zabuloe; not many years since engraved some of the Cornish Crosses, which in that part are very abundant, two of them were in St. Buryan parish, but that of which I forward a sketch is a third.

It is of a form rarely met with in Cornwall—a Maltese cross surrounded by a circle; a beautiful emblem of the eternal efficacy of the Atonement. On one side, somewhat mutilated and time-worn, is the crucified Christ; on the other, as shewn in the sketch, are the emblems of the five wounds received on Calvary.

The devotional character and thought about this Cross may well serve as a suggestion for the church restorers of the nineteenth century.

I should be glad to know the order in which the various forms of crosses may be arranged, from the Latin cross, to the more elaborate sculpture of the decorated period of English architects. Where may such a classification be found?

HOYLE.—Huddesford in his Catalogue of Anthony Wood's Manuscripts, in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, describes, no. 8466, as an account of the Nobility and Gentry, buried at Oxford, since 1643, etc. Among the persons noticed is JOSHUA HOYLE, Master of University College, and Regius Professor of Divinity.

TALBOIS.—No. 8465, is the same Collection, is a folio volume of Pedigrees of the Nobility and Gentry of England, transcribed by Ralph Sheldon of Beoley; among them is one of the TALBOIS family.

THE CRIMEA SEVENTY YEARS SINCE.

Blinded by political prejudices, England appears to have turned a deafened ear to all the aspirations of warning against the aggressions of the Russians in the Black Sea, abetted as they have been by the assistance or connivance of both Austria and Prussia. No one who reads Capt. Sutherland's Tour from Gibraltar to Constantinople, printed in 1790, will fail being impressed with surprise that warnings so broadly and so unequivocally expressed, should have failed in exciting a more particular attention on the part of successive governments in England to our national interests. The Russian fleet in the Black Sea was then officered by Englishmen, and under their superior abilities and nautical experience, in the bay of Chisemé inflicted a fatal blow to the Turkish Empire, and created that naval supremacy for the Russian, which has in 1855 been wholly subverted. The ambitious projects of the Empress Catherine, in 1788, with the entry of the Austrians under the Prince of Saxe Cobourg into Moldavia, created a determined resistance on the part of Turkey, which elicited from Capt. Sutherland the following animated remarks on the cupidity of our rulers.

As an Englishman, policy obliges me to wish success to the Turks. I feel the utmost detestation of the ambitious combination entered into by the Emperor of Austria and the Empress Catherine to extirpate the Turks, merely because Nature has been bountiful to their soil, and because their country promised an easy conquest. These Powers could scarcely imagine that Europe would look on with indifference: but they trusted they had a sufficient party to prevent any open declaration in favour of the injured Turks. These expectations the total suspension of the powers of France must have frustrated.

The writer in calling upon Prussia and England to support the Turk, if on no better terms than the strict observance by Russia of the Treaty of Cainardgie, a treaty which England was bound to redress, observes—

What has become of that spirit of virtue and generosity, which not fifty years since led us to enter into an expensive war, in favour of Maria Theresa, merely because she was then an unfortunate Princess, oppressed by an ambitious neighbour, whose usurpations like those of Russia, threatened in time to affect ourselves.

It is, no doubt, a considerable abatement of the honest joy an Englishman feels in contemplating this act of magnanimity in his ancestors, to find, that ingratitude has been the only return which has been made to us. In cherishing Austria and Russia, we may really be said to have nurtured the viper in our bosom, which in the moment of our distress attempted a mortal wound by forming the Armed Neutrality, or in plain language, a combination to supply our enemies with implements for our destruction.

If justice to the Turks, whom we have reduced to so critical a situation; if a sense of our national dignity; if our dearest interest and commercial concerns will not induce us to speak boldly in a moment like this, self-preservation at least should affect us. Let us recollect that Russia is an evil-disposed aspiring child; that we now have it in our power to curb her proud spirit; but that if we neglect this opportunity and allow her to increase in pride, and in strength, in a few years she may perhaps trample on our breasts.

Pax queritur in Bello is a favourite motto, but Wars guarded against in peace, is in my opinion a much better one; and this is the motto England ought to choose. There is nothing in the present state of Europe, that Great Britain can in justice require, but what she must immediately gain. Let her then dictate terms to Russia, and check her ambitious views. If she refuses to submit, shew us the Power who at this moment will dare to oppose the serious threats of England? Vengeance would soon overwhelm her.

HOLLES MONUMENT, ST. PETER'S, DORCHESTER.

After a highly successful appeal to the town of Dorchester, and the county of Dorset, in aid of a fund for the repairing and restoring the beautiful old church of St. Peter's, sufficient has been obtained for effecting the more immediate requirements, leaving contemplated improvements, works of ornament and minor importance, to be effected when further contributions could be afterwards collected. These repairs have been progressing for some months past; and amongst the exceptions, caused by the inadequacy of means, was the removal of the monument of Denzil, Baron Holles of Ifield, from the eastern window of the south aisle, to some other part of the church, in order to open that window, that had been completely blocked up by the monument. One of the gentlemen of the Committee having given orders for its removal, the monument has been taken down, and partly put up at the western end of the north aisle.

From the first I have been acting as one of the Honorary Secretaries to the Committee appointed for the effecting these repairs, and until the occurrence of this circumstance have been wholly in accord with the persons of that Committee, and their plans; but in this I unfortunately differ from the parties assuming the management, and consider this difference as being on a subject, beyond the mere question of ornament, and am therefore induced to this remonstrance, in the hope of drawing the attention of all lovers of antiquity and beauty to this monument, that a remedy may present itself for that which I consider to be, to say the least of it, a most unjustifiable proceeding.

The monument, which is fully described by Hutchins, in his History of Dorset, as "a very lofty, noble, and superb one, of white marble, railed with iron," had till recently the appearance as in the enclosed hasty sketch.

On the top, between two urns, an escutcheon encircled by the Garter, containing the arms of Holles, Duke of Newcastle.* Over all a ducal coronet, and on a cushion above it a ducal cap, motto—SPES AYDACES ADJUVAT. Under the curtain are three cherubim's heads, and below these, the effigies of Lord Holles, in a robe of loose drapery, and in a recumbent posture, his right elbow leaning upon a cushion. On the outside of the monument, the effigy on the right side, is that of a boy, and on the left, that of an angel mourning. Below the effigy, are the arms, supporters, and motto of Lord

* Denzil Lord Holles, by Dorothy Ashley, his first wife, had an only son, Francis, who succeeded his father in the barony. He died March 1, 1689-90, and was succeeded by his only son Denzil, the third Baron Holles, who died in his nineteenth year, in 1694, when that honour became extinct, and the estates devolved upon his heir-at-law, John Holles, fourth Earl of Clare, who having married Margaret, daughter and coheir of Henry Cavendish, second Duke of Newcastle, deceased 1691; was on May 14, 1694, created Marquis of Clare, and third Duke of Newcastle. He caused the Holles Monument to be erected in St. Peter's Church, in 1699, and dying in 1711, a. p. m., his honour, notwithstanding the panoply of armorial glory displayed in this marble memorial, also became extinct.

Holles, with a baron's coronet. In a compartment on the base are two inscribed columns, that on the right in Latin, and that on the left in English.

The monument of such a man as Denzil Lord Holles, is, I think it will be admitted, of more than local interest; perhaps, indeed, I should not go too far, if I said of national interest. Lord Holles is known as a man noble and illustrious in descent. In the reign of King James the First he represented Dorchester in parliament; and married Dorothy, daughter and heiress of Sir Francis Ashley, of Dorchester. He was created a peer April 20, 1661, and was honoured by representing his sovereign at several foreign courts; was a faithful counsellor to his prince, a patriot to his country, and a Christian towards God. He died in the eighty-second year of his age, Feb. 17, 1679-80, and was buried in this church on April 10, 1680.* His wife was also buried here.

Now, of this monument, I confess, I with pain observe it is intended to re-erect it in part only! Will it be believed that it is contemplated to set aside the pillars, the top, the urns, the curtain, and the cherubim's heads, because the omission pleases the taste of several gentlemen who have decided thereon? On the contrary, I consider it of great importance that the whole should be re-erected, and not thus mutilated by way of "improvement." A difference of opinion might possibly occur on the score of "improvement," for quot homines, tot sententiae, and, in my humble opinion, the omissions apparently decided on would anything but merit that name.

Another argument for its complete restoration is, that, I am credibly informed, there is a rent-charge of two guineas per annum, derivable from the estate known as Holles Froome, near Dorchester, formerly the property of Lord Holles, reserved and payable for the cleaning and maintaining of this fine monument.

One word on "the right" to mutilate monuments. It might as well be said that the parties are equally empowered to take from, or add, at their will and pleasure, to any monument in the church, according to their taste from time to time; unless it is contended, which it would be idle to do, that the lapse of time since its erection would give them that right. I trust, therefore, that the parties in authority, who have ordered the omissions, will, on consideration, agree with me that the monument ought to be reinstated, as originally designed and planned by the sculptor, who was surely the best judge of what was a becoming background for his own work; and that such an instance of bad taste may not mar the, in other respects, vast improvements to one of the finest and best-built churches of our country.

Dorchester, Feb. 11.

JOHN GARLAND.

* The sermon preached at his funeral by the Rev. Samuel Rayner, then rector of St. Peter's, contains copious biographical details of Lord Holles. It was published by William Churchhill, bookseller in Dorchester, in 1680, 4to., but is now of considerable rarity.

THE LAST OF THE COURT FOOLS?

Said Effendi, distinguished by the appellation of Mussahib, or Imperial Buffoon, who had served in that capacity four Sultans, and who notwithstanding his very advanced age, was frequently commanded into the presence of the present Sultan, to exercise his talent in smart sayings, and perform the antics of his office, which the venerable old gentleman generally did with remarkable agility, died at Constantinople on the 3rd instant, at the age of 121 years and seven months.

COMPENSATION OF MAGAZINE WRITERS.

A correspondent of the Aberdeen Journal states of his own knowledge, the following are the sums paid to writers, by the proprietors of the periodicals named.

We, ourselves, receive from Chambers's Journal, twenty-one shillings per page, and for the continuous Tales in the serial, a guinea and a half per page is paid; in a page of Chambers there are about 1373 words. In a page of the Leisure Hour, there are usually 1120 words, and for that number, the Religious Tract Society pays fifteen shillings. For a page containing about 1250 words, Eliza Cook used to pay us a guinea; and Charles Dickens, Household Words, still pays that sum for a page of not more than 1050 words. For the much smaller pages of Tait's, Sharpe's, Bentley's, and the new New Monthly, half a guinea each is paid; while for pages of about the same size, Blackwood, and the Dublin University, pay double that price. For reviews, the Athenæum pays half a guinea; while the Critic and the Literary Gazette, pay seven shillings per column. The Quarterlies pay their contributors at rates varying from eight to sixteen guineas per sheet of sixteen pages.

STALL BOOKS.—In the Cambridge list of Wranglers appears the name of — Tebay, B A., of St. John's College. He was formerly a labourer at Preston, but an old book purchased at a stall impelled him onward into mathematical studies, in which his ability becoming known to several gentlemen of that town, they sent him to College, where his present position renders them due honour.

VERSE VERSUS PROSE.—Her Majesty on the recommendation of Lord Palmerston has conferred on Mr. Samuel Lover, well known for his Irish Songs and Stories, an annual pension of 100*l.*; and has granted another of 50*l.*, chargeable upon the Irish civil list, to Mr. John Dalton, of Dublin, the author of several Irish historical works, including the Army List of King James the Second; the latter not yet completed.

The Fifth volume of Current Notes, with Index, in extra cloth boards, uniform with the prior volumes; may now be had, price THREE SHILLINGS.

Subscribers are respectfully reminded that their subscriptions for the forthcoming twelve months which are now due, can be forwarded in Postage Stamps.

SPLENDID ILLUSTRATED BIBLE.
- 75 BIBLE (HOLY), containing the Old and New Testaments and Apocrypha, a large paper copy of Westall and Heath's beautifully printed edition, with their series of plates, EXTENSIVELY ILLUSTRATED WITH UPWARDS OF 3000 FINE ANCIENT AND MODERN ENGRAVINGS by the most eminent Artists, after paintings by the Great Masters, including Raphael, Michael Angelo, Paul Veronese, Julio Romano, Tintoretto, Albano, Carlo Maratti, Rubens, Vandyk, Rembrandt, Luyken, Stradanus, M. de Vos, Claude, Poussin, and others; Reynolds, Opie, West, &c. together with a few fine Old Drawings. THIS SPLENDID COPY FORMS 9 THICK VOLS. SMALL FOLIO, and has Titles printed expressly for each volume; every plate is carefully inlaid and surrounded by a ruled border; RICHLI BOUND IN PURPLE MOROCCO, with elegant gold tooling on back and sides, the edges of the leaves also tooled, in Mackenzie's best style, only £65. 1815
THE ABOVE IS A MOST ELAGANT ILLUSTRATED BIBLE, and one upon which the late possessor spared neither labour nor expense, for he calculated its cost at upwards of £160. The binding and inlaying alone amounted to nearly £40. Often as the Holy Scriptures have been the subject of illustration, few such copies, it is believed, have approached the present one in the number and interest of the engravings, in their tasteful selection, or in the expense lavished on its production.
- 76 BIBLE.—POLYGLOTTEN-BIBEL zum praktischen Handgebrauch von Stier und Theile, finely printed in parallel columns with marginal notes, 4 vols. roy. 8vo. hf. calf, uncut, £1. 16s Bielefeld, 1847-53
Contains the Old and New Testaments in Hebrew, Greek, Latin and German.

MANUSCRIPT BIBLE ON VELLUM.

- 77 Biblia Sacra Vulgata, Vetus et Novum Testamentum, a MANUSCRIPT OF THE XIV. CENTURY, very neatly written in a small Gothic character upon fine white vellum, with the capitals rubricated, a thick vol. small 4to. finely bound in russia in the antique style, gilt leaves. £10. 10s

Sec. XIV.

This early and beautifully written MS. is in very fine condition.

- 78 BIBLIA GRÆCA.—Vetus Testamentum Græcum e Codice MS. Alexandrino, cura H. H. BAKER, cum Notis, sumptuously printed on thick plate paper, 4 vols. roy. folio, complete in 9 parts, bds. uncut, £10. 10s (pub. at £36. 15s) Lond. 1816-28

An exact facsimile of the celebrated Alexandrian MS. now preserved in the British Museum, executed in a splendid folio size, and in such a manner as faithfully to represent every iota of the original MS. It was printed at the National Expense.

- 79 BIBLIA GRÆCA.—Vetus et Novum Testamentum, cum Libris Apocryphis, ex editione L. Bos, 5 vols. sm. 8vo. bds. 10s 6d Oxon. Typ. Clarend., 1805

- 80 BIBLIA GRÆCA.—Novum Testamentum Græce, Lect. Var. Griesbachii Judicio, iis quas Textus receptus exhibet antependendas vel equiparandas adjecit J. White, 2 vols. sm. 8vo. bds. 4s Oxon. Typ. Clar. 1808

- 81 Bible and Apocrypha, in Englyshe, translated by Tho. Matthews, with Tyndal's Prologue, engraved capitals, thick fol. finely bound antique calf on thick boards, the sides embossed, a fine volume, £2. 15s Reynoldes and Hill, 1549

An edition of great rarity, far more so than that of Day and Seres, printed in the same year: although reprinted from the edition of 1537, it is observed that many alterations have been made: the above copy wants title to the Old Testament, but has the table of matters, the fine engraved title to the New Testament, and the end of the Apocalypse.

- 82 Bible, Old and New Testaments and Apocrypha, with marginal Notes, curious cuts to the Apocalypse, folio, newly bound, antique calf, the sides elaborately embossed, £1. 10s (T. Norton), 1575

One of the rare "Dotted" Bibles; this copy has 4 engraved titles, but wants that to the Pentateuch, a few leaves are neatly repaired, and it is probably otherwise imperfect, but it contains the last chapters of the Apoc. pse, which rarely occur.

- 83 BIBLE, Old and New Testaments, Geneva Version, or BREECHES BIBLE, with Annotations, engravings, 4to. newly bound antique calf on thick wooden boards, the sides and back elaborately embossed, £1. 8s Barker, 1599

A very clean and desirable copy of this famous version, with both the engraved titles.

- 84 BIBLE and APOCRYPHA, with marginal Notes and References, finely printed, and illustrated with a series of beautiful engravings from Pictures by CORBOULD, brilliant impressions, 2 vols. imp. 4to. russia extra gilt, gilt leaves, £2. 10s Lond., Strahan, 1806

A choice copy of this excellent Family Bible; formerly priced £6.

- 85 BIBLE, KNIGHT'S PICTORIAL EDITION, edited by Dr. Kitto, large type, with many hundred engravings of historical events, natural history, landscapes, costumes, &c. 4 vols. roy. 4to. cloth, £2. 2s C. Knight, 1838

- 86 BIBLIA.—SYRACO-HEXAPLARIS lib. IV. Regum e Cod. Parisiensis; Jesaia, XII. Prophetæ Minores, Proverbia, &c. è Cod. Mediol. edit. et comment. illustravit H. Middelendorf, 2 vols. 4to. hf. calf gilt, 18s 1835

Upon the Milan MS. from which the above has in part been taken, is an inscription stating that it was transcribed from the "Exemplar of Eusebius and Pamphilus," which they corrected from the library of Origin.

- 87 BIBLE Cyclopædia; containing the Biography, Geography, and Natural History of the Holy Scriptures, by the Rev. J. P. Lawson, numerous engravings and maps, 3 vols. royal 8vo. cloth, 15s 1852

- 88 BIBLE PRINTS.—Icones Operum Misericordiae cum Julii Rosci Hortini Sententiis et Explicationibus, 16 fine engravings, chiefly illustrative of the Life and Miracles of Christ, folio, hf. calf, 10s 6d Romæ, 1614

- 89 BIBLE PRINTS.—Royaumont (Sr. de) Histoire du Vieux et du Nouveau Testament, upwards of 250 very neat engravings, illustrating the principal events recorded in Scripture, wants two leaves, 8vo. old green morocco extra, gilt leaves, very fine copy, £1. 4s Amst. 1680

- 90 BIBLIOTHECÆ REGIÆ (Georgii III.) CATALOGUS, cura F. Barnard, printed on thick vellum paper, with fine portrait of the King, 5 large vols. royal folio, hf. morocco, uncut, £5. 15s (only 200 printed) Bulmer, 1820

NOT PRINTED FOR SALE. This is the Catalogue of the magnificent library presented by George IV. to the Nation, now deposited in the British Museum; copies have been sold for upwards of £40.

- 91 BIBLIOTHECA Literaria; a Collection of Inscriptions, Medals, Dissertations (edited by Bp. Jebb), the ten Parts complete, sm. 4to. calf, 7s 6d 1722-4

These very curious and valuable Pieces were contributed by Dr. Wasse, Wotton, Brett, Anthony & Wood, and other eminent writers.

- 92 BICKERSTETH (Rev. E.) Memoirs of, by the Rev. T. R. Birkers, portrait, 2 vols. post 8vo. cloth, 6s 6d (pub. at £1. 1s) Seeleys, 1852

- 93 BIGGS' (Noah) Vanity of the Craft of Physick, small 4to. hf. morocco, scarce, 6s 6d 1651

A curious work; "Dissecting the Errors, Ignorance, Impostures and Anpities of the Schools in their main pillars of Purges, Blood-letting, Diet, &c."

- 94 BILLING and SAUER'S Expedition to the Northern parts of Russia, and of the Islands in the Eastern stretching to the American Coast, fine engravings, and large map by Armesmith, 4to. bds. 3s 6d 1802

12. ENGLISHWOMAN in America, post 8vo. cloth, 10s 6d
"A work which is valuable, not only for the novel facts and interesting information it contains, but also for the success with which it combats prejudices which have tended to excite angry feelings between two great nations."—DAILY NEWS.
"A sensible and entertaining book, containing some charming descriptions."—TIMES.

13. FERGUSSON'S (Jas.) ILLUSTRATED HANDBOOK OF ARCHITECTURE, being a concise and popular Account of the different Styles of Architecture prevailing in all Ages and Countries, illustrated by 850 beautiful and highly finished engravings on wood, 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, £1. 16s
Published by Murray
This beautiful and useful work forms a companion to the Handbooks of Painting published by Mr. Murray, comprehending Buddhism, Jaina, and Hindu Architecture; Architecture in China, America, and Western Asia; Egyptian, Grecian, Roman, Sassanian, Saracenic, Romanesque Lombard, and Rhenish Architecture; Gothic Architecture in France, Belgium, Germany, Italy, Spain and Portugal, Great Britain and Northern Europe; Byzantine Style.

The title of this valuable work, which is just completed, hardly does justice to the contents; the authors thus speak of it. "To the lovers of Comparative Anatomy, Physiology, or of the Natural History of the microscopic members of the Animal and Vegetable Kingdom, the authors have endeavoured to furnish, without departing from the principal purpose of the work, something more than a mere descriptive catalogue of objects, and the means of examining them. Numerous articles on various subjects have been written with a view to enable readers, by the help of the system adopted, to acquire a general knowledge of particular departments of science."

16. COMPLETION OF GROTE'S GREECE.

LABARTE'S ILLUSTRATED HANDBOOK OF THE ARTS OF THE MIDDLE AGES AND RENAISSANCE, as applied to the Decoration of Furniture, Arms, Jewels, etc. translated from the French, with Notes, embellished with upwards of 200 beautiful woodcuts, thick 8vo. cloth, 18s. Published by Murray.
"The work of M. Labarte deserves on every account to be known and circulated. Its value is already fully acknowledged by French antiquaries and artists. As M. Didron observes, 'C'est une véritable Histoire de l'Art par les objets mobiliers dont M. Labarte vient d'enrichir la science archéologique. Il y a peu de livres où plus de faits certains et intéressans abondent que dans celui-ci.' And M. de Laborde most truly says, 'L'ouvrage de M. Labarte est dans toutes les mains; il serait inutile d'en faire l'éloge; il est dans toutes les bouches.'"

LIDDELL'S (Dean) History of Rome, from the earliest Times to the Establishment of the Empire, 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, £1. 8s.
"It is not, however, the mere quality of length that renders Dr. Liddell's History adapted to the purposes of readers who desire a knowledge of the 'altered aspect which Roman history has assumed.' By means of a skillfully-arranged structure, not only the different periods of the history, but their subdivisions, are presented as distinct parts, yet each having a relation to a larger whole. The general treatment is also judicious. The alleged events, for instance, of the early period, are rapidly touched; while the social, political, and constitutional arrangements, as evolved by Niebuhr, from the legendary stories of family ballads, are fully expounded."—SPECTATOR.

LOCKHART'S ANCIENT SPANISH BALLADS, historical and romantic, translated, with Notes; embellished with 70 beautiful illustrations from drawings by W. Allan, David Roberts, H. Warren, C. E. Aubrey, and W. Harvey: in addition to elegant ornaments in gold and colours, every page is surrounded by ornamental borders, in colours, all designed by Mr. Owen Jones, 4to. bound in ornamental cloth, richly gilt, £2. 2s.

The present new edition of this very beautiful work is enriched with a Biographical Sketch of the late Mr. Lockhart, accompanied by a finely engraved portrait.

MEN of the Time; Biographical Sketches of eminent Living Characters, in all parts of the civilized World; in every Rank and Profession of Life, with Biographies of celebrated Women of the Time; a very thick vol. post 8vo. (containing 930 pages), cloth, 12s. 6d.

This very useful and interesting work comprises the largest body of contemporary biography which has hitherto appeared in England or any other country.

MILMAN'S (Dean) History of Latin Christianity, including that of the Popes. Vols. 4 to 6, completing the work, 8vo. cloth, £2. 2s.

"One of the most remarkable works of the present age, in which the author reviews, with curious erudition, and in a profoundly philosophical spirit, the various changes that have taken place in the Roman hierarchy: and while he fully exposes the manifold errors and corruptions of the system, he shows throughout that enlightened charity, which is the most precious of Christian graces, as unshapely the parent."

Prescott's Philip the Second.

28.

MOORE'S Irish Melodies, a new edition, beautifully printed in large type, and embellished with 13 exquisite engravings after drawings by Macdonald, Mulready, Ward, Cope, Creswick, Horsley, Millais, Egg, Stone, etc. square 8vo. cloth, £1. 1s.—The same, bound in morocco, gilt edges, £1. 11s. 6d.

29.

NAPOLEON Bonaparte's Confidential Correspondence with his Brother Joseph, sometime King of Spain, 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, £1. 6s.

"A very valuable contribution to our standard literature. To the student of history, or of human character, it is full of deep interest; to the politician, and still more to the military man, it is a book of profound instruction—to the politician, of what in a great measure to avoid—to the soldier, of what to master till the principles enunciated become a portion of his mind."—SPECTATOR.

30.

Johnston's (A. K. Royal Geogr.) National Atlas of Historical, Commercial, and Political Geography, constructed from the most recent and authentic sources, 41 very large and beautifully executed double maps, the boundaries coloured; with a copious consulting Index, thick imperial folio, hf. bound morocco, new, £4. 4s (pub. at £8. 8s) 1855

Johnston's Atlas of Scotland, containing Maps of each County, on a scale so large as to exhibit the Features of the Country and Places of Importance, the Railways, &c. with a copious Index, 60 very large and beautifully executed maps, coloured; new edition, completed to the present time, atlas folio, new half russa, gilt leaves, £5. 5s (pub. at £7. 7s) 1856

This splendid and very complete Atlas cost in surveys and engravings upwards of £18,000.

Macgillivray's British Water Birds, Indigenous and Migratory, History of, numerous engravings, 2 thick vols. 8vo. cloth, 10s (pub. at £1. 10s) 1852

"A most excellent work."

Mackay's (C.) The Salamandrine, or Love and Immortality, a Poem, with upwards of 50 most beautiful and highly finished wood-engravings from drawings by J. GILBERT, roy. 8vo. handsomely bound in fancy cloth, gilt leaves, 7s 6d (pub. at 21s) 1853

One of the most beautiful volumes ever published. "The Salamandrine is certainly the most graceful, the most elegant, the most delightful, and the most poetic production, of its class that has appeared since the days of Keats, Coleridge, and Southey."

Microscope (The), its History, Construction, and Applications; being a familiar Introduction to the Use of the Instrument and the Study of Microscopical Science. By J. Hogg, Surgeon to the Ophthalmic Hospital, illustrated with upwards of 500 engravings, second edition, 8vo. new cloth, 6s 6d 1856

Milner's (Rev. T.) Gallery of Nature, a pictorial and descriptive Tour through Creation, illustrative of the Wonders of Astronomy, Physical Geography, and Geology. with 16 fine steel engravings, and many hundred woodcuts, a fine vol. roy. 8vo. new cloth, 10s 6d (pub. at 18s) 1852

National Cyclopædia of Useful Knowledge, published by C. Knight, illustrated by numerous woodcuts, the complete work, 12 vols. 8vo. new cloth, £2. 2s (pub. at £3.) —The same; newly half bound in russa, 12 vols. in 6, £2. 10s

This is one of the best Cyclopædias for general use ever published, comprising the essence of the valuable information contained in the Penny Cyclopædia, with corrections and additions.

THE GREAT OYER OF POISONING.

Trial of the Earl and Countess of Somerset for the Poisoning of Sir Thomas Overbury in the Tower of London, and various matters connected therewith from contemporary MSS. by A. Amos, Esq. with 2 fine portraits; thick 8vo. cloth, 4s 6d (pub. at 15s) 1846

"Displays great research, and throws much light upon the dark & problem of English history."

KNIGHT'S ILLUSTRATED SHAKSPEARE.

Shakspeare's Plays and Poems, Knight's National Library Edition, with Dissertations, Critical Notices to each Play, numerous Notes, Index, &c. illustrated by upwards of 1000 Woodcuts of Views, Old Buildings, Antiquities and Costume, Portraits, &c. 6 vols.—Knight's Biography of Shakspeare, 1 vol.—Knight's Studies and Illustrations of the Writings of Shakspeare, and of his Life and Times, together, 8 vols. 8vo. bound in cloth extra, new, £2. 10s.—The same, 8 vols. half bound russia, marbled leaves, new, £3. 3s

* W. and S. having secured a few of the still remaining copies of this valuable edition, beg to call attention to its present low price, and also to the fact that as it is not stereotyped, only a limited number of copies can be made up. It includes the Notes and other matters of the eight volumes of the original Pictorial Edition (now a long time out of print), thoroughly revised. The Text of the Plays is beautifully printed, in a clear and new type, extending across the page, and the Illustrations are from the original Woodcuts; and it is hoped that the extraordinary cheapness of this edition will be the means of its finding a place in the Home Library of many lovers of the great Poet of our country.

"We have before said, that this is one of the best editions of the works of the immortal dramatist ever published. The size is convenient, the type and paper are of the best, the illustrations, though not profuse, are excellent, and the illustrative notes, it is sufficient to say, are by Mr. Charles Knight."—LANDS TIMES.

[APRIL, 1856.]

PRINCE CHARLES'S SOJOURN AT LEICESTER.

In 1604, Charles, Duke of York, subsequently the unfortunate King Charles the First; then a puny unhealthy child of four years of age, was brought to London from Scotland in the care of Lord Fyvie, afterwards Earl of Dunfermline. On his way hither, he passed through Leicester, and the borough manuscripts record the following notices of his entertainment by the town authorities.

The first is a letter addressed to the Right Worshipful the Mayor, or in his absence to the Aldermen of the same.

Sr.—I ame to advertis you that on Wednesday the xvth of this instant, Duke Charles, the King's Mats. second sonne, with my Lo: of fyvie, Lo: Prædent of the Sessions in Skottland, who hath charge of his Grace, ent-endeth to bee at Lecester, whear thaye mean to rest Thursday all day, and on Friday after dinner to goe forwards on their jorneye, for wch cause theise are in his Mats. name to require you to make choyce of a sufficient house for the lodgine of the Dukes Grace with the Lo: Prædent, whear ther must be xij beddes, with all necessaries for a kytchene, and yt their bee iij hogsheads of beare layed in the same house, for the wch you shall have satisfaction; for pewter and linge, [linen] his Grace must bee furnished wth from you; before his cominge ther shalbee one sent for the makinge of p'vision, vnto whom I would, if hee find it nedfull, he maye have your assistance. Thus, not doutinge of yor care herein, I byd you hartelie fare well,

Yor lovinge frend,

JOHN CRANE.

from Worsop, the ix of August, 1604.

The Mayor immediately despatched a messenger to Sir William Skipwith, to procure the use of his town mansion for the Prince and his train, which being obtained, in accordance with long customary arrangements, the walls of the rooms were decorated with green boughs, and the floors strewn with rusicks and green leaves, for perfume and coolness during the warm weather. Pewter and linen were borrowed, and bedding and furniture were moved to Sir Thomas Skipwith's house, from the Recorder's chamber at the Town-Hall.

The Prince arrived on Wednesday the 15th, and during his stay, the Corporation presented to him and his retinue a banquet, or as we should now term it a dessert, with several gallons of sack and other wines and a sugar-loaf. Rhenish and claret wine was presented to Mr. Grimes, who had the charge of the king's horses, and twenty shillings were given to the King's trumpeters. The Prince remained until after dinner on Friday, and then departed for Dingley.

As on former occasions the attendants on royalty evinced the disposition to make the most of their opportunity, without respect to the rights of property, for these manuscripts record that after their departure the Corporation had to pay "for certain Flanders fruit dishes, which with divers sorts of banquetting dishes were sent to the Duke, but of which fruit dishes some of them were broken,* and the rest carried away by the Duke's officers and followers." A portion of the pewter and linen that had been borrowed for the Duke's use was also abstracted by the royal attendants, of whom Scott. (Fortunes of Nigel,) quoting from the proclamations of the period, terms them "a beggarly rabble," and "an importunate crowd of disrespectful suitors." Some one with singular audacity actually stole one of the bolsters belonging to the Recorder's bed!

Leicester, April 9.

WILLIAM KELLY.

* To many persons this extract from the borough records will afford much to interest them. The garniture for the bouffet and the table in England, was at this period, for the most part silver and pewter; gold and glass rarely, and both more for ornament than use. The richly embossed cream coloured ware, dishes and plates, with perforated borders, erroneously termed by most dealers, "Elizabethan ware," have no reference to that period; the English made pottery of that time, being black earthenware pots, in general use at ale houses, and commonly in domestic use—the red earthen pots, with a partial green glaze are ascribed to an earlier date. Oriental porcelain was then rarely to be found even on the tables of royalty—the deficiency was made up by importations from the continent, and the coarse stone bottle ware of Cologne; with the coarsely glazed dishes of Flanders, now more generally designated Delft ware, were brought into requisition, hence the appellation before made of "Flanders fruit dishes." By others, whose discernment has shown them the embossed ware is really not so early as the time of Elizabeth; it is asserted that they were manufactured at Stratford-le-Bow, in the reign of Anne, and hence obtained the distinction of "Queen's ware." This assertion is, however, as vague as the former, they are from the Staffordshire potteries, some of it, early in the last century; and the characteristics of the earlier fabric will be perceptible by the dark coarse colour of the clay. It was not till the aspiring energy of Josiah Wedgwood, so far improved the fineness and colour of this cream coloured manufacture that soon after her marriage he obtained the patronage of Queen Charlotte, when in compliment to her he named it "Queen's ware," and multiplied an infinity of articles in pottery of all denominations, forms and sizes, for the most part impressed with his name.—ED.

OXFORDSHIRE HISTORICAL MEMORANDA.

A correspondent (G. H. Barnett, Esq.) having kindly forwarded some original papers pertaining to the manor of Glympton, for selection of memoranda for "Current Notes," the following extracts have been considered as affording some interest.

The first, an autograph letter of Sir John Sedley, Knt. and Bart., sheriff of Kent, 1621. He married Elizabeth, only daughter and at length heir of Sir Henry Savile, Knt., Provost of Eton College. The letter addressed to Mr. Wheat, relates to the Sedley property in Glympton, and to an annuity on Mrs. Pollard's life, the particulars of which Sir John Lentall knoweth punctually. He adds—

Your seruauant can giue you some notice of my howse att Aylesford* which is the only commodious seate in England; and I am very willinge to sell it: if a wiseman, whoe is not very avaritious vew it: I knowe he will have it. Thus commendinge my best respects vnto you, I rest your very louinge frende, JOHN SEDLEY.

This 14 Nou: Anno doi. 1633.

Charles the First, in May, 1634, issued writs to the ports and maritime counties, for the providing a fleet for maintaining the sovereignty of the Narrow Seas. This affair of the ship-money was the commencement of the King's troubles; and the writs, in 1635, were enlarged and extended to the inland as well as the maritime counties. These created a general disgust, and were everywhere opposed, although the entire sum purposed to be levied by these writs amounted but to 236,000*l*. The following is the substance of the paper addressed to the Sheriff of Oxford:

Instructions from the Privy Council to the High Sheriff of Oxford, dated from Whitehall ye 12th of August, 1635; requiring him, the Mayor, and Head officers of the Corporate Towns in Oxfordshire to assess themselves for the raising of 3500*l*., the charges for providing a ship of 350 tons, to be furnished with men, munitions, tackle, victual, and other requisites to be set forth for the safeguard of the Seas and the defence of the Realme, at the charges of the said County. The Privy Council suggested the assessments to be thus—the Cytie of Oxford may well beare one hundred pounds; Henley, sixtie pounds; Banburie, fortie pounds; Chippinge Norton, thirtie pounds; Burford, fortie pounds; Woodstocke, twentie pounds, and the residue to be assessed upon the rest of the County, according to their judgment.

The following relates to the mischiefs caused by the conflicting powers of commanders among the Royalists.

Diuers complaints have been this day made, amongst others one by Mr. Wheat of this county, that the carts bringing in provisions of corne and other victualls for the mayntenance of the Garrison here, at Oxford, are taken for other employments, contrary to the King's express agreement and proclamation. The cart-takers and others who it concerneth, are desired to take this into their consideration, and what preiudice this may bring to the King's most importune service at this time and in this place.

As might be supposed, the provisions and forage for the army would greatly impoverish the county, so, in the following paper, the parishes of Glympton and Kidlington declare their inability to comply with the requisition made on them.

To ye Chief Comander of his Maties Forces at Godstow.

Whereas we haue receiued a Warrant this present Monday from the High Constable of Wootton Hundred; These are to lett you understand that since the 28th of May last we have been so overburdened with his Maties forces of horse and dragoons vnder the Comand of Prince Maurice, the Lord Cleueeland, the Lord Wayntworth; and last the Lord Wilmott and the Lord Wayntworth, our charges being so great for theyr entertainment, that we are vtterly disabled to prouide Sustenance for our poore families, except we may haue reliefe from some neighbouring towns which haue not quartered att this time; besides our store of wheate and mault, which shoulde haue kepte our houses till haruest, they haue spent and wasted vpon theyr horses and carried away: and immediately vpon theyr departure came the parliament forces who swept the remainder. Wherefore, We do most earnestly request that we may be freed and excused from the Charge imposed vpon vs by this Warrant, and so soone as God shall enable vs, we shalbe ready and willing to do the best we can for the supplying of his maties souldiers.

A receipt, dated June 5, 1657, acknowledges twenty shillings having been paid by William Wheate, Esq. for a license for retailing wines in the parish of Glympton, in the Hundred of Woodstock. The rent for this license was for the half year ending Dec. 25, 1656. The yearly license was charged at forty shillings, receiveable by the agents for granting wine licenses, for the use of his Highness and the Common Wealth.

Tobacco during the time of the Commonwealth was, under a certain penalty, allowed to be grown in England, but at length was interdicted; the prohibition continued after the restoration, but the mandates against

* The Sedley family were seated at Aylesford, in Kent. Sir William Sedley, of the Friars in Aylesford, Knt., was created a baronet, May 22, 1611. He purchased from Sir John Gerrard, Knt., Lord Mayor of London, 1601, the manor of Southfleet; hence his son, Sir John, on inheriting both houses, was desirous of disposing of the latter. He was, however, unsuccessful, as Sir Charles Sedley, his son, was born at Aylesford in 1639. He married Catharine, daughter of John Earl Rivers, and from this marriage was an only daughter, Catharine, who became the mistress of King James the Second, eternised in Dr. Johnson's maledictory line—

And Sedley cursed the form that pleased a King.

Sir Charles Sedley, the dramatist and wit, died August 20, 1701, when the title of Aylesford and Southfleet became extinct.

Sir John Sidley, or Sedley, died August 13, 1638, probably at Southfleet. The baptismal register at Aylesford dates only from 1653.

its culture appear to have fulminated with but little effect, and the following Order from the Privy Council, addressed To our very loving freind y^e High Sheriffe of y^e County of Oxford; will possibly be perused with some interest.

After our hearty Comendacōns, His Mat^y being wearied with continuatō Complaints, That notwithstanding the frequent Directions and Commands of this Board from time to time (amongst others) to the Sheriffe of the County of Oxford requiring their care and industry in the destroying all the Plantacōns of Tobacco in their respective Counties (which are soe strictly grounded upon the Act of Parliament, prohibiting the Planting, setting or sowing of Tobacco in England, and his Mat^y's proclamations) yet by renewed Informacōns, cannot but observe his Clemency abused, and the stubborne Spirits of non-Conformists improved, And that contrary to his Royal Commands they continue in digging up new grounds, and the people resolved to persist in their disobedience of planting this yeare; which upon deliberate Consultacōn evidently appears will tend to the great prejudice of his Mat^y's forraigne plantations and customes, and hindrance of the Navigation of this Kingdome. Of which insolence and contempt his Mat^y is very sensible; And therefore hath Comanded us to will and require you the now Sheriffe of the County of Oxford, That forthwith without any manner of Connivance or favour to any person whatsoever, you cause all such Tobacco soe planted, sett, sowed, curing or cured, within the said County of Oxford to be burnt, plucked up, and utterly destroyed, according as by the said Act, his Mat^y's proclamation, and our former Letters is enjoined; And we doe also require and authorize you, and hereby Comand you to be ayding and assisting to Clement Dowle, Esq., Collector of his Mat^y's Customes in the port of Gloucester, and to such other person or persons as hee shall thinke fitt to imploy in the destroying of such Tobacco in that County, according to the tenor of our Comission to him given in that behalfe, And so not doubting of your more than ordinary Care herein, Wee bid you farewell.

From the Court at Whitehall the 20th of June 1666.

CHARLES THE FIRST AT CARISBROOKE CASTLE.

Some years since I sketched the window within the ruins of Carisbrooke Castle, from which the King in 1648, vainly attempted to escape; and forward it as an illustration, with some references to contemporaries respecting that event.

Sir Thomas Herbert simply mentions that the King, from some aggravations, designed an escape, horses being provided near the castle, and a vessel made ready for his transportation, but by a corrupted corporal in the garrison took not effect.* Ashburnham appears to have suggested the King's escapement, if he would engage some person to assist him out of the castle to the water-side, where a boat would be ready to receive him; with horses at Netley Park, to convey him to the place, where a ship was provided to carry him off.† Ashburnham states the fact, that the King, by putting his head forward, instead of sideways, through the bars of the window (shewn in the vignette), mistook the way of measure, according to the rule, that where the head can pass the body may; by which error, when he attempted to pass, he stuck fast; and being in great extremity, he, with long and painful struggles, got back again without notice by any man, but him who waited to attend him, had he, by means of the window, lowered himself down. Clarendon, in his manuscripts, has two relations, one in accordance with the preceding, which was suppressed in all editions of his "History of the Rebellion," prior to 1826; the other is a totally different version; that the King had a file and a saw to enlarge the aperture for his escape, which he laboured to effect; but on resolving to go forth, discovered more persons than he suspected were privy to his purpose, and so shut the window and retired to his apartment. Clarendon here affecting to treat the King's being "stuck fast" in the window as a mere fiction ‡

Among the letters between Colonel Hammond and the Committee at Derby House, one dated April 6, 1648, refers particularly to the King's attempt about a fortnight before, and that his 'breast was so big the bar would not give him passage;' and that aqua fortis had been sent from London to assist the King in moving a bar as an obstacle. Another letter, dated April 15, details the King's purposes with the aqua fortis; but by another, dated April 22, it is stated the aqua fortis had been spilled by the way, by accident, but that a saw, for the royal use, had been taken from a plain fat man about four o'clock on the preceding day. The time assigned for the King's escape was May-day at night, but sooner if opportunity served.

Charles remained at Carisbrooke till December the first, in that year, when, by order of the army under Fairfax, he was taken to Hurst Castle, in Hampshire. Penzance, April 10. HENRY WILLIAMS.

THE LATE W. H. SCOTT, M.D., EDINBURGH.

Numismatic Science and its followers have sustained an irreparable loss in the late William Henry Scott, M.D., who died at Edinburgh, much lamented, on the fourth of October last, in his twenty-fourth year. It is difficult to imagine, how it was possible, in so short a life, to acquire so varied an amount of knowledge, as Dr. Scott possessed; but his mind from his earliest years was directed to historical and philological researches, which his never failing memory enabled him, whenever it was required, to embody and utilize with undeviating accuracy. His earliest perception of the use of Coins in verifying history, and tracing the progress of society, was perseveringly followed amid all the delays and interruptions of impaired health and a toilsome course of education, to which a sense of duty alone induced him to adhere; but when free to exercise his great acquirements, he combined them with surprising adroitness in furtherance of a design, to which he had proposed to devote his life had Providence permitted it, by granting him time, but of this, he always spoke doubtfully, and with exemplary resignation.

Having decyphered thirty or more languages, with no other aid, than that derived from books, which he had collected with much acumen and sagacity; his purpose was to compare all the alphabets of ancient and modern times, and as far as possible, the languages, the remains of numismatic art and other records, with the general history of the world as deduced from a widely extended course of inferential reasoning based on known facts; nor is there any cause to doubt, that from his rapid powers of calculation and combination, he would have fully accomplished his self imposed task. Much of the partly arranged material remains, though frequently retarded by enervating sickness, but the master spirit that had conceived the glorious plan is no longer a dweller on the earth.

A member of the Royal Asiatic Society of France, and of other learned societies abroad and at home, he maintained an interesting and instructive correspondence with savans of many countries, most of whom were personally unknown to him, but whose invariable kindness made him feel a sincere confidence in their association and friendship; among these his unseen and kind correspondents in Ireland, Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Saint-hill were ever near his heart. One thing may fairly be said in his praise, when he received continental letters from persons usually considered as competent authorities, consulting him on abstruse points in oriental language or history, his diffidence was manifest, and his hesitation unequivocal; he was wanting in the presumption to direct or inform men so much older than himself; these were with him difficulties, not easily overcome, while on all occasions, the results of his erudition were, when asked for, freely at the service of his friends, and invariably advanced by him in the gentlest and kindest manner—qualities which never failed him, even in any of the more depressing vicissitudes of health.

As a Numismatist, Dr. Scott's character will be better understood, by the following encomium from his valued friend, Mr. Lindsay, so well known to the numismatic world.

"To exhibit a proper estimate of the acquisitions and powers of my lamented friend in the refinement of either science, Numismatology, or Archæology, would require far greater abilities than I possess, and a far more extensive acquaintance with the subjects so ably discussed by him. In the several branches of numismatic lore which relate to the British Islands, or to the continent of Europe, we have many eminent writers, sufficiently able and conversant to describe the coinages of their respective countries; and to appreciate the researches of their brother numismatists; but Dr. Scott had this singular merit, not only was he intimately acquainted with these ordinary facts; but he aimed at far more important objects, and his general success was such as to excite the admiration and approval of those who had themselves laboured in the embarrassments attending researches into the ancient coinages of Central Asia.

A wide field for the students of archæology has been presented in little more than twenty years by the labours and observations of Colonel Tod, Dr. Honigberger, Sir Alexander Burnes, Mr. Masson, and the French generals Allard and Ventura, in the northern provinces of India; and in the more western parts of Asia, by Messrs. Layard, Botta, Rich, Major Rawlinson, and others, but the majority of those persons being deficient in the knowledge or taste, constituting the indispensable requirements of a numismatist, their progress has been unsatisfactory and barren of results, yet, here it was, that the great talents of Dr. Scott, shone forth, and his zeal for his favourite study enabled him to take the lead, while his acquirements in the ancient and for the most part dead languages of Asia, withdrew as it were the veil that enshrouded the prospect we had so long and so ardently desired to explore; unhappily, notwithstanding what he had achieved, much remains to be elucidated and explained, and while grateful for the light with which the splendour of his researches has enriched us, his premature death leaves a hiatus which it is feared will long remain unsupplied.

I feel a degree of pleasure in directing the reader's attention to a slight abstract of what this highly talented writer has done for the advancement of numismatic science, and which a familiarity with his published papers, and an intimate correspondence of several years has brought before my immediate notice.

To the importance and number of his contributions the five last volumes of the Numismatic Chronicle, and the Continental periodicals devoted to similar pursuits bear ample testimony. In the fourteenth volume of the Numismatic Chronicle, is found :—

A descriptive catalogue of unpublished varieties of Greek, Colonial, Imperial and Roman Coins; replete with interest, and exhibiting in particular, several varieties of a rare class—the brass coins of the Kings of the Bosphorus.

In the fifteenth volume, two papers; one on African Regal coins, presenting much new and important information. The other, on the coins of Helena, the consort of the Emperor Julian, a paper of considerable interest.

In the later volumes, is a long and most masterly paper on the Coins of the Parthian Kings, affording much that is elucidatory on this interesting class of numismatic rarities.

An essay on a Colonial coin of Tyndaris in Sicily; and in the following number, an elaborate article on the Regal Coins of Mesopotamia. He has, in truth, been the first to treat successfully this portion of the early Asiatic coinage, and his premature decease has apparently arrested for some time at least, a satisfactory arrangement of this most important, but most difficult series.

His papers on the coins of Ceylon, and on a coin of Arsaces XXX., have severally their importance. He had also made considerable progress in classing and interpreting the legends on the coins of the Persian and other kings, tributary to the Parthians; a subject that may be said to have been scarcely attempted by any other writer. The subjects in Numismatology adopted by Dr. Scott, were for the most part those of which the Continental Numismatists have rarely availed themselves, few indeed have shown any ardour in the pursuit, and still fewer have achieved their enquiries successfully. The Bactrian, Indo-Scythian, Parthian, Sub-Parthian, and Sassanian coins, with some others of minor importance but equal difficulty, were all closely studied by him, and the discoveries he made gave ample promise that all these classes would eventually be by him most completely and satisfactorily elucidated.

In reference to his great knowledge of the earlier spoken but now dead languages of Asia, and their great utility in the illustration of the ancient coinage of that country, the preface to the second volume of Mr. Sainthill's Olla Podrida presents a corroborative fact. An inscription on certain Parthian coins had baffled all enquiry, on the part of the author of the Coinage of the Parthians, and the most distinguished oriental scholars had failed in rendering even the smallest scintilla of explanation—the work appeared, and in Mr. Sainthill's Olla Podrida, vol. II., pp. xxiii-xxv., will be found a letter from Dr. Scott, explaining most lucidly all that could be required; and so anxious was Mr. Sainthill to secure the credit of this interpretation to his friend, that the printing of the volume, then arrived at the conclusion, was delayed until the coins were engraved in illustration of Dr. Scott's reading.

Yet not solely to these numismatic enquiries were his erudition and inimitable qualities subservient; they comprehended almost every other department of archaeology; and however unquestionably important his printed papers are, his extensive correspondence with the principal numismatists of Europe, must no doubt be far more so, and if collected would present a series of discoveries, and many ingenious and sound observations of the highest degree of importance, and judging from the assistance I have derived from his correspondence, while compiling some of the works I have published, and others, I am yet engaged with, I can fully estimate the irreparable loss which those busied in the numismatic and archaeological science have yet to deplore."

A brother numismatist, and from infancy a fellow student with Dr. Scott, but now professionally employed in the East; on being apprised of his lamented friend's decease, wrote—"It is difficult as yet to realise fully the loss we have sustained. He was such an excellent man, so good a friend, and so wonderful a scholar. He was indeed one of those early lights whose very intensity precludes their burning long, and whom God has withdrawn to himself, as a guiding star of whom the world was scarce worthy. All his old friends and fellow students out here, are greatly grieved, as he was admired and beloved by all."

WEBER'S MANUSCRIPT OF OBERON.

It is stated, Baron Korff, the Director of the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg has made known, that the Manuscript of Oberon is in his keeping. It extends to two hundred and nineteen pages, text and notes together, and is wholly in Weber's autograph, and with a number of marginal memoranda, from which are derived the particulars, that the Opera was composed partly in Dresden, and partly in London, between 1825 and 1826; and that the overture was finished in London, April 9, 1826. Weber was then residing with Sir George Smart. What Baron Korff does not mention, is the important fact, that this original score was intended by Weber's widow and son to have been presented to her Majesty the Queen of England; but that the widow dying, the Staatsrath persuaded the surviving son to present it to the Emperor of Russia, after having it handsomely bound for that purpose, by holding out to him the expectation of a rich Imperial present in return. What the younger Weber really received was a few lines from Count Adlerberg, expressing the Emperor Nicholas's thanks for the present.

The late Mr. Hawes had Weber's original scores for Oberon in his possession, and he presented the writer with the first song in the second act, because it was complete on one sheet of paper.

WHAT HAS BEEN MAY BE AGAIN!

Upon the decease of Otho III., Emperor of Germany, Henry II. was elected his successor, and during his reign for twenty years, that is, from 1004 to 1024, the German clergy enriched and emboldened by the blind devotion to their interests of this bigoted monarch, began to assume an authority over the temporal affairs of the empire, paramount with his own; insomuch, that as their displeasure was dreaded by every prince in Germany, so also, was their friendship eagerly courted, and that influence in many respects predominated over the authoritative power of the Emperor. Memorably distinguished for this assumption of arrogance and audacity, was Meinwerk, bishop of Paderborn, of whom an historian of the eleventh century asserts—there was no meanness to which he did not descend in order to enrich his dioceses; and, whenever the Emperor refused to grant him what he demanded, he forcibly possessed himself of the object of his desires or requirement.

The Emperor being once on a visit to him, Meinwerk ordered all the ewes, then with young, which were to be found on his estates, to be killed, and a mantle made of the skins of the unborn lambs, which he placed on the shoulders of Henry, on his return from the bath. The Emperor, however, desired to have a better mantle, or one more fitting to his princely person; upon which, the bishop replied—I have stripped my poor bishopric, its clergy, and its farmers who derived their livelihood from their sheep, in order to clothe thee, and God will chastise thee, if thou do not make good the loss. The Emperor smiled, but shortly after bestowed upon him the valuable estate of Stein.

Henry, having once sent to the bishop for his inspection a costly vessel, Meinwerk caused it to be immediately melted, and the metal converted into a cup, which he consecrated on the altar. The Emperor having reproached him with the theft, the bishop answered, I have been guilty of no theft, but have piously consecrated to the service of God, that which was dedicated to feast thy avarice and pride, and if thou darest to take away this offering of my piety, thou wilt ensure thy own damnation.

Meinwerk, on another occasion, stole a costly robe out of the Emperor's chamber, and answered Henry's censure of that act by saying—It is fitter that this garment should be retained in the temple of God, than adorn thy mortal body: as for thy threats I despise them!

In something of the like spirit, the present head of the Church at Rome conducts his appropriations. Mazzini last month, forwarded fifty pounds to a friend in that city, but it was seized at the post office, and applied to the fund for raising a statue to the Immaculate Virgin!

AUTHORSHIP OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

The diffidence with which the opponents of the supposition that Sir Walter Scott was the author of the Waverley Novels have advanced their opinions, is both pleasing and natural, and there seems some likelihood that our own wishes would so far bear us, that we should exclaim with Sydney Smith—Oh! don't tell me of facts, I never believe facts! But we feel assured, on the other hand, that Sir Walter would himself never have opposed a free enquiry into the supposed authorship of the novels in question, and so conclude with a certain personage in 'Hard Times' to banish as far as possible feelings, and retain—nothing but facts.

Did we not know that Sir Walter Scott was a person of the strictest integrity and uprightness, his position as a gentleman and 'a Scotchman' would be, we conclude, sufficient guarantee for his word: and if his word is to be believed, the case runs against him. His assurance to Rogers that he was not the author, is supported by a statement still more corroborative, in Lockhart's Life. Not having this volume at hand* we quote from a transcript of the passage in Smith's Ramble in the Streets of London:—

Towards midnight the Prince called for a 'bumper' with all the honours to the 'Author of Waverley,' and looked significantly as he was charging his own glass, to Scott. Scott seemed somewhat puzzled for a moment, but instantly recovering himself, and filling his glass to the brim, said, 'Your Royal Highness looks as if you thought I had some claim to the honour of this toast. I have no such pretensions, but shall take good care that the real

* Vol. III, p. 343, to which the reader is referred, and doubtless the admission acknowledged, that the Prince Regent certainly checkmated his guest, the author of Waverley, 'Walter, my man, for ance.'

Our correspondent and others who imagine Scott NOT to have been the author of the Waverley Novels, are certainly in error. The writer for some years, commencing in 1820, was the forger in London for many of the books on witches and warlocks, and matters relative to Scottish History, more particularly in reference to the Pretenders, which Scott required for his subsequent publications. These requirements were invariably made to the late Daniel Terry, and from him to the writer. A manuscript that had been forwarded to Scott, was in part used in the Pirate. The writer who had no doubt as to the authorship of the Novels, jocularly hinted to Terry, Can I now have any doubt as to the writer? He made no reply, and 'Surly' was as dead as unconcerned as if not spoken to. The fact is, Scott enjoined secrecy to all of his associates, and they maintained his faith admirably, though attempts were frequently made to unkenel him, in a variety of ways; at length confession was forced upon him, and he admitted himself to be the culprit. His previous assertions that he was 'not the author,' are to be looked upon as so many 'trading white lies,' and there are sufficient evidential facts, that not only did he up to that point endeavour to maintain his anonymous character, but pseudonyms were proposed, and only forborne on the advisedly steady remonstrances of those persons upon whose better judgment he relied. Ed.

Simon Pure hears of the high compliment that has now been paid him.' He then drank off his claret, and joined with a stentorian voice in the cheering, which the Prince hims-If timed.

The first of the Waverley Novels appeared in [1815,] the same year that the 'Lord of the Isles,' the author's last great poem, was given to the public. If it be indeed the work of an author hitherto unknown,' so wrote the critic in the Edinburgh Review, 'Mr. Scott would do well to look to his laurels.'

And let it be remembered, as a note worthy of fact, that even during the lifetime of Sir Walter, it was hinted, and believed by many, that his brother was the 'real Simon Pure,' and not himself.

In these hasty notes we have but strung together a few facts that may be useful to any one who shall with time and opportunity take up the gauntlet for, or against 'the Wizard of the North.' T. H. PATTISON.

THE LASS OF RICHMOND HILL.

In the recently published Memoirs of Mrs. Fitzherbert, by the Hon. Charles Langdale, it is stated she was born July 26, 1756, and at the time of her second widowhood, was residing on Richmond Hill, when she became the object of the Prince's attentions; and on the authority of Lord Stourton, it was at this conjuncture that her beauty was celebrated in a popular song, in which allusion was thus made to the addresses of the heir apparent:—

I'd crowns resign to call her mine,
Sweet lass of Richmond-hill.

This was a flourish of fancy, though it obtained a general currency, and the song most ridiculously has been attributed to the poetical capabilities of the Prince. A negative has been placed on the assertion by the claim of the grandson of the lady upon whom it appears to have been written. The writer it is said was Leonard McNally, born September 27, 1752, and the song was written by him in compliment to Miss Ianston, the daughter of Mr. William Ianston, of Richmond-hill, Seybourne, in Yorkshire; and who became the wife of McNally at St. George's, Hanover Square, on January 16, 1787.

Leonard McNally commenced as a dramatist with the comic opera, entitled, The Ruling Passion, performed at Dublin in 1779. Eight other pieces by him were represented at Covent Garden Theatre, from 1782 to 1786. Supposing him, upon his marriage, to have retired to Dublin professionally, as a barrister-at-law, the music of the words of the Lass of Richmond Hill, was composed as those of 'a new song,' by James Hook, the father of Dean Hook and the late Theodore Hook; and sung by Incedon at Vauxhall, in June or July 1789, where it was most popularly received.

Presuming Miss Ianston to have been 'the Lass of Richmond Hill,' Mrs. McNally died in Dominick Street, Dublin, in September, 1795; and Mr. McNally's marriage with Miss Louisa Edgeworth, daughter of the then deceased Rev. Robert Edgeworth, of Issaid, in the county of Longford, took place in April 1800.

Hartlepool, April 12. JOHN E. ROBSON.

In addition to the list printed in Current Notes, pp. 15-17, the following varieties have also come under my notice. They are principally taken from coins which were found at Tutbury, and passed into the hands of the late Mr. Wolston Roberts, of Derby. I must express my thanks to those gentlemen who have added to my previous list, but as noted by the editor, W. F. M.'s list contains many of Edward the Second's pennies, an account of which I hope shortly to send to your valuable publication.

ANCIENT CROSSES IN WEST OF CORNWALL.

The recent publication of Mr. J. T. Blight's highly illustrated volume on the Greek, Transition, Latin and Gothic Crosses; with the Celtic, Druidical, and Roman remains in the West of Cornwall, is one of those pleasurable books which ever and anon brighten the path of the antiquary and the archæologist. Drawn from the immediate objects as still seen, and engraved by the same artist, the illustrations are entitled to the highest commendation for their graphic resemblance to the originals, and are singularly valuable in aiding the reference of writers on these subjects. There are eighty pictorial representations, and in several, the positions of the objects as placed by the roadside or otherwise, are admirably portrayed, and opportunely recalling the object to the remembrance of the traveller in days which have past.

With much truth it may be observed, the ancient crosses, still so numerous in the western part of Cornwall, have been hitherto generally neglected by the antiquary; while, from having been formed of the enduring granite, many are almost as perfect now as when they were first placed on their respective sites. It is possible they may have been equally numerous in other parts of the county, but the gradual occupation of the waste lands has caused their almost entire extinction. Some of them have been used as building materials, which has been the case more generally of late years. Many have undergone mutilation by ignorant or mischievous persons, and in this neighbourhood, the mutilated parts of many may be seen built into hedges.

Adopted in the early ages by the Christians as an emblem of their faith, the Cross is believed to have been introduced with Christianity into Britain so early as the year 60. Constantine the Great, having in 311 embraced the Christian religion, is said to have set up in many places the Cross as a symbol, and became sole master of the Roman Empire in 323. The taunts of the people becoming, however, offensive to him, he in 330, quitted Rome for Byzantium, and named the city Constantinople. The conversion of the Irish is said to have followed the landing of St. Patrick in Ireland in 432; and so rapid was the promulgation of the doctrine of the Cross, that in 490, Ireland was named the Isle of Saints. Cornwall, it is stated, received its first missionaries from Ireland, and it is not improbable that some of the crosses yet remaining, were set up in this district so early as the sixth century. The Cornish Britons continued separately distinct from the Saxons, to the period of the Conquest, when their lands were appropriated by the Norman chiefs; and it is probable that the public monuments remained undisturbed and unprofaned until later times, when frequent changes occurred in the proprietary of the soil.

The Knights of St. John, an order instituted in 1099, bore a cross, black upon white. Hugh de Payens, the first Superior of the Knights' Templars, visited England in 1128, when many grants of land in Cornwall were made to that fraternity, and the symbol of martyrdom, the blood-red cross, of the same form as that worn by the order of St. John, was granted to the Templars, by Pope Eugenius III., at Paris in 1146, on the commencement of the second Crusade. Both Orders held lands in Cornwall, and the peculiar form of their cross, which occurs in some few instances in the county, may possibly have been introduced by them.

Crosses were used from an early period of the Christian era, to the time of the Reformation, and their style varied in accordance with the different periods, from the most simple or even rude forms, to others more chaste and elegant. The Latin form of the cross continued in Western Europe until 1050, when began the schism between the Latin and Greek churches, and during this contention, the Greek crosses in this neighbourhood are generally supposed to owe their introduction.

Crosses served sometimes to denote a place of sepulture, or to mark the resting places of the corpse on the way to its interment. The churchyard crosses were not always monumental, for occasionally one was placed near the south or chief entrance to the church, suggestive of due preparation previously to entering the sacred building. Occasionally congregations were addressed by the priest, and proclamations made from such crosses. The crosses set up in market places had much the same purposes; from these, proclamations of war or peace, or any other matter of general interest were made known in purport to the people generally. The view of one, as it formerly stood in the market place at Penzance is here shewn.*

Crosses on the highways served as prayer-stations, and as indices or guide-posts to the different baptistries, oratories, or other religious foundations: many of them were of great public utility, being erected on dreary moors, where there were no other indications to direct the sojourner on his way. At these stations, the rich traveller often deposited alms for the succour of the poor or distressed wayfarer who might follow him.

Many crosses still stand near the sites of churches or chapels which have long since been destroyed, and of which no other vestiges remain. All these varieties and their peculiarities, are severally graphically defined, and in reference to the divisions which have been adopted, that is, the Greek, the Transition, and the Latin Crosses, the author observes, these are in many instances not free from objection, and must of course be to some extent arbitrary; since several which have a Greek cross on one face, have a Latin or Transition cross on the other; and many which now have four equal parts, like the Greek cross, have evidently been broken off from the elongated shaft of the Latin: some indulgence is therefore solicited for the attempt at identification.

* The cross, in height five feet, and in breadth two feet three inches, was moved in 1829 from the centre of the market-place. The following inscription—was then found near the base, on the reverse side.

CORBEL IN BRECHIN CATHEDRAL TOWER.

Brechin was created a bishoprick in 1150, by David the First, King of Scotland, who also founded the church, which was built by the side of the celebrated Round Tower of that place, but the time is not exactly known; no record remains of the progress of the work, or that it was finished. At the time of the Reformation, induced by John Knox, the infuriated zealots sternly adopted the advice of their leader, "to pull down the trees, and cause the rooks to fly away," and Brechin shared the fate of many of the old Popish fanes in Scotland: it was nearly destroyed, but the remains shew that in its palmy days the church of Brechin had been an edifice of considerable extent and of much elegance in its construction. The ruins of the chancel still present some beautiful examples of the early English style of Gothic architecture. The west window, approaching in similarity to the flamboyant tracery of the famous window in the church of St. Ouen at Rouen, is yet in good preservation; but the principal door of entrance, immediately below that window, has suffered sadly from the storms of ages, and the reed enrichment, of which at one time it could boast, and was supposed to be an unique feature in Gothic architecture, has almost wholly crumbled away.

The nave, at the time of the Reformation, was appropriated as a parish church, but in a sorry attempt at some misnamed improvements, in 1806, the old aisles and cloisters were wholly demolished.

The square tower, or belfry, is at the north-west corner of the church, and with its octagonal spire, one hundred and twenty-eight feet in height, is a beautifully proportioned and imposing object. The bartizan, or top of the tower, is ascended by a spiral staircase, and the tower itself may be said to be divided into several compartments. The lowermost, having a groined roof, the arches springing from illuminated corbels terminating in a plain circle, is the meeting place of the presbytery, and session of Brechin; and in the upper part the great bell is suspended. In the latter compartment rises the base of the spire of the tower, and the four corbels, on which the base rests, bear beautiful carvings in high relief. The sculptures are about seven inches in height, and from ten to twelve inches in length. Three of the ornaments are floral, and bear no particular peculiarity, excepting the broad and effective manner in which they are executed; but the fourth, here represented, is more remarkable—

It abuts from the north-east corner of the tower, and, as will be seen, represents—a whimsical freak in design—a dog with its tail strangely turned over the back, picking a bone, and supported by a ram's head and horns—it is the only corbel of this description I have yet seen.

A deed in the Registrum Ecclesie Cathedralis de Brechin, now in the press, may be said to afford some data for believing that the square tower or steeple, in which this singular corbel is found, was either built or repaired by Patrick de Leuchars, bishop of Brechin, from 1354 to about the year 1373, and who for sometime held the office of Chancellor of Scotland. This is the only deed having any reference to the building or restoring any part of the Cathedral. Possibly some reader of Current Notes may have seen a similarly devised corbel elsewhere; if so, the date of the building in which it appears might be useful in ascertaining the exact period of the erection of the square tower at Brechin, which, notwithstanding the passing notice in the deed referred to, is as yet an unauthenticated surmise.

THE TREATY OF PEACE PEN.

So, after all the high-flown descriptions of eagle-winged pride, that the pen with which the Plenipotentiaries were to sign the Articles of Peace was being richly jewelled by the jeweller of the Emperor's household, the incident simply solves itself into these particulars.

The pen with which the Treaty of Peace was signed, was made from a quill taken from the wing of an eagle, at the Jardin des Plantes. Immediately after the signatures, it was placed on a sheet of white paper, and the seals of all the Powers represented at the Congress, accompanied by the signatures of the Plenipotentiaries, were attached about it, and below it was written the attestation:

I certify that this pen was taken by me from the Imperial Eagle, at the Jardin des Plantes, and that it served for the signature of the Treaty of Peace of the 30th of March, 1856.

CLERICAL BELL FOUNDER.

In Bowen's Manuscript Collections for Shropshire, among Gough's Topographical books, deposited in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, is the following extract from the register of Thomas Botelar, vicar of Wenlock, in the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary and Elizabeth.

1546. May 26, buried out of tow tenements in Mardfold-street, next St. Owen's well, Sir William Corvehill, priest of the service of our lady in this church, which 2 tenements belonged to the said service; he had them in his occupation in part of his wages, which was viij marks and the said houses in an ov'plus. He was well skilled in geometry, not by speculation but by experience: could make organs, clocks and chimes; in keruing in masonry, and silk-weaving and painting, and could make all instruments of musick, and was a very patient and gud man, borne in this borowe, and somtyme monk in the monastery;* two brethren he had, called dōpne John, monk in said monastery; and Sir Andreu Corvehill, a secular priest, who died at Croydon in Surry; on whose soule God haue mercy.

All this country had a great loss of sir William, for he was a good bell founder and maker of frames.

* Wenlock olim Winnicas was first a nunnery erected about 680 by St. Milburga, daughter to King Merwald, who presided over it. It was destroyed by the Danes, but restored by Leofric, Earl of Chester, in the time of King Edward the Confessor; but being abandoned, and falling into decay, it was in 1080 rebuilt and endowed for a prior and convent of Clunia monks, by Roger of Montgomery, Earl of Arundel, Chichester, and Shrewsbury. It was dedicated to St. Milburg, who was said to have been buried here; and upon the dissolution of all monastical institutions in 1537, was granted by King Henry VIII. to Augustine de Augustinis. William 'somytyme monk,' appears on the suppression to have conformed to the new faith.

BIBLICAL QUOTATIONS BY SHAKESPEARE.

Shakespeare in his Dramas has frequently quoted from the Bible; take the following as examples:—

Rude am I in speech. Othello, Act i. sc. 3.

But though I be rude in speech. 2 Corinthians, ch. xi. v. 6.

Shew his eyes and grieve his heart. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 2.

Consume thy eyes and to grieve thine heart. 1 Samuel, ch. ii. v. 33.

Lighted fools the way to dusty death. Macbeth, Act v. sc. 3.

Thou hast brought me into the dust of death. Psalms xxii. 15.

Mistake me not for my complexion,
The shadow'd livery of the burning sun. Merchant of Venice, Act ii. sc. 1.

Look not upon me, because I am black, because the sun has looked upon me. Song of Solomon, ch. i. v. 6.

I took by the throat the circumcised dog, and smote him thus. Othello, Act v. sc. 2.

I caught him by his beard, and smote him. 1 Samuel, ch. xvii. v. 35.

Let this pernicious hour stand aye accursed in the calendar. Macbeth, Act iv. sc. 2.

Cursed his day; let it not be joined unto the days of the year. Job, ch. iii. v. 6.

We will die with harness on our back. Macbeth, Act v. sc. 5.

Nicanor lay dead in his harness. 2 Maccabees, ch. xv. v. 28.

Possibly some of your readers may be both able and willing to add to the above passages?

PEPYS. In some notices of Parliamentary representatives, 1677, it is stated, SAMUEL PEPYS, the member for Castle-Rising, was originally a taylor, then serving-man to Lord Sandwich, now Secretary to the Admiralty; has got by passes and other illegal ways 40,000*l*.

ANGEL'S VISITS.—In what writer or poem occurs the line commencing—

Like angel's visits few and far between?

Cheltenham, April 3.

H. S. H.

In Campbell's Pleasures of Hope, in the second part. The lines are—

What though my winged hours of bliss have been,
Like Angel's visits, few and far between.

Campbell, however, seems to have been indebted for this poetical expression to Blair, in whose admirable poem entitled the Grave, first printed in 1743, are the lines—

— The good he scorn'd

Stalked off reluctant like an ill used ghost,
Not to return; or if it did, its visits

Like those of Angels, short and far between.

English Poets, by Chalmers, 1810, vol. xv. p. 67, col. 2.

THE BLIND MAN'S COMPLAINT.

An old manuscript in my possession, has with many more, the following lines:—

While night's black muffler hoodeth up the skies,
The silly blind man misseeth not his eyes;
But when the day summons to worke againe,
His night eternall then hee doth complaine,
That he goes groping, and his hand, alas!
Is faine to guide his foot and guard his face.

They are margined thus—Du Bartas, Impost., page 263. Are they original, or from any translation of Du Bartas?

H. J. LITTLE.

These lines commence a simile in The Imposture, a poem printed in Du Bartas His Divine Weekes and Workes, translated by Josuah Sylvester, 1641, folio, p. 94, col. 1.

Letter from Richard Grenville, first Earl Temple, K.G., but second in the Earldom of Buckingham; addressed to the Right Honourable Hans Stanley.

Norwich, March ye 8th, 1768.

My dear Stanley. You will excuse my reminding you of your kind engagement to lend me a thousand pounds from Lady-day for six months. If not inconvenient I would wish it might be paid into Mr. Drummond's hands, and that his receipt might be accepted as a voucher till my return to London.

My Friends have made a handsome figure in our County Battle; Mr. Coke would have succeeded as well as Sir Edward Astley, if he had been supported by those from whom he had an indisputable right to expect it.

An account which has just reached me of Lady Buckingham's having brought me a third daughter, a circumstance which distresses me upon account of my own feelings, and much more from my knowledge of her's, will I hope apologise for my not adding more than that assurance, which flows naturally from my pen, of the regard and affection, with which I am,

Your most faithful and obedient servant,

BUCKINGHAM.

Lady Buckingham was Anne, da. and coheir of Thomas Chambers, of Hanworth, co. Middlesex, Esq.; a lady of some celebrity, whose poems were printed in 1754, at Strawberry Hill. The Earl, born in 1711, died without surviving issue, Sept. 11, 1779.

THE "FORGET ME NOT" FLOWER.

Bishop Mant gives the traditionary creed for the name of this flower. Where are the complete verses to be found, and by whom were they written?

Then the blossoms blue, to the bank he threw,
Ere he sank in the eddying tide;
And Lady I'm gone, thine own Knight true,
Forget me Not! he cried.

The farewell pledge the Lady caught,
And hence, as legends say—
The flower is a sign to awaken thought
Of friends who are far away.
